OVER THE WIRES.
Further Particulars of the Burning of a Steamship.
FLATHEAD INDIAN TROUBLES.
Old Weather and Snow in the East—The Trouble Over Corporal Tanner's Rescue Not Yet Ended.

KINGSTON, (Ont.), Oct. 24.—The latest news from the steamer Quant, which was burned to the water's edge about three miles from Deseronto, while on her way to Picton, about six o'clock last evening, is that eight lives were lost, including Captain Christie, his mother and young brother Charles, a lady's maid and a young man named Dwyer, of Trenton.
The fire, it is supposed, started in the furnace room, and spread quickly to the whole boat. The captain ran her ashore, only a short distance away, where she lies almost entirely destroyed. All the freight and baggage were burned.
It is learned that three deck hands on the vessel were also lost. The engineer is badly burned. He is unable to account for the fire, which originated in the engine room.

FLATHEAD INDIAN TROUBLES.
Farmers in the Vicinity Petition for Protection from Violence.
HELENA, Mont., Oct. 23.—Governor White is in receipt of an official report from Washington of the recent Indian trouble on the Flathead reservation. It gives the Indians' side of one of their tribes last summer. From all reports the trouble is not yet over. The farmers residing in the vicinity of the reservation have prepared petitions to the governor for protection. They claim that a band of the Indians frequently get drunk and roam restlessly around, threatening to avenge the loss of their murdered brother. Investigation into the case shows that the Indians obtain their liquor from some of the white people in the vicinity. The complaints have been somewhat numerous of late, and the governor has recommended that two companies of soldiers be stationed on the reservation. The ranchers and farmers' wives and children are uneasy whenever the Indians become boisterous.

THE PENSION CONTROVERSY.
Further Developments of Interest Likely to Emerge.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—It is thought the controversy between Secretary Noble and Corporal Tanner over the latter's management of the pension office is not yet at an end. It is understood that more letters and further correspondence will be published, and that the subject is likely to occupy considerable public attention during the week. More feeling is evidently entertained by the parties directly interested than on the part of the public, for, as far as the body of the people is concerned, very little feeling is expressed. There is a regret among his friends that ex-Commissioner Tanner had said so much on the subject, and his admirers have very materially decreased in number. Miss Tanner, daughter of the late commissioner, still holds the position of confidential clerk to commissioner of pensions.

AT THE BAYONET'S POINT.
Tracklayers Driven Back to Oklahoma by U. S. Troops.
WICHITA, Oct. 24.—There is an excited crowd at Kingfisher, Indian territory. Yesterday the tracklayers of the Rock Island road reached the Oklahoma line. There they were met by United States troops and driven back to Kingfisher at the point of the bayonet.

COLD WEATHER IN THE EAST.
A Light Fall of Snow Reported Several States.
WINCHESTER, Va., Oct. 24.—It has snowed most of the day, with the thermometer near the freezing point. Thirty-six years ago to-day snow fell to the depth of fourteen inches, breaking down trees and shrubbery. Dispatches from Staunton and Harrisburg report that the weather has been extremely inclement all day, alternately raining, hailing and snowing.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at Foshay & Mason's Drugstore.

OREGON SCHOOL LANDS.
The Burden of Proof as to Filing on Indemnity Selections Fixed.
A Washington dispatch says the Assistant Commissioner Stone rendered a decision in a case which involved the question of proof on school indemnity selections in Oregon. Oregon was granted every sixteenth and thirty-sixth section of land for school purposes. The law also provided in case any of these lands had been entered under the Public Land laws prior to the date of the grant, that the State should be entitled to indemnity therefor, and might make indemnity selections from any unoccupied public lands. In pursuance of this authority the State, it appears, selected in the aggregate a large tract upon which expected pre-emption filings were of record. The question at issue was whether the burden of proof of the fact that the filings expired with the State or with the parties who made the filings. The assistant commissioner holds in favor of the State, and has directed that in all such cases the pre-emptor shall be required to appear before the local land officers within twenty days after the receipt of notice and show cause why the entry shall not be cancelled, thus throwing the burden of proof upon the entrants. It is said that there are a large number of cases in the General Land Office which will thus be disposed of.

A Lost Art.
Iron Age.
Tempering copper is one of the lost arts which has been actively sought for by scientists and mechanics for years. The process has been accidentally discovered, and tests of the quality of the copper thus treated have shown most remarkable strength and wearing qualities. It will be especially valuable for use in the bearings and commutators of dynamo machines, and also for the journals of locomotives and cars. An establishment in Pennsylvania is now placing the metal upon the market.

Disarming an Unseen Foe.
"This was sometimes a paradox," as Lamlet says. Since, however, the people of America are getting lands disarmed by the use of Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its malarial poison into the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnates the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary agent to disarm the foe and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they fasten their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp, and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malarial regions, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy's powerless. Cures, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.

HELPED THE AUTHOR.
A Printer's Addition to a Wild Western Tale.
Chicago Times.
A printer told the story. "I had a good job," he said, "in a Monroe-street fiction foundry—one of those print shops where they publish stories of the 'Skeleton Hunter's Last Gurgling Gasp' order by the card. It is the rankest kind of rot and is liable to give a printer blood poisoning if he handles much of it. It is the sort of literature that induces little boys to get up in the night, steal the old man's pocketbook, buy gas and start out West to rescue the imperiled maiden from the lair of the robber chieftain and restore her to her agonized parents."
"There were twenty printers and six liar, each a full-fledged Ananias, working in the place."
The liars sat at a table in one end of the room gridding out those unwholesome stories as fast as we could put them in type. One day I got a wad of copy that was positively sickening. It was about a lovely girl who had been captured and torn from her home by a heartless white desperado and his band of bloodthirsty Apaches. The girl was in a desperate fix. She either had to marry the villain or become his wife, he didn't care which, and he was then on his way to a cave in the mountains, where he was going to have the ceremony performed.
"That night they camped in a rocky gorge 200 miles from nowhere and bound the unfortunate maiden to a tree with the usual buckskin thongs, which cut deep into her tender wrists. Then all laid down and went to sleep. In the meantime Old Zeke, the hairy scout, who was on the trail, sneaked up just at daylight, when people sleep the soundest. Zeke sailed in and killed twenty-five or thirty Indians with the butt end of his trusty rifle. He didn't want to shoot for fear he would waken the others. Then, after he had cut a notch for each corpse on his gunstock and hung the coarse, black scalp-locks to his belt, he released the girl, hoisted her under his arm, jumped into the saddle and rode away.
"He rode at full speed for forty-eight miles without stopping. When night closed in the bold scout pulled rein and went into camp. First he picketed his horse, then built a fire, fixed a corral of leaves for the girl, and got her something to eat out of his saddle bags. This was where I got in my work.
"The first thing Zeke took out of the bags was several thick slices of fresh Vienna bread with honey on them. Next came cold boiled ham, cut thin, an apple pie with a short, crisy upper crust, and last a tender spring chicken roasted a delicate brown. Mind you, he had all this stuff in a pair of staddle bags in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains, 300 miles from civilization, in the year 1836. It made me sick, but I resolved that the poor girl should have one good feed if it died for it. So I shoved in another paragraph like this, completing the bill of fare:
"After getting the girl started Zeke reached into the saddle bag and pulled out a bowl of steaming hot consommé and a broiled fresh mackerel, some deviled crabs, cold slaw, potato salad, a half fry, veal cutlets breaded, with tomato sauce, green corn on the cob, some clam chowder, stewed turkey, a portion of rice pudding, two cups of chocolate, pork tenderloin, Rochester cheese, and a bottle of Bass' ale, Saratoga chips, a plate of vanilla ice cream, a Chinese paper napkin, sliced cucumbers, some California grapes and a nickle plated nut cracker."
"Did it go?" asked an interested listener.
"No, it didn't," said the printer, sadly, "but I did." The boss came to me next morning with a prof slip and wanted to know who was writing that story. I said the author was making a stagger in that direction, but wasn't giving the girl a fair show.
"That may be," said the boss, "but if he wants to run a canteen in connection with the story we'll hire a cook and make it easier for you."
"Then he told me that I was too smart to be a printer, and had better get out where the cool air would strike me. I went."
