HAVE YOU A COLD in the head which does not get better? Have you an excessive secretion of mucus or matter in the nasal passages which either must be blown from the nose or drop back behind the palate, or hawked or snuffed backward to the throat? Are you troubled by hawking, spitting, weak and inflamed eyes, frequent soreness of the throat, ringing or roaring in the ears, more or less impairment of the hearing, loss of smell, memory impaired, dullness or dizziness of the head, dryness or heat of nose? Have you lost all sense of smell? Have you a hacking cough? Have you dyspepsia? Is your breath foul? If so YOU HAVE THE CATARRH. Some have all these symptoms, others only a part. The leading symptom of ordinary catarrh is increased secretion of mucus of yellow or greenish colored matter.

Foul breath is caused by the decomposing secretions exuded from festering ulcers far back in the head; sometimes the membrane covering the bones is eaten away and the bones themselves gradually decay. Such cases are indeed objects of pity, as stench from corroding sores reveals the corruption within.

She was standing watching the parade, when a man appeared pointing a revolver at her and pulling the trigger, said: "There, take that." REMARKABLE TRAIN ACCIDENT.

The Czar's Train Wrecked but No One Killed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 31.—The official statement regarging the accident to the czar's train on Monday is as follows: The train containing the czar and czarina and suite left Tranoska at noon Monday and while passing through a deep gorge near Berke the train left the rails. At the time of the accident the czar and czarina were in the saloon carriage at breakfast. When the first carriage left the track the rest of the train oscillated, causing the succeeding carriage to keel over. The saloon carriage, although remaining on the track, was badly shattered and the roof fell in but rested on a portion of the sides, forming a shield for the occupants. It seems incredible that any of the occupants of the train should have escaped unhurt, but God protected the czar's family, who were taken from the debris uninjured. Some other occupants of the train received slight contusions. The only person severely injured is General Schentz, aid-de-camp to the czar.

DOLLAR A DAY HE REFUTED.

Affidavits of Strikers Refuting a Vile Campaign Slander.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct 31.—James N. Huston chairman of the Republican State Committee, has prepared a complete history of the "one dollar a day" campaign lie started and actively circulated by the Democrats against General Harrison. The lie first appeared immediately after the Chicago Convention, and was published by the Sentinel, the Democratic organ in Indianapolis. This was met by a challenge from the Indianapolis Journal, the leading Republican paper of Indiana, offering $1,000 for the proof that General Harrison ever made that remark or another of the same tenor. A check for $2,000 was sent to William H. English, once Democratic candidate for Vice President, and to Joseph E. McDonald, a Democratic ex Senator, to hold until the testimony was examined. Both refused the trust.

The next step in the circulation of the lie was the statement of one Edward F. Gould that he heard General Harrison make the statement. This was followed by an affidavit from one Schwartz reiterating the lie.

This was followed by a flood of affidavits from railroad men engaged in the strike which is alleged to have caused the remark, in which the lie was conclusively, emphatically and irrefutably made denying its truth. Among the affidavits is one of Patrick H. Jameson, who was at the meeting addressed by General Harrison at that time. Jameson swears that General Harrison said then that he did not believe the men were getting enough pay but talked to them very kindly and hoped justice would be done them. This affidavit was supported by others. R. S. Foster, Joseph R. Peery and Fred Kneiffer, all of whom declare positively that no such statement was made.

John T. Pressly, who was Sheriff of Marion county during the strike and for fourteen years previous to that time a fireman and engineer on the Bee Line railroad and a prominent member of the brotherhood, swears that General Harrison always expressed himself in favor of higher wages for workingmen. W. I. Lokue, Henry McPeck, Alpheus Knight, Thomas W. Christain, William S. Elliot and others, all strickers, emphatically deny that General Harrison ever used the expression.

The most complete refutation is, however, a declaration by Gould himself, who told John R. Robinson, Albert Hoffman, John A. Coulter, Silas H. Brattain, John R. Bellis and David E. Williams, all of whom swear to it, that he never heard General Harrison make the statement attributed to him.

Prudence! Prudence!

In medication, as in aught else, prudence should be our guide. Yet thousands cast it to the winds. Every new nostrum finds its patrons, the medical empires of every false school have their gulls. Every change in the gamut of humbug is rung successfully—for a time at least—the notes being furnished by the credulous. In happy contrast to the many advertised impostures of the day stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, now in the third decade of popularity, approved and recommended by physicians, indorsed by the press of many lands, sought and prized by invalids everywhere. It is an ascertained specific for and preventive of malarial diseases chronic indigestion, and liver complaint and constipation.

LOST AT SEA.

Nearly a Hundred Atlantic Steamers Sunk in Fifty Years.

Harper's Weekly.

From the date of the disappearance of the ill-fated President down to the sinking of the Geiser the other day, the annals of Atlantic travel are marked thickly with episodes of disaster, suffering and death. Some of the finest and staunchest steamships that have ever been built figure on the long sad roll of the lost. Some of them have been run down and sunk in a collision, like the Arctic, the Ville du Havre and the Geiser; others have been destroyed by fire, like the Amazon, the Sheridan and the Austria; many have rushed headlong on the rocks in a fog or a dark night, like the Schuler, the Mosel and the Atlantic; a few have foundered at sea in a gale or a cyclone, like the City of Vera Cruz; others have been wrecked on sunken ice, like the Canadian, while several, like the President, Pacific and the magnificent City of Boston, have mysteriously disappeared leaving not a trace behind to indicate the cause of their loss.

It is certainly a startling fact that in the space of forty-seven years since the unfortunate President left New York, March 11, 1841, never again to appear to mortal ken, nearly a hundred fine steamers have been utterly destroyed while on their passage across the Atlantic.

Of these eight after leaving port mysteriously disappeared and have never since been heard of, ten were run down in collisions, five were burned, one ran on sunken ice in the Straits of Belle Isle, another went down in a field of ice, three foundered in mid-ocean, and the remainder of the melancholy list were those of America or on island rocks off them

Fully ten of these ran in foggy weather on the shores of Nova Scotia or New Foundland on their way westward—a sufficient warning, it might be supposed, to captains to give a wide berth to these latitudes. Only one, the Iowa, an American steamer, was wrecked on the French coast, near Cherbourg, in 1864.

It is generally supposed that shipwrecks are caused by the rage of the elements, but of all the vessels that went ashore only three or four appear to have directly suffered in consequence of heavy weather. Miscalculations as to distances run and course steered clouded skies, dark nights and, more than all, dense fogs, were the primary causes of the disasters.

Comparatively few of these shipwrecks occurred without serious loss of life, at least 5600 persons having perished among the passengers and crew who were on board. When the Atlantic was wrecked on Meagher's Head, off the fatal Nova Scotian coast, in 1873, no less than 562 persons were drowned. With the City of Glasgow 480 people disappeared: with the President, 120; with the Pacific, 186, and with the City of Boston, the last of the missing steamships, 191. When the Austria was burned in mid ocean 470 lives were lost; with the Arctic, 323; with the Anglo-Saxon, 372; with the Ville du Harve, 226; with the Schiller 311. The destruction of other vessels caused the loss of fewer lives than the vessels named, as happily fewer passengers were on board; but with several on the list from 100 to 200 beings perished. In 1873 no less than six large steamships were wrecked, run down, or disappeared, the most disastrous losses being those of the Atlantic and the Ville du Havre a total of 788 lives.
