The city is inflicted just now with a superabundance of street fakirs. The ventriloquist, a soap peddler in disguise, the man with the knives and rings, the lunatic boy preacher who howls on the street, all are here, much to the delight of the small boy and the disgust of people generally.

A Japanese of this city went to Corvallis a few days, sick and seeking a "Balm in Gilead." He failed to find it, and on Friday morning he departed for the land where all good "Japs" go. The burial services were unique, if not impressive to American eyes and, were defrayed by the county.

Land Trouble at Corvallis.

Corvallis is peculiarly laid out. Each block is supposed to be just 300 feet long, but in reality they overrun from four to six feet. This has caused considerable annoyance and trouble. E. W. Fisher has a deed for fifty-five feet near the center of the postoffice block, upon which he is about to erect a two-story brick, but it seems there is not that much vacant ground between two other buildings, both of which are located by surveys, but from different directions.

The First Vestibule Train.

The only solid vestibule train ever run on the Oregon Pacific will leave Albany July 4th for the end of the track and return. Ladies.

We have just received a new invoice of white house dresses, trimmed in embroidery. Call and see them at the Ladies Bazaar.

Use elegant lotion for tan.

ALBANY'S FUTURE.

Something About Her Railroads—The City's Growing Trade.

While all the Northwest is interested in railroad developments it might be of interest to the public, and especially to those looking for homes in the growing West, to refer to some of the superior advantages in this direction enjoyed by Albany. This city possesses the junction of two great railroads, the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Pacific.

The first of these roads courses the full length of the Willamette valley, passing through the beautiful valley of Southern Oregon, and the second now runs from Yaquina bay on the west into the Cascade mountains, and is reaching toward an eastern connection. The roads are under entirely different managements, guaranteeing healthy competition. This competition has given to Albany within the last two years 5 cents per bushel for wheat and a like proportion for other products of shipment, and has given to the merchants much better rates on their imports. A like competition exists between the boats of the Oregon Pacific and the Union Pacific Co. plying upon the Willamette. Her railroad to Yaquina gives her ocean connection with San Francisco, and indeed, the whole Pacific Coast, making another and still greater check against excessive railroad rates. The various fertile valleys and growing towns of the vicinity are many of them connected with Albany by branch railroad lines, and other branches are promised and some are now in course of construction.

A new line that will give Albany another ocean communication has been surveyed as far as Tillamook. The surveyors are now at work from there to Astoria. This line will be called the Albany and Astoria, and will be a most important factor in the future of Albany. Another fine feeder for the commerce of Albany will be the Scio line, which will be completed this summer. The expense of it is to be shared by the Oregon Pacific and the enterprising citizens of the district. Besides all these, it is generally understood that the Union Pacific Company will come to and through Albany, thus giving her an additional transcontinental line.

Linn county alone contains twice the area of Rhode Island, and in its rich soil and mild climate almost every kind of agricultural products grown in the temperate zone of America and Europe can be successfully raised, and attain a perfection, both as to size and quality, that is rarely found in other parts of the Union.

To the east of the Willamette, the great artery of all this country are the North and South Santiam and the Calapooia rivers. All these streams, with many tributaries, are bordered by a surpassingly rich farming country. Albany's position makes her the most natural market place for these stretches of country, and the most natural point from which to distribute supplies. Her ability by natural highways also demonstrates this this fact.

At within forty to sixty miles of Albany the finest timber in the western timber belt is found. The mountains are covered with fir, pine, cedar, larch, ash, alder and oak. The fir exceeds the supply of all other species combined. Trees attain an unusual growth, both with regard to height and symmetry of form. Perhaps nowhere else are they found so tall, straight and gently tapering, so as to fit them peculiarly for the best quality of lumber. Along the streams there are hundreds of fine locations for sawmills to put lumber into market form, and all the products of these virgin forests must find their outlet through Albany.

But agriculture and lumber are not by any means the only resources that Albany has to depend on. Linn county contains a rich mineral district in gold silver and coal.

There are many undeveloped mines in the region, the surface cropping of which indicate deposits even more valuable than those that have been worked. Several companies have been formed, which are now engaged in developing these mines.

The city is enjoying a steady growth, both in building and trade and with the present forces that are at work for her progress, her future is assured.

For Tuesday's Dinner.

To those expecting friends from abroad and wish to have something nice for dinner, we advise them to call early and select from our fine assortment early Monday morning. We will have oranges, lemons, string beans, peas, summer squash, cabbage, lettuce, radishes, onions, Royal Ann cherries, raspberries, black caps, strawberries, etc., also a fine line of lunch goods. Mueller & Garrett.

Foot Crushed.

A little daughter of J. H. McQuade was playing on the railroad track in the lower portion of the city yesterday, when the switchman threw the switch in such a way as to catch the little girl's foot between the rails crushing it severely. Dr. Maston was called and dressed the injured member.

Going Away.

The 5 and 10 cent store in the McFarland building will close up next Tuesday, June 24th, to move away from Albany. Monday will be your last day to buy tinware and notions at the low price they are selling. Come early and tell your friends what bargains they are giving.

Harriet Hubbard Ayers Recamier Balm, Cream and Powder, can be obtained at Hubbard's new drug store.

Shipping Stone.

Mr. G. L. Blackman has sold a half interest in his stone quarry recently purchased of Mr. Rainwater, to James Abraham of Portland for $3000. The latter was in the city yesterday. It is from this quarry that the stone is being taken to east Portland to build the M. E. Church. Mr. Abraham contemplates constructing a river steamer of his own to ship the stone from this quarry and the one purchased several weeks ago from Mr. Blackman. Architect Stranahan of Portland has made an inspection of the stone and pronounces it to be first-class.

The Paint Mine.

Yesterday the first machinery for Oregon's first paint mine was shipped to Turner, from which place it will be taken by wagon to the mines between the forks of the Santiam, near Lebanon. The engine will follow and the mill will be turning out what promises to be a fine quality of paint in a few days. The company will be incorporated early next week, having their principal office at Lebanon. Underlaying the ocher is a rich vein of asbestos, which will be worked also.

Many Visitors Coming.

The committees in charge of the Masonic dedication exercises in this city Tuesday, request the business men of Albany to decorate their places of business appropriately for the occasion. There will be a great throng of visitors here and the city should appear in her best attire, and the visitors given a cordial welcome.

The Narrow Gauge Extension.

A large force of men are at work on the Huntington road between Silverton and Coburg, and a lot of Chinamen came up from California on the steamer yesterday to work on that line. Trouble about securing rights of way has prevented work being started between Coburg and Springfield.

Of Interest to Horse Owners.
