AT DAWN.

Here the first faint tender thrill
Of light that darts the east and makes
A soft glow on the hill
Unfaded among the English brakes.
I love the robbin's mating note
That silences his nest, he sings
Half on the air, half in the bush,
Or nestled half beneath his wings.
I love the violet's calling cry.
The purple daisy's sunlike face,
The sweet larva landing at the eye.
The dew-drenched elder's generous grace.
I meet most at this strange hour
In nature's charm mysterious depth.
This is the time I feel her power,
Because, thank goodness, I'm asleep.

NOTES FROM A SKETCH BOOK.

The Cabin in the Mountains.

BY GEO. S. ROYCE.

We posted our rifles on a log and looked out over the valley that lay beneath us. It was one of the finest bits of mountain scenery I think I ever beheld, we were on the very edge of a precipice, three thousand feet below we could hear the rippling of a stream that wound its way among the pines that looked like a belt of ferns so far were we above them. In the little valley that circled the edge of the timber, a thousand yards beyond the range of our rifles, a doe was quietly grazing with her fawn. The rugged mountain scenery, the soft beauty of the setting sun casting a halo over it all traced a picture on memory's wall that will never be erased, and involuntary these lines sprang to my mind

"But when the broad midsummer moon
Rose over the grassy lawn,
Beside the silver-dotted fern,
There grazed a spotted fawn."

We were up in the Blue Mountains, Ted Williams and myself looking for game, and we had tramped up and down hill the whole summer day without success, and Ted was, as customary on such occasions, glum and despondent, but after viewing the scene quietly for a few moments, he broke the silence with:

"That are little patch of clearing has one of the saddest stories connected with it of any place in these mountains." "How is that," I asked, turning my gaze from the beautiful bit of landscape to the weather-beaten old hunter beside me. "What do you know that is sad about such a lovely little valley as that?" "Well," said Ted, "seeing as we are both tired if you will set yourself down on this here log I will spin ye the yarn, though it kinder gives me the dum ager to talk about it."

"Away back in '70, afore the last Linn outbreak in these parts, there came to the settlement down the river one summer day two of the best hunters I ever set eyes on, brothers they sed they were, and looking for work, one of 'em tall and dark with eyes black as a crow and muscles on his arms like a whip cord, he weren't so very big yer kerful size but yer tains more man there than outside appearance would seem ter indicate, 'tother one was a little chap, could stand under his brother's arm, with hair that looked as if all the summer sunshine had got tangled in his curls, and eyes bluer than the jenny jump ups that grew down by the spring."

"The boys all took to the little chap from the first, with the exception of Bill. Bill was the bully of the camp, six feet three, weighin' over two hundred, and was a bad man ter handle. He was always coddlin' Charley, the little chap, about his size, and one day when he was drinking pretty heavy he slapped the little fellow in the face, a dozen hazes flew to their pistols, and the chances are that Bill's ker-reer would have terminated then and there, but afore anybody could draw, the big brother was at him. Well I never seen anything like it since a cyclone swept through dad's farm back in Arkansas when I was a boy, he jes' litterly mopped the ground with he get through it took three of us to carry Bill to his cabin, and afore he war able to be around again the brothers came out to this ere valley and concluded to locate. The boys built 'em that cabin, its a standin' yet, way over by them cedars. They get 'em a horse and a plow, put in a bit of garden and had one of the purtiest places yer ever seed, and some of the boys ever happened around thar without bein' sure of a square meal and a hearty welcome.

"Wall they stayed thar for about six months, when Chief Joseph, curse the infernal cut throat, got on a tear and concluded to wipe out the remainder of the white population, and we concluded to warn the brothers to come to the settlement. So four of us, Ike Bentley, Jack Simpson, Tom Morris and me, started one evening for that purpose, but camped back thar seven miles on the creek, intendin' to come up in the mornin' and help 'em meye down.

"Wall it was about nine o'clock in the evening as we war a settin' around the fire smokin' an' tellin' yards when all of a sudden we heard a whooshin' 'telled Ike Simpson, 'ts the brothers' yelled Ike Simpson to his feet, the redskins are at 'em come on boys, and he made a rush for the horses.

"Wall we traveled that seven miles in less than twenty minutes but just afore we turned the bend yonder the firing ceased, and when we rounded the corner by the cabin there wasn't an Injun in sight. Leaping from our horses we made a rush for the door, it had been broke open, and in the door-way the dead redskins war piled up so thick we had to throw 'em out of the way to get through, and when we got inside we found what I had expected, there on the floor bleedin' from a dozen wounds lay the two brothers dead, an empty six shooter in each hand, and twenty dead redskins told how they had died. The little chap's hair was longer than when we last seen him, his eyes 'round his shoulders in long curls, and when Jake lifted him up to carry him out of the cabin he staggered back agin the wall and gasped: 'boys my God its a woman.' Just then we heard a noise in the far part of the cabin, something that sounded like the beat of a young lamb, and goin' back thar I found the tiniest wee bit of a baby lyin' in kind of a hammock and a trying to get both of its red fists into its blue eyes.

"That told the story and we knew that the little brother lyin' out under the moonlight so cold and dead was a woman, his wife maybe, leastwise I always believed it, though we never found so much as a scrap of paper tellin' us they were or where they had come from, and the next mornin' we made a couple of coffins from some boards in the cabin and laid them tenderly, side by side down to sleep, and took the little baby girl to the settlement, but she never seemed to get along, perhaps nobody knew how to take care of her, or may be it heard its mother callin', any way I've heard of such things, for in just three weeks after we took the little dead body up here in the mountains and laid it down to sleep beside of its mother. They are at rest now all their troubles are ended, whateer they were, but they weren't a man of the four of us who rode to the cabin that fatal night but would give his right arm to-day if we had got there twenty minutes sooner. But its a gettin' late boy we had better be movin', and slowly shouldering our rifles we moved down the hill toward the setting sun.

AMERICAN WHEAT PROSPECTS

The Short Crops in Europe Will Give Us Control of the Market.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The reports received here this morning by the superintendent of agriculture show highly encouraging prospects for American wheat this year. India will produce 6,500,000 tons of wheat, which is 35,000,000 bushels less than last year, the crop of which latter year was 25,000,000 bushels less than that of the previous years. This gives India little more than sufficient for her own consumption. The crop of Russia is 15 per cent. short, and Austria-Hungary has a crop 25 per cent. short of last year's crop. The United States will have 180,000,000 bushels for export.

Disarming an Unseen Foe.

"This was sometime a paradox," as Hamlet says. Since, however, the people of America and other lands have been enabled to pit Hestef's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its misty venom to poison the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnate the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the foe and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malarial or miasmatic localities, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy is powerless. Cures, likewise, of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.

How Doctors Conquer Death.

Docthr Walter Hammond says: After a long experience I have come to the conclusion that two-thirds of all deaths from coughs, pneumonia and consumption might be avoided if Dr. Acor's English Remedy for consumption were only used in time. This wonderful remedy is sold under a positive guarantee by Foshey & Mason.

OVER THE WIRES.

Nagle Released on a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

THE CRUISER CHARLESTON.

John L. Sullivan Is Sentenced to Twelve Months Imprisonment—Earthquake Shocks—Foreign News.

The Herald's Special Dispatches.]

LATHROP, Cal., Aug. 17.—Deputy United States Marshal Nagle was released from jail at Stockton at 5 o'clock this morning on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Sawyer of the United States Circuit Court. He passed through here on a special train at 5:11 a. m. for San Francisco, accompanied by Marshal Franks and the deputy attorney.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Deputy Marshal David Nagle arrived in this city at 7:45 this morning, in charge of Sheriff Cunningham of Stockton, and was taken at once to the city prison. A writ of habeas corpus was issued by Judge Sawyer and served upon Sheriff Cunningham yesterday afternoon. He left there with Nagle in a special train an hour before daylight this morning. The removal made was given no publicity and there was no one at the depot when the train left. The writ of habeas corpus is returnable in the circuit court at 11 o'clock this morning, and Nagle is expected to appear at that time.

SULLIVAN GUILTY.

The Champion Gets Twelve Months in Prison.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17.—Picayune special from Purvis, Miss., says that John L. Sullivan was this morning sentenced to twelve months in prison. Referee Fitzpatrick pleaded guilty and was fined $200.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 17.—Killrain this morning heard of Sullivan's sentence and the arrival of a Mississippi officer in Baltimore to take him to Purvis. He was surprised and scared. Law for collection of forfeited bail in Marion county is defective, and should Killrain be alarmed at Sullivan's fate and skip, his bondsmen would not likely have to pay.

THE NEW CRUISER.

She Will Be Given Her Trial Trip at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Steam was raised on the Cruiser, Charleston this morning for the purpose of giving her a trial run in the bay. The trial will be conducted entirely by engineers and others connected with the Union Iron Works. No government officials will be aboard. If satisfactory results are obtained to day the cruiser will be given another builder's trial in the bay next week, and if that also proves successful the builders will notify the navy department that they are ready for a second official trial trip.
