the records in athletics are constantly being broken. This skill is gained, however, at the cost of increased expenditure of time and a great rent is made by could-be humorous publications at the athletic occupation of the average college student. The fact remains, however, that more robust frames and healthier men are being turned out from our colleges, by the liberal use of the oar, the base ball and even the despised boxing gloves. The state university at Eugene has an excellent appointed gymnasium in which all of these are to be found, and many more, and it would be well if all colleges and schools taught the culture of the physical as well as the mental man.
