The first engine to cross the Oregon Pacific bridge since the flood passed over it yesterday. This structure is uninjured.

The contract for printing the city ordinances has been let to C. W. Watts at 65 cents per page. A book of 300 pages will be made.

A called meeting of the Y. W. C. T. U. will be held at their hall at 2:30 this afternoon. All honorary members are also invited to be present.

Never before the flood were cloaks sold as cheap as they are now selling at the Revere House sample room. Call at once and see for yourself.

N. E. Young has purchased of W. W. Beck, of Seattle, 25 acres of land near that city for $13,900. Miss Sarah Althouse also bought 7 1/2 acres for $7500.

E. J. McClannahan, of Eugene, is in the city, having come down the river with a party of four men in a skiff. They are en route to Portland, and will leave this morning for that place.

Stockholders in the Albany Building and Loan Association desiring to vote proxies at the annual meeting on the 21st inst. can secure blanks for that purpose by calling upon the secretary, Jay W. Blain.

The high water damaged the race and headgates at the mills of the Santiam Lumbering Co. at Mill City to the amount of about $1200. A large amount of timber and driftwood floated down and lodged at the Mehama bridge.

He sleeps in his office and answers city calls day or night. Consultation is free and everything is strictly confidential. He can be found in his office in Blumberg's block from 10 to 12, 2 to 4 and 7 to 8.

About the Trains.

"When will the trains get through?" has been the all-absorbing inquiry in this city for several days. From the best information obtainable it may be stated that a train from Salem will likely reach this city this evening or Sunday morning. The pile driver is now at Jefferson and the track is open from there to Aurora.

There is a bad break between Harriburg and Junction, and by the time that is repaired trains will no doubt be ready to run from Portland to Roseburg, which will probably be Monday or Tuesday.

From Corvallis.

Logan Hays, Western Union operator at Corvallis, H. H. Hays and R. A. Bowman, who have been repairing the company's lines between that place and Albany, arrived last night. They have the line all up, except stretching the span across the river at this city. Mr. Hays says the government re-vestment work at Corvallis was not washed out, and that little damage was done there.

PORTLAND NEWS.

Business in the Metropolis Paralyzed by the Flood.

STORES FILLED WITH WATER.

Streets and Wharves Wrecked by the Enormous Waters—Details and Incidents of the Flood.

The Herald's Special Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Feb. 7.—The water in the Willamette river is falling rapidly, and business in the flooded district is again assuming its normal condition. Considering the great volume of water carried down by the river the damage in and around this city has been comparatively light. The heaviest losses are to saw-mill owners, who suffered considerably by having logs and lumber carried away. Many of the logs, however, have lodged along the river, and it is thought can be saved. The wharves and docks have not suffered seriously, though many of them will have to undergo repairs before they can be used, while the merchants have lost considerably from suspension of business. Their losses to goods have not been great.

It is impossible to give any correct estimate of the loss at present along the East Portland water front. Johnson's wharf, valued at about $10,000, collapsed, and a few other minor losses are reported. The first loss of life by the flood as far as known occurred at Oregon City to-day, when an unknown man was drowned. The Union Pacific line is still blocked between here and The Dalles and the connection is made by boat. The Northern Pacific trains are running on the time.

The business portion of the city, including Front, First and all cross streets, have been the scenes of great activity to-day. In the old buildings from Morrison to C. street first floors were covered with mud to an average thickness of 1/2 inch. Hundreds of men and boys have been busily engaged sweeping and scrubbing in order to get the stores in shape for the transaction of business. Sidewalks, crosswalks and wagon ways leading down to the docks and wharves are torn up in many places. From Morrison to Stark street all first floors are bare, but from Stark to a point midway between Oak and Pine they are still inundated. Below Pine they are dry again, but the street is not visible till a street is reached and the flood is again apparent. From D. street to C. the bridges are all safe. The Morrison street structure does not admit vehicles. Some boards were torn up by driftwood and the foot passenger way on the south side is damaged on the west shore. Still the main bridge is in as good condition as it was before the flood.

Johnson's wharf, between L. street and Duniway & Co.'s wharf, was almost entirely swept away last night. When the collapse came the timbers and piling leaped into the air and then came down with a crash. The railroad track between U. and N. streets has been greatly damaged, and will have to be entirely rebuilt.

HEIGHTS OF THE FLOOD. Never before was so warm a welcome extended by the citizens of Portland as greeted the re-appearance of terra firma this morning. The gauge at the foot of Stark street shows a height of twenty-seven feet above low water mark, a decline of eighteen inches from the extreme height of the flood. It is now falling at the rate of one inch per hour. The docks are all solid as far as the foundations are concerned, although some of the super-structure is damaged. None of the steamboats were injured, and so far as is known only the ship Patterdale has suffered in the least. No damage has been reported to merchandise among either First or Front street stores except to Bernham & Manner, who will lose about 40 barrels of sugar. Loss of business and the labor of raising or removing stock will of course figure among the losses. Not one of the Front street houses was able this morning to state what they will be out by reason of the flood, but doubtless the sum will not average over one hundred dollars to each firm.

All day long drays and express wagons have been hauling stock from warehouses back to the stores from which it was taken during the rise. In many places on Front street the pavement has lost its foundation, and consequently numerous depressions are found. One large one caused a man to get nearly drowned at the corner by Parke & Lacey's on Front street. The hole is large enough to let a wagon go through. No drift has come down the river to-day. Damages on the east side to wharf owners, lumbermen and others are more serious and may amount to $30,000.

Sandy Olds' Case.

PORTLAND, Feb. 7.—The attorneys for Sandy Olds, who is to undergo his third trial for the murder of Emil Weber, to-day filed a motion for a change of venue on the grounds that the court and press of the city are prejudiced against the defendant.

Building and Loan Association.

The regular annual meeting of the Albany Building and Loan Association will be held on the 21st inst., that date completing the first year's business. The financial statements which will be presented by the secretary will show a good healthy condition of the association, and a prosperous year's business. This is one of the most reliable and solid institutions of the kind in Oregon, and has been managed in a most satisfactory manner during the past year.

Above High Water Mark.

As the high water has now receded and the lily of the valley has once again shown its beautiful foliage, and the turtle dove which was sent out from the ark has returned with the green leaves of the maple, we may now feel assured that the high waters are over and that the ones who purchased lots in Goltra's Park addition, the highest and most slightly addition around the city, are safe and always above high water mark. Lots for sale in this addition on the installment plan, $30 down and $10 monthly. Burkhardt & Malin, agents, Albany, Oregon.

Overturned in the River.

G. L. Savage had made arrangements yesterday to take George Dickinson to Salem in a boat. He got into the skiff near the saw-mill and proceeded to row up the river, when the boat was upset. Mr. Savage clung to its sides and was carried by the current below the Oregon Pacific bridge. Wallace Mead, a boy who saw his predicament, went to his rescue in another boat and succeeded in saving him from a watery grave. It is needless to add that Mr. Dickinson was very glad he had not embarked before the accident.

The Wires Up.

At last through telegraphic connection has been re-established, and the Herald presents its readers this morning with a tolerably complete telegraphic news service. To the people of this city who have for a week been entirely cut off from communication of any kind this will not be unpleasant to take along with their toast and coffee.

Fire Engine Repaired.

Wm. Miller, engineer of Albany Engine Co. No. 1, who has been putting in the new parts to take the place of the defective ones in that company's steamer, finished the job yesterday and the engine is now ready for service. This will be a relief to the firemen as well as the public generally, as heretofore the protection of the city from fire depended upon one engine only, and the hook and ladder company.

The First News.

The Herald this morning furnishes its readers with the first news from the outside world since the flood cut off all avenues of communication a week ago. Our space is given over to such news as possible this morning to telegraphic news, as this is something the public wants just now.

F. M. Kizer, Deputy.

THE GREAT WILLAMETTE VALLEY.

The Richest and Most Desirable Region on the Pacific Coast.

The St. Joseph (Mo.) Herald pays the Willamette Valley this deserved tribute: The Willamette Valley of Oregon is the largest, richest and most desirable region on the Pacific coast. It is a valley sixty miles wide by one hundred and twenty long, bounded on the east by the Cascade mountains, some peaks of which rise over 12,000 feet above the valley and are forever covered with snow; and on the west by the coast range of mountains which are now over 2,000 feet high. These mountain walls protect the valley from winds and render its climate more regular and even than that of places exposed to the ocean winds directly, like San Francisco.

This valley has a very regular and mild climate. The mercury rarely falls below 25 above zero. When it gets low enough to freeze the sky clears off and the sun shines warm, so that by 3 P. M. the mercury will stand in the shade from 54 to 70 degrees. This gives weather very much like the calm, mild Indian summer that is enjoyed in Missouri and Kansas during October. When the wind veers around to the west, or rather the sea breeze, it grows warm and cloudy, the mercury stands about 60 to 70 and it rains. This is the average winter weather. Summer during July and August is dry and warm, with possibly just enough rain to prevent things from drying up.

Through the center, generally, of this valley, from north to south, runs the Willamette river emptying into the Columbia river, which flows from the east part of the head of the valley and drains its waters into the Pacific ocean some seventy miles west. Very many brisk rivers run from the mountains, on either side of the Willamette. The Willamette is navigable for ocean ships up to Portland and for large steamers ten miles south of Portland, where are the Willamette Falls. Above these falls large steamers navigate the river at all seasons and are able to pass around the falls by a system of locks and dams. These falls are the grandest scenes in the world. This splendid river falls some forty feet over numerous natural dams of granite. It is a glorious and astounding spectacle. The power afforded by the falls is more than a hundred per cent. greater than that of the falls of St. Anthony. The city of Portland, ten miles off, is lit by their power; many mills and factories are run by it.

Until within the past few years this region has been comparatively overlooked and neglected, yet the energy and wealth of the few people who occupy the valley have done much to develop and to ornament some parts of it, and a great tide of immigration is now rapidly settling up that rich western region, which causes a consequent growth of the cities and the country generally.

Disarming an Unseen Foe.

"This was sometimes a paradox," as Lamlet says in Hamlet, however, the people of America and other lands have been enabled to pit Hostetter's Stomach Bitters against that unseen foe, malaria, it is no longer a paradox, but an easy possibility. Whatever malaria evolves its misty venom to poison the air, and decaying unwholesome vegetation impregnate the water, there, in the very stronghold of miasma, is the auxiliary potent to disarm the foe and assure efficient protection. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, no matter how tenaciously they have fastened their clutch on the system, are first forced to relax their grasp and eventually to abandon it altogether. But it is preventive force that should chiefly recommend the Bitters to persons dwelling in malarial localities, for it is a certain buckler of defence against which the enemy's powerless. Cures, likewise, dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney and bilious ailments.
