CHANGES IN METHODS.

THE progress of the times brings in very material and multitudinous changes. Among the most marked of these are those in the motive power line produced by the transmission of power by the means of electricity. The Age of Steel says that the census of 1880 placed the number of water wheels operating as motive power in the United States at 54.404. This tally represented a total of 1,225,379 horse power. The later association of water power with electric motors has developed a source of force that is destined to be of eminent service in industrial life. The distribution of this new energy by means of wires and motors over areas tributary to our water courses will add a new chapter to the story of industrial development. It has been computed on the best data obtainable that the rivers and streams of this country averaged throughout the year over 200,000,000 horse power. The electric utilization of this power opens a field of magnificent opportunities. The Niagara project is in correspondence with the possibilities of this new energy in motive power. In Rochester, Kearney and Spokane Falls we have practical examples of its use. The lowest falls of the Genesee River are utilized by the Rochester Brush Electric Light Company, and it has 500 motors already in active service. It furnishes power to 108 tailor shops, charging all the rate of $18 per annum for one-eighth horse power Fan motors are kept in continual motion from June 1st to October 1st for $15. For 25 cents a day a small manufacturer or storekeeper has one horse power at his service, with no trouble or car of his own. Its work is steady and continuous, and its easy command in small units at a nominal cost will make its use general and probably work some important changes in our industrial facilities. The rate for two horse power is $120 per annum; $250 for five; $300 for six; $400 for eight; $475 for ten, and $700 for fifteen. The power applied at these rates is economical and steady, and involves no attention beyond the closing of a switch, and that the work of a second. It can be carried any distance in large or small quantities. The ordinance department of the National government is constructing a dam at Rock Island, Ill., in which some forty-one wheels, connected with dynamos, will carry the electric current to motors distributed in its various departments. The Des Moines rapids at Keokuk will furnish 60,000 horse power with the necessary machinery and appliance. There is practically no computable limit to the possibilities of this motive power, and its development will in time change many of the old and cumberson conditions of our varied industries.

THE extreme of cruelty seems to have been reached in the case of the murderer Kemmler, who has so long been made the buffet of the fight over the execution by electricity in the state of New York. The Tribune says a curious story about Kemmler comes from Syracuse. The stolidity with which he has borne himself heretofore, even during the time when he was within a few hours of death without any hope of postponement, since he was not aware of the application to the supreme court of the United States in his behalf until after it was made—this stolidity and apparently complete indifference to his situation have, it appears, departed, and the murderer is dejected and broken down. This is a singular phenomenon assuming that the story is correct. The execution of Kemmler by electricity is set for next week, but as he has once already been considerably nearer the fatal chair than at present, it would be natural to expect him to be fortified by his previous experience. Long contemplation of death in the form in which it awaits him seems, however, to have touched even such dull sensibilities as those of this brutal murderer. It would have been humane to allow the execution to proceed when the mysterious influence that sought the ultimate appeal intervened to arrest it.

THE President has ordered a new count for both cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and it is to be hoped that the final labors of the census enumerators in those cities will end their bitter quarrel and and satisfy both of them. They have evinced a wonderful sight of energy in their bickerings, that would have been much better expended in advancing their material interests.

MRS. STANLEY is to have the honor of having her picture adorn the labels of an enterprising soap manufacturer. Fame comes to some people, is thrust upon others and still others earn by dint of patient endeavor. Mrs. Stanley will probably be puzzled to ascertain how she fell heir to so much genuine fame in the soap ado line.

EVEN in Ohio the depression in the value of agricultural lands is noted, it being in such a marked degree as to be perceivable. The fact is causing an earnest inquiry as to the cause, and a prevention and cure if possible.
