REVOLUTION OR WAR.

In the opinion of those who are best qualified to judge, the Czar of Russia has reached that point where he is compelled to choose between a foreign war and a revolution. The outrages committed upon the political exiles at Kara, in Siberia, have added fuel to a flame of revolution which was already burning fiercely enough to threaten the imperial throne, and it is believed that unless the Russian government can create a diversion by means of a foreign war a revolt will blaze out which will not be stayed until the imperial power has been destroyed.

A very significant fact in connection with recent outbreaks in Russia is the closing of the colleges and universities by the express orders of the Czar. It shows that he and those who are his advisers are especially fearful of the intelligent and educated classes among the Russians. The Czar knows, as does every one else, that the Russian peasant, the emancipated serf, is hardly one degree above the dumb animals, and that if he can have an adequate supply of creature comforts, enough to eat and drink and a place to sleep, he is not in any danger of initiating a revolt.

When there is a rise in the social scale, however, and when the middle classes and their children begin to become restive, then there is danger, for they are capable of appreciating the curse of tyranny and the blessings of liberty and a constitutional government. It is on this account that the colleges have been closed and the students dispersed.

A declaration of war would doubtless postpone the evil day, for in that event even the discontented and rebellious would be likely to rally to the support of their common country. They would then be fighting, not for the Czar and the maintenance of his authority, but for Russia; and the most active nihilist who lives is as devoted to his country as is the Czar himself. It is not a healthy condition of things when a resort must be had to a foreign war to prevent revolt. That cohesion which is so necessary to a prosperous and contented country cannot be supplied, if lacking, by pressure from the outside, for the pressure cannot be permanent, and when it is removed disintegration is sure to follow. The close of a foreign war would leave Russia no more homogeneous than at present.

The French statesmen seem to be endowed with remarkably keen appreciation of the benefits, to the state, of an increasing population. Recently an alarm was created over the report that the increase was dwindling very small, and the Chamber of Deputies, to rectify the matter proceeded to pass a measure according a premium in the form of exemption from taxation to all families of seven children and upwards. When, however, the law was put into execution, it was found that, contrary to the general understanding, that state would not consent to bear the deficit in the revenue created thereby. Consequently, in each community the inhabitants not blessed with the requisite number of olive branches have had to pay all the taxes for their privileged neighbors, in addition to their own. In some parts of France, such as, for instance, Brittany, where large families are common, the ratepayers with less than seven children have had to submit to an increase of taxation to the extent of fifty, and even sixty, per cent. The Chamber, however, has recently declined to repeal the measure, or even to modify it, until after the passage of the bill now under discussion, which provides for the taxation of bachelors and old maids. It is estimated that the revenue to be derived from this source will permit the diminution of the onerous state dues that are now exacted from the unfortunate fathers of small families.

SWITZERLAND must be the tramps earthly paradise, for it is said that even the authorities accord consideration to the tramps. One of the latter happened to be bitten in the hand some time ago by the watch-dog of a house which he had incautiously entered for the purpose of exercising his profession. Although the bite was not of a severe nature, yet the tramp, whose dilapidated and repulsive appearance was sufficient to excite the wrath of even the mildest-mannered dog, had the nerve to bring suit against the owner of the inhospitable quadruped, and to claim damages on the ground that the bite had "incapacitated him for work." The Swiss courts at Zurich at once recognized the justice of his demands and have given a decision which should be treasured by the tramps in every part of the world. For it declares explicitly that the owner of a house is responsible for the safety of all persons who come to see him, even when the visit is for the purpose of making an appeal to his benevolence."

Golden State Bazar.

Julius Graduwohl has decided to add to his mammoth stock of crockery and fancy goods a complete line of groceries. He has en route a large invoice of sugar, and will keep a complete assortment of house groceries, and the best of coffees and teas to be had in the market for the benefit of his customers. He will also enlarge his hardware department. He informs us that he buys all his goods for net cash, which will enable him to sell goods as low as any house in Oregon, and there is no need of people going abroad when they can do as well at home, or even better.

Take Simmons Liver Regulator One Dose

WORTH

100 Dollars!

DEAR S. L. R: I consider one dose of Simmons Liver Regulator worth $100. I was constipated, had Headache, could eat nothing with satisfaction or appetite had the chills, and felt altogether out of sorts. I resorted to Blue Mass, Calomel, Quinine, and every remedy suggested, but only obtained temporary relief. One dose of S L R did me more good than $100 worth of doctors and doctoring. Resp'y, J C MARTIN

I have been a teacher for twenty years, and during that time have had repeated attacks of headache, produced by torpid Liver, and have been entirely cured by Simmons Liver Regulator. I found it to be of so mild a character in its action, as not to interfere, in the least with my duties in the school room. To those similarly situated and subject to the same, I cannot too highly recommend Simmons Liver Regulator.
