EDITORIAL NOTES.

An interesting and pathetic feature in the centennial procession in San Francisco, was the place in the line of march occupied by the survivors of Vandalia, one of the ships lost in the Samoan cyclone.

ALTA says three cheers for the Russian man-of-war. On Centennial day she displayed all her bunting, and flew the Stars and Stripes from the mainmast above her own flag.

The claim that the advance of price in binding twine is due wholly to large demand for it, and the consequent exhaustion of the manila and sisal supply, and that there has been no combination to control the price of the twine for speculative purposes, is not well taken.

It is a popular belief that human beings are degenerating in physical growth and endurance, but scientific investigation demonstrates to the opposite belief. Dr. Todd shows that the average of human life is increasing.

PERHAPS it will not be wise to borrow trouble over what the approaching harvest will be—which from its present promising outlook, presages unexampled abundance—but some genius, with a predilection to mar every beautiful view has elucidated the fact that scientific investigations, extending over a period of years, have disclosed the fact that, almost without exception, a mild winter, is followed by a summer characterized by constantly recurring electrical disturbances.

VERY few who use the coal oil can as a fire kindler, understand where the danger lies in such a practice. Coal oil of itself does not perhaps carry an extraordinary amount of danger with it, as it does not ignite rapidly enough to account for the myriad of fatal and terrible accidents that are inscribed upon demolished and exploded cans, but the vapor arising from the coal oil, and with which it is almost invariably attended, is among the most inflammable articles known.

quality, combined with the high specific gravity and flame-carrying power of the vapor when combined with air, renders its presence highly dangerous, even when the quantity may be small.

THE extent to which the government should lend its influence and aid towards the investigation, and successful treatment of diseases incident to the human family, is a question of concern and importance. It gives considerable more point to such queries when science gives a high compliment to the United States' care of the swine of the country when it asserts that the government has paid more money in the investment of porcine diseases, and to prevent and cure the same, than it has to investigate the diseases that affect the human family.

CANINE rights are to be respected in the Empire State. A New York judge sentenced John Ennis, who bit off an ear of a valuable St. Bernard dog, to a year in the penitentiary and pay a fine of five hundred dollars.

A REVOLVING marine battery something after the pattern of the old Monitor has been invented by a Connecticut man that is attracting attention.
