WANT CONNECTION WITH ALBANY.

Arrival of a Committee of Citizens on Baker City—A Proposed O. P. Branch.

A committee consisting of five of Baker City's prominent citizens, appointed by the board of trade of that city, for the purpose of carrying out a movement to secure railroad connection with Albany via the Oregon Pacific road, arrived in this city last night.

An informal reception was tendered the visitors. Mr. Weatherford called the meeting to order and Mayor Gowen was elected chairman, who delivered a brief speech of welcome.

Prof. Carter, on behalf of the committee then outlined the work proposed by the people of Baker City, and explained the mission of the committee. He said that they were not satisfied with one transportation line, and wanted connection with Albany via the shorter route of the Oregon Pacific railroad.

Mr. Faulstich addressed the meeting. He said: "We are going to connect with the Oregon Pacific. If they do not build to us we will build it. We propose to connect with Albany. The citizens of Albany have shown a remarkable enterprise, and the city is enjoying a wonderful growth."

Mr. Mix, who is an experienced railroad engineer, said he had viewed the route and found it practicable. The citizens of Baker City have already undertaken the work of building a railroad into their mines. The proposition, he said, was either to deflect the route of the Oregon Pacific to pass through Baker City or construct a branch line, probably the latter, which would be about 100 miles long.

Mr. Hyde said Baker City did a big business, growing trade from a wide scope of rich country, one firm alone paying last year for freight $50,000. Recognizing Albany's transportation advantages they wanted, he said, to make this city their terminal shipping point, as the Oregon Pacific road would be a much shorter and quicker route.

Mr. Tietner, secretary of the committee, read a report showing the volume of business done in Baker City. Over 500,000 tons of ore was shipped during the past year to Denver. This they want to ship to Albany. Mr. Tietner thought that at no distant day Baker City and Albany should be to Oregon what Spokane and Seattle are to Washington.

Short speeches were then made by Mr. Cowan, J. W. Cusick, F. J. Stites and Capt. E. J. Lanning. The latter said that the question of erecting reduction works had been agitated in Albany, and he thought the undertaking would be accomplished, and added: "Some of the citizens of Albany are also engaged in the work of building a railroad to Astoria along which, as well as in the Santiam mining district, which is being developed with most promising results, is to be found an abundance of coal, limestone and iron. We will cheerfully and gladly join with the people of Baker City in securing railroad connections that will tend to promote trade and aid in developing the great industries of the country."

The meeting then adjourned, and the matter was discussed informally. The visitors will remain until noon to-day, when they will return to Portland. They were pleased with the reception they met here and at Corvallis, and were highly satisfied with their consultation with Vice-President Hoag, which they thought would result in securing the proposed branch road.

It took hard work and much argument to convince the Union Pacific officials that fir possessed equal or greater strength than oak. It was finally proposed to furnish at Omaha, free of cost, enough fir to make three cars as a test. This proposition was accepted by the Union Pacific. The cars built prove a satisfactory fact—the result was the sale of 15,000,000 feet to the railway company in a short time.

TO ADVERTISE THE NORTHWEST

A Novel Scheme Proposed by the Pacific Coast Delegates in Congress.

The congressmen from the four new states and Idaho, in connection with Oregon's representatives, have developed a novel scheme in the way of working for their respective states, and they at once began to put it in practicable shape.

They propose to advertise the Pacific coast states with their resources, both natural and acquired. It was agreed to hire a building, fit it up comfortably, and establish there Northwestern headquarters, with the lathstring always out. They are willing to put up $200 a month to do this. They propose to hang out a sign bearing the words, "Northwestern Headquarters."

The building will have tables for writing, files of the newspapers, some comfortable chairs to lounge in, and a great fire on chilly evenings. The congressmen will ask the boards of trade in their respective states to send express paid samples of articles showing the resources of the states, to be placed on exhibition at the headquarters. Maps of the recently admitted territories, with full information concerning them, will be on hand for distribution, for it is the prime object to give all possible information. Another object is to entertain Northwesterners and the new members propose to set an example to the rest of the world in genuine hospitality.

"We will have a man in our employ whose business it will be to act as a guide in the city to all who come from our states," Congressman Hansbrough said in speaking of the enterprise. Another man will be on duty at the rooms who is familiar with the Northwest and who can answer all questions that strangers may ask. They will also see that a stock of all public documents is on hand, and in every way possible will try to make a congenial home for all Northwestern men, if made as complete as the originators hope.

It will be backed by senators and congressmen from the four new states, Oregon, Idaho and Wyoming. The building will be chosen within three or four blocks, from the white house, to be centrally located. An agent was given a description of the kind of house wanted, with instructions to have it ready by the last of this week, if possible.

A Circus Right at Home. An Oregonian reporter asked McMahon, the circus man, whose his aggregation was wintering and received this reply: "Up at Woodburn, I have just received a telegram from brother John, who has been at Chicago attending a big auction sale of imported animals. He got stuck on two elephants and outbid everybody. One of them is six inches longer than Jumbo, and 658 pounds heavier. They had to get an elephant's car raised two feet to get him into it and they are on their way now out here with native trainers from the jungles."

Will Be Lighted. Postmaster Rufus Thompson has ordered of the Electric Light Co. lights for the postoffice. They will prove a great public convenience, as the waiting room will then be lighted up all evening. About 60 new electric lights will also be placed in the opera house, which will light the building in a brilliant manner. These will be the new Westinghouse lamps, which give a very soft and mellow yet brilliant light.
