A JUVENILE PRIZE FIGHT.

Two Boys Aged About 13 and 12 Fight To a Finish at the Jno. L. Sullivan.

Yesterday morning two boys, Roy Bentley and Johnnie Talt fought to a finish a one round contest with bare knuckles. The spot chosen for the battle was an open grass-spot on the river bank back of the Russ House. The causes which led to it was that Roy, who is aged about 13 had dared Johnny, who is a new comer aged about 12, to fight, and had challenged him in such vigorous terms that although usually a quiet peaceable boy, he would not allow his bravery to be derided, and the fight was then arranged.

The principals and their seconds, accompanied by a large crowd of small boys repaired to the spot named and went to work. They did no sparring but struck straight from the shoulder, and every blow told. Johnny, who was the smaller of the two, had his left eye closed, and Roy also had one optic in mourning and a lump over the other about the size of an Easter egg. Blood was flowing freely when some larger boys tried to separate the combatants, but they would not have the fight stopped, and each was trying hard to get in the final knock out blow when a big policeman with a blue coat swooped down upon them. The spectators, and seconds who were holding the coats and hats of the combatants, fled. The principals were arrested and led off, and were arranged in Recorder Denton's court. They were very youthful looking prisoners, and gazed at each others swollen and bloody faces in a ludicrous manner.

After hearing the testimony, the elder, who had been the cause of the fight, was fined $5 00, and costs and the other was discharged. If in addition to the punishment received in the fight the paternal shingle was administered at home the boys will probably not hanker after any more prize fights this season.

RAY L. ROYCE.

He Tells All About His Early Inclination Toward the Stage.

"Yes," said Mr. Royce, laughingly, in conversation with a San Francisco reporter the other day, "I guess I was born for the theatrical profession for from my earliest recollection my chief delight has been in the show business. My first experiment was as a boy with a soap box panorama, the pictures being cut from illustrated papers or painted by myself and pasted together. These pictures illustrated a lecture which I delivered to my boy cronies at the extremely low price of ten pins each. Later on, while still a youth a friend and I who spent our days in selling soda water and compound prescriptions, revealed at night in paints and make-ups to the delight of our friends but to the sorrow of our employers. From that I drifted in amateur theatricals, manager and comedian. Yes, lots of hard work about it and ups and downs before you make a success."

A Runaway Engine.

Yesterday afternoon Frank Wood had started up his new steam drill, which is soon to be placed in his quarry near this city. It was placed in his marble works on Second street, and was propelled by a 12-horse power engine. The drill had bored a couple of holes in a large stone in a satisfactory manner, when in attempting to shut the throttle and stop the engine, it was found that the stem to the valve was bent and it refused to close. The result was that the engine went the faster, and soon got up a dizzy motion. The engine began to vibrate and the bystanders began to scatter and hide behind some convenient building. The boiler finally toppled from its foundation, just as Mr. Wood, who was about the only man who stayed with the runaway machine, succeeded in hammering the throttle shut with a heavy scantling. Fortunately no one was hurt and the engine was not damaged.

A Colorado liar who is running a newspaper, surrounded by cactus and chilled by snow, wildly bragged to the fire of his ship, writes thus: "Hundreds of people in Oregon are in a starving condition. So many have emigrated to that country this spring that everything is overdone, work cannot be had for half the population; out of money and no labor for them, they are idle and hungry."

SCHOOL FUNDS GAMBLED AWAY.

Young Mr. Crawford Suspected of Having Opened Letters Not His Own.

The Salem Statesman publishes the appended regarding a young man who is well known there: There is a quiet rumor on the streets that William Crawford, the colored young man so long employed at the state house, is in trouble. He worked under Hon. R. P. Earhart, secretary of state, and retained his position when the new administration took charge. He was a bright young fellow, and was generally considered square. He carried the mail between the state house and the postoffice, and often received at the postoffice for registered letters. The report is that he gambled, and this led him to look with covetous eyes upon the valuable packages entrusted to his care, that the temptation became too great, and he broke open the letters and took small sums at various times, most of which passed over the green cloth.

It is said that several of the state officers have been summoned before the United States grand jury at Portland, and it is presumed they are wanted to tell what they know of the transactions of Mr. Crawford, or "Billy," as he was familiarly called. As near as can be learned from the few particulars in the hand of the reporter, the amounts thus far discovered stolen by Crawford aggregate some four or five hundred dollars, and most of this has been lost by the state school fund. It is rumored that Mr. Crawford is missing; but it is predicted that if the grand jury finds these charges well founded Uncle Sam's strong arm will soon grasp the culprit, and he will be punished according to his deserts. Crawford was let out from his position some time ago.

A Soldier's Heart.

The old saying that the way to a soldier's heart is through his stomach is very true. Others have the same strong weakness. It takes various dainties to tickle various palates; for instance take a good old German, he likes a good Limburger cheese, others a piece of fine California cream cheese; take the Italian, he likes macaroni and cheese. The average human, though, likes everything that's good, a nice fat chicken and horse radish or chow chow, delicious comb honey, gilt edge butter or fresh eggs. The Willamette Packing Co. receives all the above fresh every day.

The members of Knights Templar Commandery No. 3 will celebrate Easter Sunday by attending services at the First Presbyterian church to-day at 7:30 p. m. The exercises, consisting partially of Masonic rites, will be interspersed with a service of song.

As an indication that the twine trust is not likely to seriously affect the farmers of this portion of the state it might be stated that Messrs. YAQUINA BAY NOTES.

Yaquina Republican. The iron rails for the north jetty were shipped from Chicago on March 26th, and should arrive soon. The machinery for the Geo. H. Chance will come on the next trip of the Willamette Valley and it will be placed in the Chance at the docks.

The steamer Mischief sailed for Alsea Wednesday. Just after she passed over the bar a pin in the propeller came out and left the propeller loose. She came back under sail and was beached and the new pin was fitted to the shaft.

W. T. Radir of Yaquina, has received from Gloucester, Massachusetts, a handsome model of a fishing smack. It is designed for a vessel of 115 tons. He intends to build the smack this coming fall and winter.

Dr. Rich claims to possess a gold mine, rich in mineral and a formation of rock never before known to carry gold and silver. He first secured it for a quarry. Assays show the rock to carry precious mineral to the value of from $300 $700 per ton.

It is said that the underwriters sold the machinery and hull of the wrecked steamer Yaquina Bay for about three thousand dollars less than it cost them to take out what machinery they saved. The vessel should have been sold immediately after she stranded. She would have brought a good price then and the purchaser would have had a fair chance to have saved the vessel. Now her hull is worth nothing. It should be blown up and hauled away from where it rests as it is a damage to the jetty and harbor.
