The Railroad Commission.

The Salem Statesman of the 11th inst. says: There was quite an attendance of spectators in supreme court yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the argument of the celebrated railroad commission case in which a great deal of interest is centered just now. Col. N. B. Knight made a very exhaustive and able argument in favor of the appellant, Mr. Biggs, the governor's appointee, after which the court took a recess until 7 o'clock, when Hon. Joseph Simon presented the opposite side in his usual forceful style and was followed by Hon. P. H. D'Arcy, who closed the case in an eloquent and candid address for the appellant. The governor and his appointees have been given new hopes for their side by recent decisions of the Indiana supreme court, where it has been held that while the legislature had the power to create the office of such commissions, it had no power to appoint men to fill them. The points upon which each side depends for success have been given in these columns on previous occasions, so it is not necessary to repeat them now, and the reader will be compelled to await the cool and learned judgment of Oregon's highest tribunal.

THE COLLEGE EXERCISES.

Planting the Class Ivy—The Address at the Opera House by Rev. A. J. Brown.

The senior class exercises in the college campus yesterday afternoon were most interesting and were attended by a large concourse of people. An artistic iron arch had been erected, at the foot of which the ivy was planted.

Some beautiful songs were sung by the choral society, under the direction of Prof. W. H. Lee.

From the excellent addresses delivered only short extracts can be given.

Miss Ina Robertson delivered an ivy oration. She said: "We have planted this ivy here with tender hands as a little memorial, hoping it will not only serve to awaken thoughts of our class but will also beautify and adorn our campus. It speaks of friendship, and what is more lovely or necessary to life's enjoyment than true, unselfish friendship? As a class we feel closely bound together. We have found great pleasure in pursuing our work, and have also appreciated the kindnesses of other classmates and companions, and we would that this, our ivy, may ever speak to them of the love and interest we will always cherish toward our alma mater. May she long live to help and guide others as she has ourselves. May she ever prosper and may many young men and women here receive that impetus that shall enable them to accomplish something, not only for themselves, but for their fellowmen."

An address from the undergraduates was then delivered by Miss Rose Trumbull, who paid a glowing tribute to the three young ladies composing the senior class, and indulged in an interesting prophecy of their future, concluding with the words: "They need no one to remind them that,

> "There is never a way so narrow or short,
> But the Master's work is there;
> There is something to do for His dear sake,
> Or something to calmly bear."

And knowing this each will find her own true place in God's great universe. Trusting that the Hand which has led them in the past will still guide in the future, we know that somewhere, somehow, each will find the work that is waiting for her. It may be that it will be where the eyes of the whole world will look on and bless, and its results may be a name written in the history of a nation and on the hearts of the people—a hero! Or it may be quiet work in a quiet way, patient suffering and waiting, deeds that the world knows nothing about, but Our Father knows and keeps account, and our heroes are not always God's heroes."

Miss Helen Crawford, on behalf of the senior class, delivered the response. She said:

In behalf of my class it becomes my pleasant duty to thank you, the representative of the undergraduates, for your tender words of parting and the faithful enumeration of our many accomplishments and worthy attributes. With a steady hand you have dared to raise the mystic curtain separating the present from the future. You have pierced the dark recesses of the unknown and revealed to all our coming greatness. The future you have pictured for us we hope will become a glorious reality. At least we shall put forth every effort to maintain your good reputation as a true prophetess.

And now we must say goodbye, but wherever our footsteps may stray we shall never forget the friends and schoolmates of our youth. Every object in these dear old schoolrooms "brings up memories sweet and endless." "Dear is the schoolgirl spot, we ne'er forget, though there we are forgot." The memories of these schooldays will form the brightest threads in the warp and woof of our lives.

> "Sweet is childhood—childhood's over:
> Kiss and part.
> Sweet is youth, but youth's a rover
> So's our hearts.
> Sweet is rest, but, by all showing
> Toil is nigh.
> We must go—alas! the going
> Say 'goodbye.'"

Remarks were also made by President Condit, Rev. Condit, Rev. A. J. Brown, of Portland, Rev. E. J. Thompson, of Corvallis, and Rev. M. Banks.

Last evening Rev. A. J. Brown, of Portland, delivered an able and instructive address before the literary societies of the college on the subject of "Learning and Religion." The address was listened to attentively by about 400 people.

To-day at 10 A. M. will occur the graduating exercises proper, at which time the senior class, consisting of Miss Flora Mason, Miss Ina Robertson and Miss Helen Crawford will receive diplomas. Miss Mason has been chosen valedictorian.

The commencement exercises will close with the reunion of the alumni and banquet at the St. Charles this evening.

The ordinance prohibiting cows from running at large in this city, which was passed by the city council last night, will go into effect on July 1st. The city officials say the law will be strictly enforced. Owners of cows should govern themselves accordingly.

A picnic will be given by the citizens of Harrisburg on Friday, June 21st, at the grove near that city. The exercises of the day will consist of music by the band, singing by the choir, an address by Prof. J. W. Jewett and the usual races. In the evening a grand ball will be given.

COMING NEXT WEEK.

The Georgie Woodthorpe Company Will Begin a Week's Engagement Monday.

Next Monday evening the Georgie Woodthorpe Dramatic Co. will begin a week's engagement in this city at popular prices. Concerning their rendition of M'Liss, the Santa Cruz Times says:

The Woodthorpe Company was greeted with another large and appreciative audience at the opera house last evening. The play was Bret Harte's M'Liss, a drama that is peculiarly Californian. It is a piece which pleases theater-goers, as it is a mixture of comedy and thrilling situations. M'Liss was so excellently presented that applause was frequent.

Miss Woodthorpe as M'Liss, the California wild flower, had an opportunity to display that remarkable ability she possesses. All through the play she invested each scene with a naturalness which is a great relief from the acting which is usually seen on the stage. She did not overdo the character, she was just M'Liss materialized. Her songs in the first act were well received. There are few actresses who can play an emotional part one evening and a character such as M'Liss the next evening, so distinctly different, as does Miss Woodthrope.

Accident on the Narrow Gauge.

Quite an accident occurred on the Narrow Gauge railroad near Woodburn on Monday evening. It seems since the old crew resolved to stop work until their back wages were forthcoming the managers have had much trouble in securing capable men to fill their places and yesterday's accident is laid to this fault. The train was only a short distance from Woodburn, and as near as can be learned, the engine got out of the control of the new engineer and in his maneuvering to stop the train, "the iron horse" plunged over in the ditch, landing wrong side skyward. No one was injured in the affair as far as could be learned.

Get Your Tickets.

The tickets for the excursion to Yaquina Bay Sunday, June 16th, are being sold very rapidly, and as the number of tickets to be sold are limited, those who wish to go should purchase their tickets as soon as possible.
