RAILROAD BUILDING.

The Proposed Work for the Summer on the Lines Centering in Albany.

There is no disputing the fact that there will be lively railroad building in this portion of the state during the coming summer.

The Astorian says: "The latest railroad news is that the Union Pacific is going to Tacoma, and the Chicago & Northwestern is coming to Astoria."

The Oregonian in an editorial on the Oregon Pacific says: "There should be no misunderstanding whatever of the criticisms made upon this railroad in the past."

The management has certainly been unfortunate in not obtaining from the capitalists whom it represents sufficient sums of money at all times to carry out the work which has been begun.

But all claims that do not require the adjudication of the courts are now being promptly met, and it is evident that a more sound financial backing has come to the company.

Construction of this road will be continued into Eastern Oregon, and the Oregonian hopes to see this done as rapidly as men and means can accomplish it.

There is no single thing that would tend so much to the advancement of that section of Oregon, and of the whole state in consequence thereof, as the building of this road across the Cascade range and on through the large area of undeveloped country to the eastward.

There are homesteads for thousands of families, and without a railroad they will not be taken up; for without a way to send produce to market and bring home the necessities of life from the manufacturing and trade centers, few will seek such localities for homes.

The extension of the Oregon Pacific railroad will benefit the country through which it passes as greatly as it will benefit itself, and people are beginning to realize this.
