The interests of the people are not best conserved when speculation is rife, therefore the report is not, relatively speaking, good news that Bradstreet makes when it says that some years have elapsed since the stock market presented such a strong appearance and such a decided outlook for increased speculative activity.

earnings, is the corner-stone of the movement. At the same time the prospect of general business activity, the long absence of the public, both here and abroad, from speculation in railway shares, and lastly, the decided improvement in railroad methods and management, all tend to aid the tendency referred to.

The Boston Journal gives a cheering prospect of the present situation of affairs. It says that there is a decided improvement in nearly every department of business and the outlook for the fall and winter is most cheering.

The Philadelphia Record says that a "steer weighing 1,200 pounds is worth $18 to $21 in Chicago before he is killed. After he is killed his killer sells him—beef, hoofs, hide, tallow, etc.—for $82.
