TRIBUTE TO STEPHEN FLINN.

Read By Miss Lullie Robertson at the Alumni Meeting of the Albany College.

This night brings to us the pleasure of added members to our association. They are welcomed right royally to our hearts and sympathies. As we extend to them the hand of welcome, we glance backward over our ranks to see that during the sixteen years of the existence of this association, four of our members have been touched by the Reaper and borne away. Mary Ellen Finlayson, of the class of 1874, was taken in 1879; Joseph Bradshaw, of the class of 1874, in 1880; George Irvine Foster, the only graduate of 1882, in 1887.

Tender tribute has been rendered to these at former reunions and it becomes a duty made doubly sacred by this hour to add one more name to the roll: Stephen Church Flinn, taken from us during the past year.

"Beneath the low green tent, Whose curtain never outward swings, Rests one whose memory is fragrant with the virtues that adorned his life all radiant with hope and full of that promise in which even the state might feel an interest."

This evening is the third anniversary of that occasion on which Stephen Flinn, president of the class of '86 became an alumnus. In the midst of our pleasures to-night, it is but fitting that as classmates and friends we render tribute to a life replete with intellectual ability, moral worth and rich promise.

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die." When the life gives forth the fragrance of right principle, perseverance in the attainment of those refinements and arts which develop purity of thought and conscientious endeavor of purpose, it is not fitting for the mind to dwell too much on the sadness of absence.

The student life of Stephen Flinn was characterized by persistence in study. He ranked high in class work, and his mind showed a development rarely found in students of his age. He possessed marked ability in language, and acquired a facility of expression not often attained by one so young.

He was ready with the pen and displayed ease in composition. The mind reverts to such qualities with pleasure, for there is nothing grander than intellect when directed in its proper channel; yet the thoughts turn almost unconsciously to that part of the being which controls the actions of right or wrong.

Our classmate was dignified by strict adherence to right principles; his connection with associations which tend to the uplifting of society betrays his desire to be allied to the side of morality and truth. May we go a step farther and refer to that intangible faith which belongs to the Christian people? The pure confidence in an overruling power, as evinced in his church connections, and the possession of that unconquerable trust which makes strong those who pass through the dark valley, if we were to discover the possibilities of a life controlled by such qualities, we might enter upon a life of wide extent; for in no instance are developed intellect, morality and Christianity combined, but that a limitless realm of operation is presented.

Such is life in an example that cannot be lost. His youthful years developed a thirst for knowledge and study enabled him to make his own all that he saw and most that he heard or read. He was aided by it during his course in this college, and with ease he treasured her instruction and passed her curriculum is fresh in the memory of both professors and students. But when he was about to take a higher flight, to climb the empirical of human knowledge, "The insatiable Archer drew his bow" and he was "gone like a morning rainbow—like a dream—a star that shone and falls, and then is seen no more."

Brother, friend, associate companion, rest, gently rest, until another day shall invite thee to a renewal of thy labors, which we fondly believe were only suspended by the change called death. Are they suspended? Who can tell? Why may not our departed friend be even now drinking at that perennial fountain of knowledge, more beautiful than the limpid streams of Eden?

And now, "Farewell" a word that hath been and must be, a sigh which makes us linger, yet, farewell! As the succeeding years pass on thy memory shall never grow dim in our hearts. Be it our duty, as well as those who shall succeed us here, at each recurring reunion to lovingly, tenderly lay a chaplet of asphodel and brightest flowers upon thy bier.

Alumni Business Meeting.

The Alumni association of the Albany college held their annual business meeting last night. The association was called to order by the president, James F. Powell, and Q. E. Propst was elected secretary pro tem. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which occurred the election of officers. James F. Powell, who has for two years efficiently served as president of the association, was re-elected to that position for a third term, and Miss Anna Althouse was elected secretary and treasurer of the association.

Board of Trade Meeting.

IMPORTANT TO HOME SEEKERS

We, Geo. H. Colter and L. J. Wilson, give notice to the public at large that we have bought the townsite of South Bend and have enlarged it to twice the size of the old survey and changed the name to Glen Ada City. This place is situated on Siuslaw Bay, a fine body of water six miles long and half a mile wide. The water in the bay at the present time is very deep, and steamers and sailing vessels can land their cargoes at Glen Ada City without the aid of wharves at low tide. Notwithstanding those natural advantages there is a wharf in course of construction and will be completed as fast as money and men can do it. The bar at low tide has got from ten to fourteen feet of water. There never has been a dollar appropriated by the government or spent on this bar. The government's old survey distinctly shows two feet more water than Yaquina Bay, which had several hundred thousand dollars expended on it by the government, and all the captains we have talked with, having traded steamers and vessels now in operation entering both harbors, claim they have more trouble entering the Yaquina than the Siuslaw harbor, where the bar is in its natural state. But thanks to our present far-seeing and intelligent United States senator that the United States surveyors are ordered by congress to make immediate survey of Siuslaw harbor and other bays, and we have every reason to believe that at the next congress we will have an appropriation that will make us one of the finest harbors on the coast, as we have been at Siuslaw Bay and ascertained these facts.

Now a few words about the natural surroundings of the new townsite, now rapidly being settled: The river is navigable for twenty miles from Glen Ada, up to the head of tide. There is now a steamer making daily trips to the head of tide and return, commanded by Captain Hurd, who is well qualified to look after the wants of the many people who are flocking in to settle up this country. This river being one of the finest flowing on both sides for years, as one can see by a look at the fine orchards overhanging its banks, and trees loaded with the most delicious fruits Oregon products, the finest peaches grown in any country. Strange to say there is lots of government land in this fine section yet vacant, which can be had by the coming settlers without money or price. The timber accessible to the tributaries of this river is inexhaustible, there being millions of feet of fir, spruce, cedar and all other kinds. The industry of this country is fast improving. We have two large saw-mills running full blast and another under construction which will cut fifty thousand feet of lumber daily. There are two large canneries, and in fishing season the fishermen make from $5 to $25 a night. I must say a few words about the noble lot of settlers who have located here within the last twenty days, who are men with capital, coming from the East and other countries and buying homes for themselves and families. Among the late arrivals are Mr. Sever, and family, Mr. Turkington and family, Mr. Gilbert and family, Mr. Hart and son, Rev. Robinson and family, Mr. Biglow, Mr. Welter and many others.

I will state that lots in the new town are now on the market at a nominal figure, rated from $100 to $650. Payments may be made as follows: One-fourth down, 1/4 in twelve months, 1/4 in two years and the last payment in three years. The above prices for lots will last only three months, as we will be laying out money improving the property and increasing the value. Come and secure you a lot while prices are down and make money, and secure for yourself the finest home the Pacific coast affords. The best water in the United States, the finest climate in the world, the grandest scenery and most beautiful view of the Pacific Ocean. Come and look at the country and prove for yourself that these are facts.

Our agents in Albany for the sale of property in the new town will be Ashby & Dickenson. We will also have agents in Portland, Salem, Eugene and other places.

Mongolian Pheasants.

A number of times recently articles have appeared in the papers stating that it was impossible to successfully raise Mongolian pheasants in confinement. This theory, however, has been proven to be false at many times. At three different residences in this city can be seen broods of these pheasants, all alive and doing well, each following the domesticated hen, apparently as well satisfied though at their home in the woods or fields. Experience has taught that it is no trouble to raise them for the first six weeks or until they are about the size of quails, after that, however, they only await their first opportunity to leave, and once gone they never return. Yesterday a farmer was on first street with six little fellows, which he had caught while coming to town. When asked what he proposed doing with them he replied that he would take them home and put them with a hen that was raising a brood of eighteen hatched from a nest of twenty-one eggs, which he had found in his garden. It is a curious fact, not known by everyone, that these pheasants hatch always two, and very frequently, three broods each year. As soon as the first brood is hatched the mother turns them over to the tender mercy of the old rooster, which cares for them until the second brood appears, after which the two are combined and all looked after by both parents. This accounts for the fact that in every covey will always be seen two different sized birds. The first nest usually contain from 18 to 25 eggs, and the last from 15 to 20 eggs. Is it any wonder then that they have so rapidly increased.
