SANTIAM MINES.

History of Their Discovery and Their Development.

The Santiam mines, better known as the Quartzville mining district, Linn county, Oregon, were discovered in 1855, or near that time, and were worked and scratched over for free gold, not knowing anything of the silver ore to-day. Later they were worked some in tunnels and open butts. These mines and prospects are lying on both sides of the north fork and of the south fork of the Santiam river, and run in a southeast and northwest direction, parallel veins or lodes of quartz between granite and white porphyry and black slate, and about one mile wide; length unknown. There is gold and silver on the west side of the belt or zone, and galena on the east side.

On the southeast side of the Santiam, the mountains and ridges run nearly east and west, with the rivers, yet small spurs run in various directions, forming deep canyons, and are covered with heavy timber of cedar, hemlock, sugar pine and red fir, sprinkled with larch, making thick undergrowth. The ledges, or veins, cross these ridges at right angles, and crop out on the steep points covered with moss.

The Galena mining camp is about four miles southeast, direct line, or seven miles by trail from Quartzville and is a fine group of mines, mostly grey carbonates; yet some of them contain galena and lead grade of ores. The Queen has old marks of works many years ago, shows very fine blue galena and red oxides; has also a large tunnel about 280 feet long, through granite, porphyry and a body of blue-grey quartz, partially crystallized, bearing galena, lead, chloride of silver, gold (native) and pyrites of iron and sulphur. About one-half mile southeast from the Queen is a natural tunnel about 30 feet long, which contains lead carbonates similar to Leadville, Col., and ore rich in silver and galena.

The old Quartzville and burnt mill are on the west side of the Santiam, and the northwest side of the parallel range with the river, known as the White Bull mountain, is the center of the good belt. Some of the finest ledges of quartz in Oregon are found in this district, containing gold, silver, lead and tin. The White Bull mine was patented about eight years ago, has several tunnels, with black sulphur, pyrites of iron and copper. Assays average $100 in gold per ton and silver $80, though some assays run very high; about $10,000 per ton have been found. The mill was owned by the W. B. Company and run with success, with a lease to the Salmon Bros., of Portland, who made quite a fortune, and afterwards a fire in the forests burnt the mill and town of Quartzville.

The extension of the White Bull on the northwest is called the Golden Ridge mine, located in September, 1888, by Dr. E. O. Smith, of Portland. Old tunnels, with trees growing in their entrances, have been discovered. One tunnel, 250 feet long, four feet wide, assays $100 in gold per ton and an average of $60 in silver. The discovery shaft, down thirty feet, has a fine body of free gold, some pieces the size of a man's finger nail; average assay, $100 gold and $85 silver per ton. Two assays ran over $5000 silver per ton. The silver ore is black oxide and black sulphates. The mine is valued at $150,000. The Black Bear mine, parallel with the White Bull, assays about $40 gold; silver, $18; tin, 5 per cent.

The Golden Fleece mine, owned by T. Magruder & Co., runs $200 to $300 in gold and from $10 to $40 in silver; not yet thoroughly prospected. Eight feet wide between the walls. Top cropping, assayed by Mr. Jenne, of Portland, went $8.35 in gold per ton; having a million tons of quartz in sight. The Monarch mine, owned by Messrs. Donahy & McChesney, of Albany, has a fine lode. Some work done eighteen years ago, shows $40 in gold per ton. The Mammoth, owned by the Canal Fork Company, has a tunnel 200 feet in a solid body of ore. Out of twenty sacks of ore, samples average $850 in gold per ton. The Captain mine, owned by Read & Co., of Albany, has a lode eight feet wide of concentrating ore, assay, from $12 to $40 per ton in silver; trace of gold.

The C. & B. ledge, owned by Messrs. Barker & Giddings, of Albany, has a large body of ore in sight (rose quartz). Contains two ledges in solid walls, not yet developed, but assays well on top. The William Tell and Extension, owned by Lloyd Magruder & Co., has a large body of quartz, about a half mile long and fifty feet wide, which is the finest body of quartz in the district; assays average $40 in gold and $8 in silver per ton. The camp has been run over and located without regard to the mining until 1888. Visitors from Coeur d'Alene and Arizona state we have a fine camp of good ore. We have had a miners' meeting and made a camp named Golden City, mining district No. 3, Linn county, Oregon. President, A. R. Campbell; secretary, Lloyd Magruder. Mr. J. X. Smith, of Mehama, has had several men at work on the road—Correspondent of the Oregonian.

The Coming 4th of July. Every family as well as the several committees should do everything in their power to make the coming celebration on a grand success. Those wishing to treat their visiting friends and relations to something good to eat can do so by purchasing their groceries, vegetables and all kinds of delicacies at the Wilmette Packing Co.'s. Momie dusters and lap robes at Thompson & Overman's, the leading harness dealers.

A Shameful Spectacle.

Chief of Police Hoffman states that the usual Sunday afternoon quietude was broken on Second street by the appearance of an almost nude female figure fleeing across the street. She had leaped from the window of a house of ill fame, and seemed bent on making a visit to some of the residents near her scant attire. She was found to be in a state of beastly intoxication. She went to two or three residences sitting for a few minutes upon the steps of each, weeping tears of drunkenness. She was finally taken charge of by the police who quickly provided her with clothing, when she went to another house of ill fame and was returned to the house from whence she came. She was arrested and fined $10 and costs, which she paid.

Return Engagement.

In view of the hearty appreciation of the performances by the Chicago Comedy Co. in their recent week's engagement in this city, and the general desire for their appearance here in some of their new plays, which are spoken of so highly, the company has decided to make a return engagement of three days in Albany, beginning next Monday evening. They open with "The Lottery of Life," and will play "Erin-A-Chora" and "Ticket of Leave Man." The prices will be as before. They will doubtless be greeted again with large audiences on their return.

Malignant Gleet.

This dreadful disease has broken out in a number of places in the state to an alarming extent and up to the present time the Oregon Domestic Animal convention have ordered thirteen animals killed. The disease has broken out in Marion, Washington, Polk, Umatilla, Wasco and Multnomah counties, and several other counties yet to be heard from. The disease is contagious and farmers or owners of stock should use all precaution possible, to prevent the spread of this animal destroyer. A curious fact in the matter is that the heaviest horses are more subject to this malady than lighter ones.—Salem Statesman.

The Oregon Pacific Bonds.

It is announced that the $5,000,000 gold bonds of the Oregon Pacific Railroad Co., recently placed in the market in New York and Philadelphia have all been taken, and the subscription closed. This was done in a few days, which shows that the first mortgage bonds of the Oregon Pacific are no drug on the market. This will give the company the sum of $5,000,000 to be expended on the line eastward and will insure lively work this summer. Lovers of good coffee should try some of Julius Gradwohl's choice grades. He keeps the best in the market and sells as he does all his choice family groceries, at the lowest living prices.

PROCLAMATION BY THE MAYOR.

Whereas Thursday, May 30, has been set apart as a national holiday for the purpose of honoring our soldier dead by decorating their graves with flowers, therefore as mayor of the city of Albany, I would recommend that the flags of the different public buildings of the city be placed at half-mast on that day as a token of respect to the country's fallen soldiers; also that the business houses of the city be closed from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M., in order to give all citizens an opportunity of participating in the exercises of the day. J. L. COWAN, Mayor.

Any person doubting my word is invited to come and see for themselves, and I will board them free of charge for two months if any are found. My wife superintends the cooking herself.
