FLITTING TO THE SEASIDE.

Two Slight Accidents Near Lebanon—Excitement Over an Incipient Blaze at Corvallis—Newsp Notes.

The city seems an oven now. It's hot. The perspiration leaves your brow. It's hot.

The number of pleasure-seekers, tourists, and those who have time and means to take a quiet month's vacation, who are daily going to Yaquina would indicate a growing popularity of this seaside summer resort.

Among those who left this city yesterday for Yaquina were J. L. Cowan, J. K. Elderkin, Jay W. Blain, J. G. Gross and wife, P. Cohen and daughter, George H. Keeney, Miss Lora Vance, C. D. Woodworth, Judge R. S. Strahan, H. H. Hewitt, T. J. Stites, and about twenty-five people from Portland and Salem.

Three small tombstones have arrived in Corvallis from Washington City. They are to be placed over the graves of the G. A. R. dead who are interred in Crystal Lake cemetery—Stephen Belknap, A. Graeg, Joseph Blanchard. These stones are furnished and deceased veterans by the government upon application being made by the post of which they were members, or any relative or friend.

Uniformed Rank, K. of P.

The Columbia Division No. 4, uniformed rank K. of P., was organized in this city last evening by Grand Chancellor, Col. W. T. Hume, of Portland, assisted by Sir Knight D. L. Greene, of Salem.

COAST NOTES.

The newspapers of Seattle are agitating the question of a public park.

Steps have recently been taken toward the establishment of an educational academy for Pendleton.

The Grange Bros. mill, 12 miles above Dayton, has been destroyed by fire, together with 1,500,000 feet of lumber.

Burglars broke into the residence of Mr. A. N. Brown, at Waitsburg and secured in cash and other plunder over $1000.

G. B. Tardiff, of Pendleton, has secured the contract for erecting the new court house at Colfax, W. T. He says that the building will cost $400,000.

A number of new settlers have arrived in Douglas county. They are of the better class and have along with them fine cattle, fowls and a good supply of farming implements.

Contracts for grading twenty-five miles of the Tacoma, Olympia & Chehalis Valley railroad have been given and work is being pushed vigorously, seven miles being already graded.

Three immigrants, who arrived in Pendleton and camped below town, carelessly left their teams unguarded. Tramps rifled the wagons of more than $500. Two men were arrested and charged with the robbery, but were discharged for lack of sufficient evidence.

Five hundred acres of T. P. Page's wheat fields near Athena were destroyed by fire, having caught from a passing engine. The wheat was reported to average forty bushels an acre, which will make Mr. Page's loss upwards of 20,000 bushels. It is not thought that the grain was insured.

During our epidemic of dysentery in the summer of 1879, I sold his bottles of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and it proved satisfactory in every instance. The remedy is standard in this community—George B. Darbar, Druggist, Center Point, Iowa. The epidemic referred to, was by far the worst that has ever occurred in Iowa. Over 40 persons died from it, in a town of only 300 hundred inhabitants; but every case in which the remedy was used, recovered. It was equally successful during the epidemic of bloody flux in Virginia, in 1887, and in Michigan and Southern Illinois, in 1888. It has been in constant use for over seven-tenths of a century, and has proved itself to be the most successful medicine yet discovered for bowels complaints. For sale by Foshey & Mason.

THE OREGON PACIFIC

Its Future No Longer a Matter of Conjecture.

CONSTRUCTION EASTWARD.

What the Oregonian Says Editorially Concerning the Road Its Connection with the Chicago & Northwestern.

The Oregonian of the 27th inst. says: The statement made by some one, who was either too careless to become informed or who intentionally falsified, that work had been stopped on the Oregon Pacific railroad, which statement was quickly denounced as untrue and without any foundation whatever, has again called no inconsiderable attention to this road.

The development of Oregon, and, more especially, of that portion lying east of the Cascade range, will bisect the state, and for a great portion of the distance across this commonwealth it will be without a competitor for the business which already awaits its completion, and for that vastly greater volume which will accrue when sections now isolated are by means of transportation facilities, opened up to settlement.

A great section of country already too long isolated from the paths of commerce, though possessing vast resources, lies between the Columbia river and the California line, and the Cascades and the O. R. & N. road. With the exception of the branch line to Heppner built by the last mentioned company, this vast area of our state, embracing many thousand square miles, is without transportation facilities other than those of the most primitive character, at the best only the pack-saddle or the lumber wagon.

Occasionally we read of great mineral deposits too far away from a railroad to be developed, sections of land which would yield fine crops which it were no use to raise for lack of a market, and also of greatness of the two principal industries of this region, wool growing and stock raising, in both of which money can be made despite the obstacles which we have noted.

How much more prosperous then will be the people of this region, how much more extensive will become their present resources and how rapidly will they increase in number, when a railroad pierces the very heart of this unknown land, so unknown, indeed, that but recently so great a paper as the Scientific American characterized it as "a vast, sterile, unproductive plain."

Every benefit which should accrue to the railroad which does so much for this country will be reaped by the Oregon Pacific. If there were no other aim in its construction than to develop Central Oregon, the road would be a financial success, as well as a public benefit. But we do not lose sight of the fact that the bonds of this road, upon which the $5,000,000 for further construction were raised, were guaranteed by men well known in the financial world, men whose names are prominently connected with the Chicago & Northwestern, a road that has aspirations to be a transcontinental line, and whose connection with the Oregon Pacific at Boise City will accomplish the desired end.

The improvement of Yaquina bay, for which congress has been so ardently and so successfully implored in the past, will also accrue to the benefit equally of the people of the state and of the stockholders of these two railroads. The management of the Oregon Pacific has worked continually for this improvement, and pending its completion has not pushed the construction of the extension of the road so rapidly as otherwise it would have done.

FROM ALBANY OR LEBANON EASTWARD.

The Willamette Valley and Cascade Mountain Wagon Road is in excellent condition, and by all odds is the best and shortest wagon road to Eastern Oregon. Water and grass is abundant along the entire road. The grades are easy, accommodations superior and the road well bridged making it the best mountain road in the state. For summer jaunts, hunting and fishing the Cascade Mountains in the vicinity of Clear Lake and the Three Sisters afford superior advantages.
