WHERE TO NEXT.

Horace Greeley's advice to "go west" has already become a misnomer, as the west of his day has become the centre of to-day, and the far west that ends with our Pacific Coast is fast resolving itself into the heart of the country. Soon every available locality will be fully occupied, and the human family—metaphorically speaking—will sit down like Alexander and weep for new worlds to conquer. Already speculations are being made as to where fresh pastures can be found, and many are beginning to suggest that the dark continent of Africa may be the future locality to take the place of the "west." The civilization of that country is the accomplishment to be worked before such an end can be attained, and the principal factor in that civilization is the total suppression of the slave trade. This must be accomplished to make the change from barbarism to civilization.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If the importation of free wool and free broom corn into this country will be a benefit to the farmers who produce them, why will not the importation of sugar and rice also be a benefit to the planters of Louisiana and South Carolina who produce them. Pertinent questions of this kind should be considered upon their merits and not from political points of view.

It matters very little, as far as the settlement of the tariff issues are concerned, whether General Harrison is elected president or the choice of the people falls to Mr. Cleveland, but it matters a great deal to the country whether the policy of the government, that has placed the country in its present prosperous condition, shall be changed, and a new course of action adopted, as must inevitably be done if President Cleveland is re-elected.

with a knowledge of the African coasts; and as early as 1497 they took possession of the eastern shore by founding the colony of Mozambique. Whether in or about the year 1623 a Portuguese traveler did or did not catch a glimpse of Lake Nyassa is doubtful; but it is at least certain that since that time no Portuguese official, missionary, or trader has come near that region. The proposition of Cardinal Lavigerie, which has been indorsed by the Pope, is to insure such concerted action on the part of European powers that a crusade could be instituted against the Arab slave-traders who are now depopulating Africa. France has expressed her willingness to take measures toward suppressing the slave trade which is now being carried on between Pemba and Madagascar under the protection of the French flag. The African Lakes Company is making a determined stand against the Arab traders in the region made famous by the discoveries of Livingstone, and if Germany and Great Britain shall carry out their recent understanding and blockade the coast leading to the vast districts now infested by the Arabs a great check will have been put on the existing traffic. Nyassaland ought by all right to be considered as belonging to England. Germany's sphere of influence, owing to the concessions which have been made to her by the Sultan of Zanzibar, is of great extent and important not only geographically but also in regard to its commercial prospects. If Germany, therefore, should waive the question of her own inland interests and co-operate with Great Britain, the Zambesi, that great natural highway, could be opened up, and a pacific and civilizing influence would begin to spread throughout the whole country.
