THE CRONIN TRIAL.

It Comes to an End at Last and the Jury Is Out.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO SKATERS
The Children Break Through the Ice and Are Drowned—Honors for the Sultan—East of the Rockies.

The Herald's Special Dispatches.
CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—On account of the illness of Mills, States Attorney Longnecker was obliged to make the closing address to the jury in the Cronin case. He began by repelling the charge of the prosecution that the Cronin section of the Clan-Na-Gael has submitted a large amount of perjured testimony against the accused, and said most of the Clan-Na-Gael evildoers. He then took up and dwelt at length upon the evidence against Deegs. At 4:45 p. m. Judge McConnell finished his instructions and the jury retired.

A SAD FATE.
Three Children Meet Their Death Beneath the Ice.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 13.—Last evening three children of very respectable family, two sons of Joseph Mallette and a son of E. Mitchell, went skating and have not been seen since. They undoubtedly broke through the ice and were drowned.

Honoring the Sultan.
ZANZIBAR, Dec. 13.—Monday the sultan will be presented with an insignia of the English order of St. Michael and St. George and a grand cross of the German order of Red Eagle. All the available British men of war are waiting here for the purpose of giving escort to the sultan.

The London Strikers.
LONDON, Dec. 13.—The strikers in the gas houses of the South Metropolitan Company is progressing. Twelve hundred men were engaged to take the strikers' place, and they entered under the escort of police.

Notable Dead.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Thomas Potter, a well known citizen, died yesterday, aged 83 years. He was one of those who drew Lafayette's carriage into Washington in 1824.

GREAT MINDS AT SEA.
Intellectual Effort Is Thrown Aside While on the Ocean.

Many of the greatest minds of the world have been upon the ocean, but how few great thoughts have been conceived at sea, says the Ocean. Men of the highest genius seem to be transformed as soon as they get at a distance from land in a rolling vessel. There is an inability to control the mind while at sea, a difficulty in concentrating the attention on the task of even writing in one's diary, or reading even the most trifling fiction. From this experience the best disciplined minds are not free. When at home on land they can, without friction or disturbance, carry on mental operations even while many are talking or playing about them. Their faculties are so well poised that they obey the word of command, but at sea they can do nothing with the intellect. Were it not for the impossibility of controlling the intellectual forces a ship on a long voyage would be the best conceivable retreat for those who wish to think, or read or write.

THE CLASSIC OYSTER.
What Part the Bivalve Played in the Old Time Period—English Illustrated Magazine.

Did not Cæsar, according to some of the Germans, land in Britain at the very spot where lay the oyster beds destined to supply the tables of the Roman epicures in many an after year—to wit, at Richborough? English archaeologists still stick to Deal, but on this matter I would rather trust to the poetic insight and imagination of the Germans and to their knowledge of "what is good" in every circumstance of life especially at the table. It is infinitely romantic to imagine that Cæsar pounded over our oyster beds to reach our shores, and Rutupia shall always have my suffrage as the place of his landing. It was a great day entirely for the Germans of the imperial city—to anticipate matters a little in respect to the adjective—when Julius first flushed the Rutupine beds. Until then the Romans had eked out a miserable substance on the yield of the Lucrine rocks and the Circæan promontory. Sergius Orata says Piny was the first man who went in for osteroculture as early as the time of L. Crassus, the orator; and Sergius, according to Piny, made a very good thing out of his Lucrine. But when the British natives came it was all over with the Italian natives.

For oysters served in the most delicate and appetizing styles go to the Delmonico Restaurant.

FROM LAKE COUNTY.

Surveying for the Proposed Eugene and Siuslaw Railroad.

WALTON, Dec. 10, 1889.
The surveying party sent out for the Eugene and Siuslaw railroad project left the head of tide Friday morning November 1st and reached Florence at noon and immediately crossed the river on a scow, then crossed the sand hills to the beach, thence up the beach about ten miles where we pitched our tent and took a combined dinner and supper badly mixed with sand from the sea shore. After a night of broken rest on the sand about 4 feet above high tide, we again took up our line of march across the sand hills to Ten Mile Lake where we arrived at noon and embarked in a couple of frail skiffs we crossed the lake arriving at Dan Linton's cabin and took possession, the next morning we plunged in the bush looking for lines and corners that had been established thirty-three years since, and after three days search we found sufficient marks to justify the establishing of a township corner, and proceeding to business we found some very fine country, Fiddle creek and Bear creek and some bench land between the two creeks, but the greater portion of land is entirely worthless, very little that we could level one-fourth chain and some places could level but 5 to 7 links. On the head of Bear creek was a large body of dead cedar, the finest cedar timber I ever saw, the country has been burned over so often that very little green timber is left. The north face of a great many of the hills are covered with a growth of young alders from 3 inches in diameter down. I suppose that the heat of the sun kills the young trees on the south face of the hills before the shade protects the roots. Quite a number of alligators were seen among the men in climbing over rough places but only one of them was seriously injured. Whitaker was the unlucky man, he started down the mountain on a go as you can gate, and brought up against an old dead limb, and broke a rib from which he is suffering very much. Owing to numerous rains and swollen condition of the streams, Surveyor C. M. Collier concluded to postpone finishing the job until spring, hence on the 21st of November we started for Florence, by good luck in getting boats we got to Florence some time that night and started for home the next day.

George Krutze has traded his property in Junction and has moved in on the Putaha.
The Walton Grange met on the 4th inst and held their annual election, re-electing the most of its officers. A. E. Whitaker re-elected Master; J. L. Atkinson, overseer; A. C. Barbour, lecturer; D. Green Gay, steward; L. J. Cornelius, elected assistant steward; Oliver Atkinson re-elected treasurer; Tena Barbour, secretary; A. H. Cornelius, chaplain; A. L. Whitaker, gate keeper; Annie Pittenger, pomona; Charlotte Gay, flora; Mary Ann Whitaker, ceres; Lilla Butler, lady assistant steward.

Mrs. Tena Barbour, J. L. Atkinson and A. E. Whitaker were elected as delegates to the Lane Co. Pomona Grange.

Two new arrivals in our neighborhood, one to the wife of A. T. Davis, a son, also to the wife of Mose Mabe, a daughter, all parties doing well.

A Musical Tramp.
Here is an incident which clearly proves how extremely fallacious is the popular belief that all tramps are worthless good-for-nothings and can in no way recompense one for an act of hospitality extended to them. On one occasion a party of four men and one woman were seated in the parlor of a hotel not far from this city. Adjoining the parlor was the bar-room. Leaning against the bar, leisurely drinking, were several countrymen. At one of the tables sat a tramp half asleep. His arm was curled up, forming a support for his shaggy head, which was covered with a tattered aloof hat of ancient manufacture. Suddenly, through the half open door, there came the sound of music; the loungers stopped drinking for a moment, but almost immediately resumed their occupation. Nobody noticed the tramp. At the first sound he had raised his head from the table, and his eyes seemed glued to the door through which the music came. As it proceeded he rose and tottered toward it, but just as he entered the room the music stopped. All eyes turned on the tramp, who was making straight for the piano. Lightly running his dirty fingers over the keys, suddenly he began to play Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." For nearly half an hour the tramp sat thus, playing nothing but the choicest classical music, with a touch and execution that was itself a marvel. The listeners sat astonished and in silence that was not broken until the tramp, rising from the piano, took up his hat, and, going through the bar-room to the door, disappeared down the muddy road. Truly men are sometimes entertained by angels, unawares.

Disarming an Unseen Fox.
"It was sometime a paradox," as Lamlet says. Since, however, the people of Andes and other lands have been enabled to get Huestler's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its misty venom to poison the air, and decaying vegetation, some vegetation impregnate the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the air, and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grip, and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitter to persons dwelling in malaria-cursed localities, for it is a certain bulwark of defence against which a enemy's powerless. Cures, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.
