A Brutal Prize Fight In St. Louis Ends Fatally.

DONE TO DEATH FOR $30.

London Strike Difficulties—Jack the Ripper Java Petroleum.

The HERALD's Special Dispatches.]

ST. LOUIS, (Mo.,) Sept. 17.—A brutal prize fight occurred here last night, which resulted in the death of one of the participants. Thomas E. Jackson, 18 years old is the victim. He fought Ed. A. Hearn, a local light weight champion, eleven bloody rounds, and at the opening of the twelfth fell fainting in the second's arms. The fight throughout was the most desperate ever witnessed in the ring, science being lost sight of, and give and take slugging marking the fight throughout. By the time half a dozen rounds had been fought the men and their seconds were covered with blood, as was the sawdust on the floor, while the water with which the fighters were sponged was as red as blood itself.

When Jackson was unconscious he was carried to a room above the saloon, where three physicians worked vigorously, but without avail. At eleven o'clock this morning Jackson died. The stakes were for thirty dollars.

LABORERS AT WORK.

Some Few Difficulties, But Work Resumed.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The advice of the leaders of the strike to the dock laborers to observe all the provisions of the agreement under which they returned to work was effected. This morning the men went to work peaceably with the "blacklegs." Very few assembled outside the dock.

The strikers and "blacklegs" on the South India dock became involved in a dispute and the men who had been on a strike drove the "blacklegs" out. The police interfered, and the strikers withdrew and the "blacklegs" resumed work.

When the strikers were about to resume work at Albert dock they found a number of "blacklegs" employed. The strikers attacked the "blacklegs" and chased them from shed to shed. Several "blacklegs" were injured and removed to the hospital. The men who made the assault were discharged. The directors of the dock company threaten a general lockout if they do not live up to their agreement.

The disturbances have been quelled and work is fully resumed on the Victoria and West Indian docks.

A WOMAN SCALPED.

A Bather Grasps a Supposed Coconnut and Disaster Follows.

New York Evening World.

The sights at the seashore are many and varied, and a certain Brooklyn young man will have reason to remember his visit to Coney Island last Sunday.

He was in bathing with a party of friends, some of whom were strangers in the city. They had all been in for a long time, and taking a final plunge before getting out. The young man made a dive and swam out from shore to a point beyond the ropes, and tried to see how far he could swim under water in returning.

He went down, and when he next appeared he was in a stone's throw of the shore. When he came to the surface of the water his eyes were filled with the briny element, and he opened and closed them rapidly. As he did so, however, he espied what he thought was a cocoanut. It flashed through his head that perhaps a vessel had been wrecked and the cargo lost, and reaching out, he made a grab at the object.

There was a little shriek, which the young man did not hear, and a minute later a woman about fifty years of age was seen making her escape from the water. It was noticed that she had no hair and held her arm up over her head. Imagine the young swimmers disgust, though, when he saw that what he had supposed was a cocoanut was nothing more that an old brown wig.

Senator Dolph in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Senator Dolph, of Oregon, has returned to Washington with his family, and will now remain until congress convenes. The senator to-day made the rounds of the departments, looking after Oregon's varied interests and of the Pacific coast in general. His visit to the navy department was to learn what report the board of naval officers had made who were sent to Europe to investigate the works which could be used to improve the rapids in the Columbia river at The Dalles. This board, as will be remembered, was authorized by the first session of the last congress to visit The Dalles and investigate the condition of the rapids, and then to visit Europe and inspect the methods used there, such as boat railways, hydraulic works, etc., for improving similar streams and overcoming rapids. The senator ascertained that the board had returned from Europe and was at present engaged on its report. He could not ascertain what the report would be; but he learned enough to be confident that it will recommend that the improvements of the rapids be authorized and an appropriation made for them by congress.

SAVED THE WOMAN.

A Train Robber Sacrifices Liberty to Help a Sufferer.

Prescott Journal.

How strangely the good and bad intermingle in the breast of man is strikingly shown by the train of circumstances attending the recapture of Smith, the train robber, who is now awaiting trial in the County jail. In March last he, in company with three others, robbed the eastern bound Atlantic and Pacific express at Canon Diablo, and a month afterward, after one of the longest chases on record, the party was captured by Sheriff O'Neil and posse in Utah. While on the return trip to Arizona, Smith effected his escape by jumping from a car window on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe while the train was rapidly descending the Raton mountains in New Mexico.

He at once struck out for Texas, taking horses wherever the opportunity presented and riding them as long as they were able to carry him. On the afternoon of the ninth day, while in the Panhandle, near Vernon, Smith discovered a woman aimlessly wandering over the prairie, and recognizing the fact that she must be lost or in trouble, he rode up and accosted her. She informed him that she had been lost two days, during which time she had gone without food. Knowing that in her emaciated condition she could not possibly survive much longer without assistance Smith, the escaped train robber, fleeing though he was to escape trial for a crime the penalty of which was death, and still carrying on each leg his broken shackles, bethought him of a windmill he had passed some eight miles back, and, putting the woman on his horse, conducted her to it.

He left her, and riding along the wire fence that inclosed the windmill for five or six miles, until he discovered the camp of the men employed to keep it in repair, he informed them of the woman's condition. They at once saddled, and, although the night was nearly gone, started at once for the windmill, and found the woman—a young school teacher—weak, but still alive, and at once brought her to a place where she was cared for. At daybreak the Sheriff and posse in pursuit of Smith met the same men, and, finding from their account and description in which direction the fugitive had gone, pursued him.

Before high noon they had overtaken him, and Smith, the train robber, who, less than twenty-four hours before, had turned from his way to succor an unfortunate woman, was shot from his saddle while resisting an arrest which he might have prevented by avoiding the delay and observation so entailed. The story is good enough to have a moral, but doubtless Smith, who is now in the county jail awaiting trial for his life on account of it, fails to discover it.

How a Darky Can Sleep.

Atlanta Constitution.

I saw a queer illustration of the sleeping qualities of a negro the other day. Everyone knows that a genuine unadulterated negro can sleep on a board with his face to the sun and without covering his eyes on the hottest July day—and he sleeps as peacefully as a white man on the softest cot in the darkest room. It has been said that he could sleep under the mouth of a cannon in operation, and I believe it—or, at least, I believe the one of which I shall speak could. In going down to Augusta a few days ago on the regular day passenger we were a few miles below Union Point when the train suddenly stopped. The fireman jumped from the engine and ran back by the passenger coach crying. "There's a dead nigger behind." Everyone looked out, and sure enough just behind the rear coach, with his head resting on the cross-ties, was what was supposed to be a dead negro man. Two or three train hands and a number of negroes ran back to see if the train had struck him.

"Dat nigger ain't dead. He's er sno'in," said one of the negroes, and he jerked and kicked him until the sleeping negro awoke, arose and walked off, followed by a kick from the brakeman.

The wheels of the engine and cars had passed within a few inches of the negro's head, and had not even affected his snoring.

Disarming an Unseen Foe.

"This was sometime a paradox," as Hamlet says. Since, however, the people of America and other lands have been enabled to pit Hostetter's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its misty venom to poison the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnates the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the foe and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malaria-cursed localities, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy is powerless. Cures, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.
