THE SILVER LEGISLATION.

At last it seems likely Congress is going to give the country something upon the silver question. The plan on which the agreement is based is to require the secretary of the treasury to purchase and coin 4,000,000 ounces of silver a month, the notes issued for such purchases to be a full legal tender and to be redeemable in coin. It was not entirely clear from the dispatches whether the coinage provision is to be insisted upon, but in either event the bullion redemption clause is to be left out, and the notes are to be full legal tender. Just what the law will be cannot be stated as yet as the many changes and amendments have left it in a chaotic shape to understand and an examination of the certified and approved bill can only be relied upon for the true situation. When the Bland act of 1878 was passed the secretary was given a discretionary power between a minimum of 2,000,000 ounces per month and a maximum of 4,000,000. This arose from the Bland act being a compromise measure. Every secretary of the treasury since that time has adhered to the minimum as strictly as though he had no option, whereas had he carried out the spirit of the law there would have been no occassion at this time for all this long discussion over the silver question. The Chronicle thinks that very adherence to the smallest possible amount has tended constantly to discredit silver, and in like ratio to give gold a fictitious value.

The Chronicle further says, and probably truly too, that unless the estimates of the silver men are very much out of the way the demand for 48,000,000 ounces of silver a year will exhaust the supply of the product after deducting from the total output the amount used in the arts and manufactures and the amount necessary for coinage for circulation. On this basis the conclusion is unavoidable, it would seem, that silver will come to a parity with gold, and when it does the only argument against free coinage disappears. Neither the Bland bill nor the proposed act is free coinage, nor is it a full and complete recognition of bimetalism; but, as when we see a boy we may prophesy a man in default of casualty, so if the proposed bill shall become a law we shall risk little in predicting free coinage as its logical and inevitable sequence.

The position that Stanley is to occupy, has at last been definitely settled to be that of Governor General of the Congo Free States. As has been said it is a place that his work for ten years has especially fitted him. He is an admirable executive officer, and no European has so wide and so exact a knowledge of the Congo country as the man who first opened it up to civilization. His new position will give him great prestige among men like Tippoo Tib, and if he is properly backed he can do more in one year to suppress the horrors of slavery than an army of inexperienced men could do in a decade.

The discovery of the sale in Chicago of large quantities of beef from diseased cattle shows the extreme difficulty of securing honest and efficient inspection of fruit products in a great city. The consumption of this tainted meat has probably caused hundreds of deaths, and the law should make some provision for the criminal prosecution of men whose greed leads them to sell such disease-breeding food. The more scientists investigate the subject of microbes the surer becomes the conviction that the majority of diseases are to be traced directly to impure food.

The report of the special agent sent to California to investigate the supposed plot to sieze Lower California, and wrest it from the control of Mexico, was made yesterday to the Attorney General at Washington. So important was it considered that its contents were kept secret to be consulted upon at the next cabinet meeting. It is said that a well defined plot was discovered, and that it implicates both Englishmen and Americans.

The amount of asking capacity that railroads develop is simply immense. Just now the Southern Pacific are levying that arrangement upon the towns along the Narrow Gauge. At Woodburn they asked seven acres for terminal facilities and $2000 in cash and at Silverton they asked $7000 and twenty acres. Other places are yet to be heard from, but they will come in with a like proportion with out a doubt. This asking is a simple business transaction, however for the places will [illegible] that it is business and money in their pockets to give what the railroads ask. The claim upon which the narrow gauge bases its asking upon towns is the fact that they intend to widen to a standard gauge and otherwise improve the road.

The announcement that the North Pacific Elevator Company [illegible] made arrangements to construct elevators along the line of the Southern Pacific in the Willamette Valley, will be news that will interest every farmer in the valley, for it means handling wheat in bulk and saving a major portion of the present sack expense.

The Marion county grand jury paid a marked compliment to the managers of the Insane Asylum—Dr. Harry Lane and his assistants Drs. Irvine and Williamson—in reporting that they found that institution "well managed and kept clean and neat condition, and everything seemed to be done for the accomodation of the patients that could be done."

If Governor Pennoyer, in selecting a successor for Judge Boise should name Hon. L. Bilyeu of Eugene, he would be honoring a Linn county boy and a gentleman of fine legal ability.

"Oh, Emma! where did you get that pretty dress?" Why, mamma, I bought it at the Ladies' Bazaar.
