GENERAL NEWS.

English Interference in the Samoan Difficulty.

DEMOCRATS RESIGN FROM OFFICE

The Bureau Officers Have Already Begun to Yield Up their Positions—The Panama Canal.

The Herald's Special Despatches. BERLIN, March 7.—The Boersen Zeitung says: The United States has proposed to refer the portion of the Samoan question concerning Germany and the United States alone to arbitration. Germany is not averse to this, but adheres to the opinion that the conference in Berlin should settle the questions involving Germany, Great Britain and the United States.

YIELDING UP THE OFFICES. A number of Democratic Resigns and Others Will Follow.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—First Comptroller Durham, commissioner of the inter-state commission, and Fourth Auditor Shelly have tendered their resignations, to Secretary Windom, to take effect at his convenience. Treasurer Hyatt will tender his resignation to the president at the first opportunity. It is said that Windom has asked Case Coon, first assistant secretary of the treasury, to resume his old position. It is expected that most of the democratic bureau officers will tender their resignations.

BRITISH INTERFERENCE IN THE SAMOAN DIFFICULTY.

LONDON, March 7.—In the house of commons to-day the parliamentary secretary for foreign offices said that the government had not heard of any truce being established between the German consul at Apia and Mataafa. England, he said, had no right to interfere in the matter. He said no doubt that Germany had treated Mataafa well.

Servia Wants Peace.

BELGRADE, March 7.—The regents of Servia have issued a proclamation, in which they declare they will endeavor to cultivate friendly relations with all the powers and inaugurate a constitutional regime, place the finance of the country upon a sound basis and maintain order.

The Panama Canal.

PARIS, March 7.—The cabinet has decided that the government will reply to the interpolation, to be submitted in the chamber, regarding the Panama canal bill, and to give details of such action until it is decided upon as to the international character of the question.

An Improvable Metal.

The alloy known as Deita Metal, which was patented some five or six years ago by Alexander Dick, a Dane, is simply brass with a large percentage of zinc and a small quantity of iron, or some similar metal like manganese or aluminium. In the proportion of sixty parts of copper to forty parts of zinc, with a few hundredths of other metal, the alloy is stated to be a most interesting product on account of the readiness with which it may be forged and stamped at a red heat of its steel-like strength and toughness, of its insalterability in the atmosphere, and its low cost—said to be not greater than that of ordinary brass. The fact that these remarkable properties, now so long known, have not led to more general use, is explained by the difficulty of melting the mixture without loss of the zinc, which is volatilized at about the fusing temperature of the alloy, and is also rapidly oxidized in the air.

A Traveling Saloon.

The most ingenious method for beating the no-license law can be laid to the credit of Brockton Massachusetts. This is what is called, or want of a better term, a traveling saloon. The saloon is a big woman who wears a rubber belt around her waist filled with pockets in which are whisky and rum. When she sees a customer she simply raises her jersey, turns a stopcock in a flexible tube and permits the liquor to run into a tin cup which she carries in her pocket. The customer drinks, pays, she smooths down her jersey, puts the cup in her pocket and hunts up another customer.

The Grand Army.

How long the Grand Army of the Republic may survive as a distinct and important organization may be guessed from a glance at the number of Harrison's voters in 1840 who voted for President Harrison's grandson in November. In Iowa there was a club of 3,000 of these men and in Ohio the roll of 1840 Harrison's voters reached 6,831. The Iowa members' names, ages and places of residence, in 1840 as well as in 1888 were published by the Des Moines Register. Their ages ranged from sixty-nine to ninety-seven. Allowing for the fact that the soldier discharged in 1865 might have been but eighteen years old while the GENERAL SICKLES' DISCIPLINE. An Insolent Marauder Who Underestimated the General's Nerves.

Washington Post. General Dan Sickles, of New York, is down here on some law business, and looks as hale and vigorous, for all the eye could tell, as he did twenty years ago. He has an enormous fund of vitality to draw upon. His crutches come as near making up for that lost leg as is possible. Let him get his back to a wall and his dexter crutch is as formidable a weapon as any he could imagine. It is a quarter staff, a Highland claymore and a Nantucket harpoon in one. Woe to the unfortunate wight who presumes too much on his seeming crippled condition. He is as aggressive to-day as when he took up the case of the English Erie bondholders and captured Jay Gould's meeting by main force, or, further back, when he pushed his division half a mile ahead of the line of battle at Gettysburg. There is a story about him which perhaps has never seen print before. Many tragic events were overlooked in those five years of tragedy.

He was marching a brigade of troops down the front through Pennsylvania; New York Zouaves, recruited from the Bowery and Five Points—toughs from the word go. Innumerable depredations were being committed all along the line of march. Finally, all else failing, General Sickles issued an order that the next man to break ranks to forage without permission would be shot. He was riding down to the rear, when a man left the ranks, sprang over the wall and gathered in an armful of turnips. He tried to avoid seeing the soldier, but with an air of bravado the tough got in front of his horse and sung out: "Fine turnips, general; have some!" "Did you hear the order read," said Sickles, sternly, "forbidding all foraging?" "Yes."

"Do you know that you are liable to be shot for disobeying orders?" "Yes," answered the insolent marauder, "but, — you, you don't dare do it."

Crack! the soldier lay dead in his tracks. "I hated to do it," said the general afterward, "but it didn't end of discipline."

There was no more breaking of ranks in that regiment.

The dry cold weather of the early winter months is productive of a great deal of croup among children. Mothers should be on the lookout for it, and be prepared to arrest it as soon as the first symptoms appear. True croup never comes without a warning; a day or two before the attack the child will become hoarse, and that symptoms is soon followed by a peculiar, rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as this hoarseness or cough appears, all danger and anxiety may be avoided; it has never failed, even in the most severe cases. There is no danger in giving the Remedy for it contains no injurious substance. For sale by Foshay & Mason.
