THE KNIFEN INQUEST.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 9.—In the Knifemen inquest to-day Edward Williams, druggist, testified that Kniffen bought a bottle of him a few days before the murder. On the morning of the murder he saw footprints in the frost on the roof of his shed. The inquest adjourned till Monday, when Professor Cornwall, of Princeton, will give the result of a chemical analysis of the stomach of Mrs. Kniffen.

ON HIS DEATH BED.

MADRID, Jan. 9.—The sickness of the infant king has assumed a most alarming phase. During the night he had convulsions and a high fever, and is extremely weak. The royal physicians have little, if any, hope of his recovery. At 2 o'clock this morning it seemed as though he was dead, but he subsequently rallied. Senor Sagasta, the prime minister, has been summoned to the palace, where he is awaiting the end.

THE DEADLY LA GRIPPE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The la grippa is spreading in this city, as is shown by yesterday's mortality list, which reached 260 deaths up to noon. This is the biggest number known in the history of the health department in twenty-four hours during the winter months, and more than in any summer months since July 2, 1872, when 351 deaths occurred, sixty-eight of which were from sunstroke. Four of yesterday's deaths are due directly to influenza. Sixty died from pneumonia, forty-two from consumption and twenty-six from bronchitis. In the cases of fifteen adults influenza was the cause death.

A BIG COCK FIGHT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A cocking main between picked birds of New York and Pennsylvania was fought near Philadelphia to-day in the presence of forty high rollers. It is said that $60,000,000 was represented by those present. The main was for $500 for each battle and $5000 on odd fights. Thirteen pairs "fell in" out of twenty-one shown by each side. Pennsylvania won seven out of eleven battles fought, which gave that state the victory.

A Fatal Lovers' Quarrel.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—William Tarrant in a lovers' quarrel to-day, shot Belle Carter and then himself. He died at once. The young woman will probably die.

The Herald's Special Dispatches.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Throop avenue Presbyterian church of Brooklyn was wrecked this morning by high winds. Heavy winds last night shook the church to its foundation, and at 4:30 this morning one of the walls fell with a crash on the three-story frame building adjoining, and brought with it death and destruction. The ruined building was tenanted by two families named Mott and Purdy. There were in it nine persons. The tenants of the frame house adjoining were alarmed last night by the manner in which the church walls shook and rattled. Their own building was considerably shaken, and it was with fear and dread that the retired. Twice during the night some of the inmates were aroused by the roaring wind, but every one was in bed and asleep when the disaster occurred. The heavy brick wall of the church fell suddenly with a crash and in a heap through the cockshell structure adjoining like a battering ram. The building seemed to be torn in twain, and instantly the shrieks and groans of the injured startled the residents for blocks around. The house was torn in such a manner that the bedroom was exposed, and in the bed, within plain view of the street, lay the dead body of Mary Purdy, borne down beneath a mass of debris.

The Handkerchief Specialist.

From The Manchester Guardian.
 The other morning, as a departing Cunard steamer was casting off its lines and swinging out into the stream at Liverpool, an elderly looking business man hastily embraced a lady, who was one of the passengers, and rushed down the gang-plank to the wharf. Going up to a melancholy leafer, who was watching the busy crowd, the gentleman drew him behind a pile of freight, and said, "Want to earn five shillings?"
 "Rather."
 "You see that lady in black on the forward deck, there?" said the gentleman.
 "Yes."
 "Well, that's my wife, going to New York. Now, of course, she'll expect me to stand here for the next twenty minutes while the steamer is backing and filling so as to wave my handkerchief and watch her out of sight. See?"
 "I understand."
 "Well, I'm to busy to feel here. Stock to buy; business to attend to. She's a little near-sighted, so I'll just hire you to wave this handkerchief instead. It's a big one, with a red border, and so long as she sees it she'll think it's me. Come up to 202 Lime street when they are well off, and I'll pay you."
 "Spain's she looks through a telescope or what?"
 "In that case you'll have to bury your face in the handkerchief and look as though you were weeping."
 "That'll be two shillings and sixpence extra."
 "All right. Time is money. Look sharp, now. You can kiss your hands a few times; say three-pence for a kiss, and snapping his watch, the overdriven business man rushed off.
 We print this affecting little incident to call attention to the fact that the man thus employed has gone into the business regularly. He is now a professional fareweller business men and others can save valuable time and yet give their departing relatives an enthusiastic send off by applying to the above specialist any steamer day. Go early to avoid the rush.
 Disarming an Unseen Foe.
 "This was sometime a paradox," as Hamlet says. Since, however, the people of America and other lands have been enabled to pit Hostetter's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its miasmatic venom to poison the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnate the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the foe and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malarious localities, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy's powerless. Cures, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.
 Walk Upright in Life.
 The Knickerbocker Shoulder Brace will assist you. For sale by H. C. Hubbard, druggist. Call and examine them.
