COL. HOGG AND PARTY

Arrival of the Distinguished Visitors from New York City.

AN INFORMAL RECEPTION.

The Personnel of the Party and How They Are Deighted with Albany—The Success of the Oregon Pacific.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon a special train bearing Col. T. E. Hogg and party, of New York City, arrived from Corvallis, where they had remained over Sunday, having reached that place Saturday evening.

They were at once driven from the depot to the Linn County Bank, where an informal reception was tendered them in the bank parlors. About fifty of the prominent citizens of this city were present.

Mayor J. L. Cowan welcomed the distinguished visitors in a brief speech, and introduced Col. Hogg whose great and important interests, he said, were identical with those of Albany, and whom the people of this city were doubly glad to meet.

WHAT COL. HOGG SAID.

Col. Hogg spoke at some length, referring briefly to the remarkable growth and development of Oregon, and especially of Albany, Yaquina Bay and the great Willamette Valley. The only unfortunate condition concerning the growth of this state, he said, is that progress comes too easy. None of the adverse elements to be found among the blizzards and storms of the East are to be contended with here, and success comes so easy that the fullest and most active energies toward the development of this great Western country are not exerted. It rests with Albany, he said, to determine whether or not this city is to be to the state of Oregon what Kansas City is to Missouri. The geographical conditions are the same, and with a wise and proper expenditure of energy and means a similar future is in store for Albany. Concerning the extension of the road eastward he said he had no promises to make. His company had built the road from Yaquina to Albany and eastward nearly to the summit of the Cascade mountains. They had invested their money in the enterprise, and added that it was needless to tell the people here that the road would go speedily on to an eastern connection. Referring to the recent action of the railway association's meeting in New York City relative to extending Pacific Coast lines; he said it is not a question of whether or not a trunk line will be established, but how many of such roads will be built. He said he was not here to pay idle compliments or ask any favors. The Oregon Pacific road is independent now, and is simply building for business. He expressed himself as delighted with progress of Albany and the indications of growth and prosperity on every hand. He was glad to meet his old friends who had stood by and aided this great enterprise, and thanked the people of Albany for their cordial welcome.

He then introduced Mr. George S. Coe, one of the directors, stockholders and bondholders of the Oregon Pacific Company, and president of the American Exchange Bank, also president of the New York clearing house.

Mr. Coe, who is a shrewd, pleasant appearing old gentleman, said that when Col. Hogg first told him about Oregon, he did not believe half he told him, but after seeing the country as it is he had found it more than true. He said the commerce of the Pacific coast must and would be built up, and added: "I belong now to this great West, God bless it."

James K. Place was next introduced. He is president of the Oregon Development Co., of New York, and is one of that city's prominent capitalists. He said he was so delighted with this portion of Oregon that he had almost decided to move out here to live.

H. P. Turner, attorney for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. of New York, was introduced as the youngest member of the party. His hair, however, was beginning to be silvered. He said that it was after the most bitter opposition that the Oregon Pacific Co. had at last triumphed, and

THE ROAD IS NOW A SUCCESS. He is one of New York City's prominent attorneys and capitalist as well. He said he had two points of advice to give to the people of Oregon: "First, 'do not waste your wealth by the destruction of timber and natural advantages.' Second: 'Keep your credit untarnished.' A state, he said, whose constitution did not permit the repudiation of a state debt would always find abundant capital knocking at her doors for investment.

Judge Strahan then in behalf of the citizens of Albany again welcomed the visitors to the city, and assured them that the earnest wishes, the sympathy and material assistance on the part of the people here would be with them in the completion of this great undertaking.

The meeting was then resolved into an informal affair and the visitors shook hands and conversed with old and new friends before leaving.

The entire party consisted of President T. E. Hogg, Vice Presidents Wm. M. Hoag and Wallace Nash, Geo. S. Coe, James K. Place and H. P. Turner.

They will go to Yaquina to-morrow, from which place they will go to Portland and then return to New York City.

PRE-HISTORIC RELICS.

What Some Scientists from Princeton College Found in Eastern Oregon.

Recently an account of the explorations of a party of scientists from Princeton college who were on a tour through Oregon was published in the HERALD. Some of the party stopped a few days in Albany and were delighted with a report of their discoveries, which contain much information valuable to the scientific world. Their investigations lay chiefly in the John Day lake region. Their report concludes with this out line of the extent of the discoveries made:

"Could we reproduce a view of that ancient Oregon when John Day lake existed we should find ourselves in a very strange animal world. There were little three-toed horses hardly larger than donkeys, rhinoceri, camels, peccaries and a great assemblage of large and fierce animals, not to mention hosts of little rabbits and squirrel-like creatures. The animals of this time were all rather small, the largest being the entelodon, a beast not unlike the hippopotamus in size and general appearance. As the list shows, this assemblage and a very oriental character. The climate was perhaps rather milder than the present, and the forests, of which the leaf beds on Bridge creek give ample illustration, were like those now found in the warmer parts of the United States. This wonderful museum of a buried world has been sealed up by subsequent lava floods, and is now accessible only on the sides of canyons and valleys, where streams have cut down through the overlying masses. The result of our summer's work was nearly two tons of the fossil remains of these animals, a striking proof of the vast number of them which have been preserved."

An Oregon Beauty.

A Paris correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch does not think that the lovely Miss Mattie Mitchell, daughter of the United States senator from Oregon, and probably the most beautiful of all the American girls famed for their charms who have visited Europe within the past few years, ever received more genuine and gratifying homage paid to her beauty than she won at one of the recent dinner parties in Paris. It was an entertainment given in honor of Russel Harrison, and took place just before the departure of the president's son from Paris. Benjamin Constant, the great French painter, was one of the guests at the dinner and being placed opposite Miss Mitchell, was greatly struck with the artistic mould and proportions of the American beauty's arms and throat as well as by her finely outlined features and brilliant eyes. "Had I but the pleasure of painting her portrait, madame," he exclaimed with enthusiasm, "I should be sure, with such an original, to produce a masterpiece." Mrs. and Miss Mitchell will remain through the remainder of the summer in Paris, and will sail for the United States next October.

The Brownsville Riot.

The excitement at Brownsville over the "holiness" riot does not seem to have entirely subsided. No arrests were made by the sheriff as the parties who tore down the tent could not be identified. Rev. Ellis was at Halsey yesterday and swore out warrants for the arrest of one or more parties supposed to have been connected with the affair. Ellis is said to be somewhat of a puglist himself and has been engaged in several rows since he has been running his camp at Brownsville.

Small Blaze at Brownsville.

The other day at Brownsville occurred what might have been a serious calamity in the barber shop of J. Willson. A customer of the shop after taking a bath in a rear room fitted up for the purpose, turned out from the bath tub the water, but neglected to extinguish the lights of the heating apparatus which became intensely hot, exploded the oil tank, the contents of which were scattered over the rooms and in a moment furiously blazing. Fortunately the fire was extinguished before great headway was attained or much damage done.

Timber Land.

The St. Helens Mist says: Timber lands in the lower part of Columbia county, Oregon, that could recently have been bought from the government for $2.50 per acre, are now being sold at from $20 to $30 per acre, and many of the owners will not sell for that. This shows to what figures good timber land in Columbia county is reaching, and those that have been fortunate enough to secure a piece have an investment that beats stock in a bank.

A Serious Accident.

A gentleman from Lebanon states that Frank Wheeler and James Smith who live in Eastern Oregon were crossing the mountains last week with their families on their return from the valley, when they met with a serious accident. They were forced to stop to remove a large tree that had burned down and fallen across the road, when another tree fell upon the team, killing one horse and breaking the wagon. The tree fell upon the spot where the children had been standing a few minutes before. They had been driving four horses and still had horses enough so that by patching up the wagon they could drive out.
