ABOUT SMELTING WORKS

The Dry Gulch Mining Company Wants Smelting Works in Albany and not at Gatsville.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE HERALD.

A telegram from Gatsville, dated 13th inst., published in the HERALD as well as other newspapers says, that "Don Smith, of that place, had sold to the Dry Gulch and Gold Mountain Mining Co. of Salem, a tract of land embracing 75 acres for the purpose of establishing smelting works for the Santiam mines. The Company, it is announced, will erect smelting works and a concentrator early next year." The dispatch also adds that "the flume that the surveyors are at work on will be twenty miles in length."

The above article is incorrect in every particular. The Dry Gulch and Gold Mountain Consolidated Gold and Silver Mining Company has not bought any land for such purposes, neither does it intend to build smelting works or put in concentrators. The Company was organized for the legitimate purpose of gold and silver mining, to be carried on at Gatsville, or in such districts that it may find suitable. Financially the Company is all right, owing nothing but what can be paid at a moment's notice, and has no desire or wish to enter other branches of business than that now conducted, and will lend its influence, and aid, if advisable, to the proposed smelting works to be erected in Albany; and we shall add that the gentleman, Mr. F. E. Austin, who purchased the Gatsville land is in no way connected either as an officer or director, with this company.

SOCIETY'S DOINGS.

An enjoyable social party was given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Brush Thursday evening, by their daughter, Miss Ida Brush. A number of young people were present, and a pleasant evening was passed, an elegant lunch being served.

About seventy-five guests assembled at the elegant residence of S. E. Young on Ferry street Thursday evening, the occasion being a reception tendered to Rev. W. Logan and wife, of Portland, who are visiting friends in this city. The spacious rooms were brilliantly lighted, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. An elegant lunch was served, and the affair was a brilliant social success.

A very pleasant social party was tendered M. O. Brink and wife Friday evening at their residence on Fifth street. Following were those present: Misses May Mills, Hattie Chesney, Rose Trumbull, Augusta Bridgford, Mrs. E. Elder, Grace Trumbull, Candis Conn, Lillie Rickett, Lena Dubrulle, Ceila Pennington, Cassie Montgomery, and Messrs. F. L. Kenton, J. R. Wyatt, Chas. Hart, W. S. James, John Dawson, Archie Blackburn, W. T. Wilds.

On Thursday evening an enjoyable birthday party was given at the residence of G. L. Blackburn, in honor of the 29th birthday of Mr. William Stock. The affair was a most pleasant one. The guests present were as follows: Laura Davis, Edith Balkman, Ed. Dunn, Ed. Stock and Frank Williamson, of Corvallis, Ella Whitney, Daisy Barnard, Fannie Carl, Amelia Sanders, Mary Schellman, Amelia Patton, Morris Sowers, Jas. Callahan, Al. Long, George Saltmarsh and Will Sides.

Oregon's Advantages.

An easterner writes home in this strain: Oregon possesses the greatest proportionate extent of navigable waters, has the finest harbors, the most fertile soil of any state in the Union, and above all other advantages, salubrious, healthful climate. Good health is the one great requisite; without it all else would amount to naught. Here there is no acute, no plague, no cold long winters, no long hot summers, but a nice, cool, invigorating breeze from the briny deep from one end of the year to the other. Induce your friends to come here you can have nothing to regret. There is no danger of Kansas hot winds, Nebraska's hail storms, Alabama's yellow fever, Missouri's ague, Dakota's blizzards or Mississippi's negroes."

Returned from Astoria.

Capt. E. J. Lanning returned last evening from Astoria, where he went with Civil engineer W. B. Barr for the purpose of surveying the route of the Albany and Astoria railroad from Tillamook to Astoria. The people down there are most favorably disposed toward the Albany & Astoria road, and the prospects are very encouraging for a speedy rail connection between this city and Astoria.

Real Estate Sales.

Among other recent sales made by E. G. Beardsley at his office on Broadway street are noted the sale of lots 3 and 4, in block 9, of the Fair Dale addition to Albany, purchased by James F. Haswell, the superintendent of the new woolen mills. Also the sale of thirteen lots in the north addition to Astoria, purchased by Albany men. These lots have also increased in value $10. There are only eleven left. Do not delay the selection of your lots in this addition.

Art Gallery for Harrisburg.

J. G. Crawford went to Harrisburg last night, where he will open a branch photograph gallery in that city for several weeks.

AT THE FRONT.

The Work of Construction on the Oregon Pacific—Heavy Snow Fall.

GATESVILLE, Nov. 23.

About 50,000 ties are now ready for delivery between Mill City and Gates.

F. E. Austin's addition to Gates has been placed upon the market. P. Collins of Gates died on the 19th inst. of dropsy. He leaves a wife and five children.

No packing has been done to the mines for several days. Three feet of snow is reported at Quartzville. Many miners are leaving for the district, notwithstanding the cold weather.

The track is now laid a mile and a half beyond Britenbush, and it is expected will reach the side track by Tuesday next. The bridge is completed and is a fine structure.

The bents and piers of the Bowler Creek bridge are already in, and the track will be there within ten days.

Orman & Crook expect to finish all work this side of the abandoned tunnel by December 20. J. Antonelle's contract will be finished by December 10.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

The following real estate sales were recorded yesterday: J. L. Cowan to G. W. Gobony, lots 3 and 7, block 4, Cotton's addition to Lebanon, $200. J. M. Ralston to G. W. Gobony, lot 5, block 24, Ralston's addition, and lot 5, block 28, Ralston's 2d addition to Lebanon, 200. John Nichols to E. Kirken-dall, 1/4 interest in lot 4, block 11, Ralston's addition to Lebanon, 1000. A. P. Blackburn to John Nichols, interest in lot 4, block 11, Ralston's addition to Lebanon, 2500.

TRAVEL ADVERTISEMENT BUSINESS.

In answer to the article published in yesterday morning's HERALD, and signed by Curran & Monteith, we, the citizens of Albany, deem it right and just that we should make some answer to the same in behalf of the citizens, whereby the general public may know the true situation of the matter.

In the first place, Messrs Curran & Monteith say that their advertisement, inserted under the citizens' advertisement in the Daily Oregonian, was simply a business deal, which we admit was true, and was done solely for the purpose of deceiving the general public and thereby reaping the benefits to be derived from the advertisement the citizens were paying for, which in the beginning goes to show to the public how generous this firm propose to be in matters of public spirit and enterprise.

In this connection it might be added that one real estate firm of Albany alone have expended more in one month for the purpose of advertising the resources of Albany than the firm of Curran & Monteith have in any one year. As for advertising public enterprises the people of Albany have yet to learn that this firm has given as much for public improvements as a dozen or more citizens who were present at the meeting when the advertising space was ordered to appear blank.

In the second place this firm of Curran & Monteith ask what right a number of real estate men and their friends have to hold a meeting and authorize the Oregonian to remove from its columns an advertisement which the citizens of Albany paid for, and many of whom desire it to continue. Now in answer to this query we will say that if the writer of the above had been at that meeting as he was requested to be, he would not ask this question, for if he had been present he would have seen there a large attendance of Albany's best citizens, many of whom were not connected with any real estate firm and men, too, who have the best interests of the city at heart, men who desire to see the city of Albany prosper. This is the class of men who voted to have the space in the Oregonian appear blank, and this is the class of citizens, too, who did not desire to see their advertisement which they were to pay for mixed up with any real estate firm's advertisement, as it was, as they were advertising the city and not a real estate firm. And we hereby publicly denounce the business methods employed by this firm of Curran & Monteith, and particularly the scheme which they practiced in obtaining this contract from the Oregonian.

Sipped in the Mud.

The Benton Leader says: We have been informed that a young man living near here had induced a girl fifteen years old of Linn county to run away with him a few days ago, stating that if she would go to Seattle with him she would be treated royally. The couple had come as far as Albany, when relatives of the young lady in Corvallis gained information of the affair, interfered and took her home. The young man made himself sufficiently scarce and also returned home.

THE NATIVE RED MEN

A Serio-Comic View of the North American Indian.

THEIR WONDERFUL APPETITE

Their Hunting Grounds Have Been Cut Up Into Corner Lots—Indian Burying Ground Near Albany.

It was a sad day in the history of the North American Indian when he first made the acquaintance of Christopher Columbus. It is a fact however, that the Noble Red Man supposed Christopher and his attendants to be spirits from the Happy Hunting Grounds, and he was, therefore, received with more respect and veneration than would otherwise have been accorded him. Christopher recognized the fact, and on his next voyage brought over several barrels of spirits in a liquid state, that not only satisfied the poor, untutored savage, but made him think that the Happy Hunting Grounds of his fathers was located all around his little wig-wam.

The Noble Red Man at his very best was never an entire success as a financier. To be sure, in his dealings with the early pioneers he made several stakes in his own simple, primitive fashion, and generally managed to make it pretty warm for his adversary, still Uncle Sam got the land and the Indian got left. I might have said that he got "soup," but he didn't. We have never had any knowledge of the fact that the Indian used soup as a daily diet, though he had a wonderful appetite and could eat anything from a buffalo to a pediculus (humanus) oopitis, and a pot of boiled dogs were considered a luxury that was only indulged in by the elect of the tribe. There have been some strong objections raised to the Indian's diet, but for the life of me I cannot see why an Indian shouldn't eat a dog if he wants to, provided, he comes by the dog in a lawful manner. There are plenty of wild-eyed mongrels roaming at large with no visible means of support, who would cheerfully eat an Indian if they got a chance, and turn about it fair play. At all events a well digested fistic stewed away on the inside of an average Indian does more toward the advancement of civilization and Christian religion than goes out in the back alley and howls all night at the moon; but this is diverging from the subject.

The North American Indian, the wild, untutored savage, who is supposed to have arisen from his simple couch two or three hours before daylight and gone to some towering cliff and stood upon a rock in order to inhale the first sweet breath of the new-born day has faded from among us—he is a relic of the past, and many moons have traveled over his ashes. In his place, however, we have the Government Pet, a half-civilized sort of a cuss who takes the world easy; he also takes the rations and clothing that the government supplies, with the same easy grace.

I am acquainted with several of these modern children of the forest, they reside over on the Siletz reservation, in Benton county. One of them, a young buck of twenty-two or three summers, is a great-grandson of the brave old warrior, Bucking Tiger. The name has degenerated now to simply John Smith, but the young man still has some characteristics of his noble ancestor, and "bucks the tiger" several evenings every fall after hop picking. Owing to causes that were best known to the early pioneers, there was no correct census taken of the Indian population of the state. According to the latest reports of the Indian commissioner, however, the number of Indians now existing in the whole United States is 202,620. The number figured out as scattered about in Oregon is 5,055, 2, only a trifle more than were put to sleep by Mad Anthony Wayne in one of his historical excursions.

Old "Indian Pete" was the last of the Calipooias, a powerful tribe, who once pursued the festive deer and chased the fleet-footed antelope along the banks of the Willamette where the city of Albany now stands. He was a mighty chief in those early days, but with the coming of the whites he acquired a few of their virtues and none of their vices and died before his time—and before the time of bottled cars and other appurtenances of Albany. The fact that there is a sort of diametrical incompatibility between the encroachments of civilization and the glory of the Indian life is exhibited in the decline and fall of the Calipooia Indians. All that is left of them is a few piles of bones, beads, arrow points and other belongings of the departed warriors, which rest in the tribal burying grounds about a mile and a half below the city of Albany on the banks of the beautiful Willamette, and these seem destined not even to be allowed to rest in peace for the writer has heard of a scheme to exhume a few dozen of these skeletons, and after varnishing them neatly to sell them to a school of anatomy for $5 75 apiece, with a prize in the way of tomahawk and scalp attached, or a bunch of arrow heads thrown in.

The knowledge that has become scattered around that the Indian loves natural labor is a mistake. He loves whisky and tobacco, and has a fair respect for bacon and corn bread, but there his love is exhausted, and he depends principally upon the government and his signaw for support.

But even this poor representative of the noble race is rapidly fading away. The hunting grounds have been sacrificed to the rustling, busy, naughty white man, who has cut it up into corner lots, and the Indian is doomed. The wild birds of the forest sing his requiem, and the soft, sweet voice of the brook that flows past the bones of his fathers seems to be calling him home. And the little decimated band stands so close to the edge of the stygian river that separates earth from immortality that the shout of the departed warrior is feebly answered by his children.

J. TIMOTHY SNOODGRASS.

A VETERAN SHOWMAN.

An Interesting Interview With Billy Arlington, The Pioneer Minstrel.

Thinking that some reminiscences from a pioneer showman of the Pacific coast would be of interest to the general reader, Billy Arlington, the veteran showman, who has arranged to give an entertainment for the benefit of the Albany fire department at the opera house Monday evening, was interviewed at his hotel yesterday by a HERALD reporter.

"How long have you been in the show business, Mr. Arlington?" was asked. "Nearly all my life. I began at the age of 18 in New York City and have been before the public continuously since. My first engagement of importance was with Geo. N. Christy, the founder of minstrelsy. We were located on Broadway, and the famous James Unsworth and Eugene were in our company. "In the fall of 1860 the company made a tour through the south. At Charleston a secession meeting was held at the Mills House, and we serenaded 20,000 people from the hotel balcony and I attended a banquet in the evening at which Jeff Davis, Robert E. Lee, and others were present without even knowing the object of the meeting."

Mr. Arlington founded the Arlington, Leon, Keiley & Doniker Minstrel Co., helped build two opera houses in Chicago, and came to the Pacific coast in 1875 with the famous Ben Cotton, and played the part of comedian with Tom McGuire at a salary of $250 per week.

He afterwards made a trip through Oregon and the coast with Montgomery Queen's circus, in which Patti Rosa was then the leading star.

"You have evidently traveled over a good bit of this continent?" "Yes; in my travels I stopped in New Mexico. Most of the people lived in adobe houses and in barns. It reminded me of Hamlet's soliloquy "to be or not to be." A Mexican offered to trade me a little burro for an admittance to the show, but as the little beast was busily engaged in chewing up a linen ulster I did not interfere with this request. The burros are harmless—If the children fall they can climb on again over their ears. I shipped one home to my little girl in New York. The people in that country did not know what a burro meant. The shipping agent in making out his statement, wrote: A bureau short and a donkey over."

"Billy Emerson was one of my friends and staid with me two years. The famous Hanigan & Hart were also members of the company, also, Bobby Newcomb the famous song writer."

"Well, Mr. Arlington, how do you like Albany?" "I like it very well indeed, I was here years ago, and it is pleasing to return and find Albany developed into a thriving metropolitan city. I like the fire system—the fire lads all work in unison and that contributes largely toward making the success of any city. The people of Albany seem to appreciate the city's excellent fire department."

"I notice you don't have many mosquitoes here," he added. "Mosquitos are good boarders, they settle their bills every night. They are also good poker players; every time they draw they fill. But Minnesota is the place for mosquitos. They are so numerous that the only way I could get away from them was to get under a big caudron kettle."

"Then you had them?" "No indeed," they poked their bills right through the kettle, and I took a brick and clinched their bills on the inside."

"Then you did have them." "Had nothing—the confounded mosquitos flew away with the kettle."

"Now Billy," ventured the reporter, "I can tell you a mosquito story that will surprise you. On my return from European montis ago I was pacing the upper deck of the steamer smoking a cigar, and as I looked out to windward I saw, as I supposed, a large black cloud. It seemed to approach us nearer and nearer. It turned out to be a large flock of mosquitos. They lit on every part of the vessel, disappearing as suddenly as they came, and do you believe me, Billy, that when they went away there was not a shred of canvas left on the vessel."

"You don't mean to say that they took the canvas with them." "There wasn't a shred of canvas left."

"Oh, Mr. Reporter, that is a whopper." "A whopper, Mr. Arlington, what do you mean?" "Come to think of it you are right."

"Right? of course I am right, but why are you so confident that I am right?" "I was coming from Salem at the same time on another vessel, and the same identical flock of mosquitos that lit on your vessel came and lit on ours."

"But how do you know that it was the same identical flock?" "Because every mosquito had on a pair of canvas overalls."

Do not miss the entertainment for the benefit of the firemen at the opera house Monday evening.
