THE TEACHERS.

The Second Day's Proceedings of the Institute.

ROLL OF TEACHERS PRESENT.

A Detailed Report of the Day's Session—The Exercises at the Opera House.

The second day's session of the teachers' institute yesterday was, like the first, well attended and full of interest.

The Institute convened at nine o'clock with Supt. Curl in the chair and was opened with the song "Dip, Boys, Dip the Oar."

The Value of School Libraries. forming the first topic of the session was introduced by Mr. Hickman.

The public schools ignore too much the influence of good literature. Our schools should have libraries comprising the standard poets, lives of eminent men, gems of thought.

Mr. Brown raised a question as to the propriety of a teacher using personal funds for school advancement.

Mr. Lougare thought the sacrificing teacher will receive his reward in better positions.

Mr. Reynolds said the dictionary should be supplied and a cyclopedia furnished. The teacher can supply much with little outlay if a little effort, patience and perseverance be applied.

Mr. Campbell: Children should be well taught in the history of our country in order that important questions of the day may read understanding.

Mr. Adams: "Reading maketh a full man," therefore, make reading the principal study.

Mr. Hickman suggested several publications of standard works, that may be secured at nominal cost.

Miss Crossett referred to the "School World" and "School days," as valuable aids.

Mr. Wright: Purity of thought and expression on the part of the teacher, must be combined with good literature in order to attain the highest good.

Messrs. Russell and Barze made statements concerning the means of raising funds for libraries, by social and exhibitions.

A rising vote proved beyond doubt that the Institute favors libraries.

Supt. Baker emphasized Mr. Wright's thought, the teacher must communicate ideas, either original or borrowed, and present them in an interesting manner.

Mr. Leathman encouraged libraries by precept and example.

Mr. Garland would teach even young pupils to use encyclopaedia.

The subject "Language" was introduced by J. B. Leathman, who said that language should be made a principal study instead of subordinate. A teacher's example overcomes many errors. Teach language in every recitation.

Miss Godley thought the true teacher will direct the use of language in very small children.

Mrs. Thrall heartily endorsed language with small children. Use oral exercises until children are taught to write, which part of the education must commence with the first reading lesson.

Mr. Edom opposed the able remarks of teachers for the sake of variety. In drawing maps, printed letters are used exclusively, hence children should be taught to print. An animated discussion followed, in which the teaching of print was harshly treated.

After ten minutes recess, Prof. C. A. Walker read an excellent paper on "The Teacher's Preparation." He said preparation for class recitation must be recent and thorough. The teacher must be a systematic student. Cultivate the ability to arouse fresh thought on the part of pupils. Seek not to serve your pupils with "cold victuals."

AFTERNOON SESSION. The afternoon session opened at 1:30.

"Technical Grammar" was presented by A. J. Garland, of North Brownsville. He said: "Grammar as a reflective study and should be preceded by such elementary composition. No discussion."

R. L. Wright, of the Santiam academy of Lebanon, read an interesting paper on "A Plan for Skilled Workmen." It is an erroneous idea that every one can teach. Beyond text books, beyond all instruction, the personality of the teacher must be marked. The immoral teacher cannot communicate morality.

Comparative Merits of Mixed and graded schools. This subject was ably presented by W. T. Van Scoy, of Jefferson. Several evils of both schools were suggested with remedies.

Mr. Lougare believed that the graded system should prevail throughout all districts.

Prof. Walker asked for continued discussion on subjects presented.

Mr. Egan is a strong advocate for graded schools. The graded system creates a strong incentive to study. There are many obstacles in grading the schools in rural districts.

The question arose as to what should be done if a pupil proved reticent in declining to study certain branches.

Mr. Green thought he would first try "moral suasion" on the parent. Combined effort on the part of parent and teacher should conquer the child.

Prof. Bell was called for and responded, saying: "If the boy were no larger than I, I should see that he studied that branch if he came to school."

judgment is generally guided and regulated by it.

Mr. Hunsaker, of Marion, would use said means if possible, harsh measures should follow extreme cases only.

Prof. Gilbert, of Lebanon, one of the oldest teachers of the state, was called upon to speak to the institute. He responded in a very pleasing manner.

The question of "Legal Rights and Duties of Teachers" was discussed with much interest.

D. V. S. Reid presented the school law establishing the fact that the teacher's duty is to compel compliance with rules and regulations as set forth in the school laws.

Mr. Wright asked whether or not a teacher could be compelled to teach without apparatus. Answered in the negative.

Mr. Brown said: It is the right or duty of teacher to inculcate true method and womanhood.

The critic's report then followed. Cordial invitations were received and accepted to visit the new Marquette hall and electric light work. The institute went in a body.

Committee on resolution: A. J. Garland, J. B. Leathman, Anna Godley.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening programme was opened by orchestra music.

C. H. Hart sang one of his pleasing solos with guitar accompaniment.

Ora Vaughn entertained the audience with a comic description of "Traveling on a Canal Boat."

The song "Little Barefoot" was rendered very effectively by Addie Gibler in costume.

Addie Libbie, of Jefferson, gave a recitation.

The Misses Shultz played an instrumental duet in an attractive manner.

Prof. Gilbert, of Philomath, delivered an interesting address on "The School—The College." The college, he said, stands as an essential factor in education. The public school is the foundation. It is necessary to the college. Together the college and the public school form a perfect whole. Children are apt imitators, consequently we want pure, upright teachers.

A well executed piano solo by Miss Stratton, preceded a recitation by Mamie Hyde of the Albany public schools.

Lewis Barze delivered, in a humorous manner, "Davis Green and His Flying Machine."

The Misses Sanders rendered a bright, sparkling waltz duet, much appreciated by the audience.

Rev. T. G. Brownson, formerly of Albany, now of McMinnville, addressed the audience on the subject of "Cultivated Women." All professions and lines of work are now occupied successfully by women. Before the educated American girl is a vast field of work for good. The major part of our educators are women; hence upon them rests the gravest responsibilities.

Miss Lora Vance played a soft melody, and was followed by Miss Edith Aebly, who recited in a clear, distinct voice, "The Mob."

The male quartette sang "Galilee" so effectively that an enthusiastic encore was given and responded to by the gentlemen very satisfactorily.
