

PRIVATE TYPEWRITERS.
How a Fair One Took Advantage of Her Position.

You have no idea to what an extent typewriters in the department—the operators—I mean, not the machine—are utilized by their superiors or others to do private work during office hours, says a writer in the Washington Critic. Any number of government officials who want to be authors have their manuscripts typed in the department. Of course, it is all on the department typewriter whether the work is for the government or not, but it is a great injustice to outside typewriters, who thus lose a great deal of work.

I can tell you a pretty good story in this connection. Up in the department there is a lady, the daughter of a distinguished general, who does a good deal of writing for the cheaper class of magazines, and always has her manuscripts copied by one of the typewriters in the department. One day she took the manuscript of a short article, written for a well-known woman's magazine, to a young woman who had recently been appointed as copist in the department to have it transcribed. The young woman, it seems, had had some dealings with magazines before, and, not being troubled with conscientious scruples, she made two copies of the article in a matter of a few minutes, and under some pretext delayed it for the other one to the author for some time. The article was promptly accepted and a check for it sent to the typewriter. Then the author of the article mailed it to the magazine for which she intended it, and a few days later there was an explosion. It seems that the typewriter, as such would have it, had mailed the stolen matter to the very same editor that its rightful owner had intended it for. The offer of a copy of manuscript which he had already accepted or paid for actually caused the editor to institute an inquiry, which in a very short time led to an explosion of the fair typewriter's duplicity. She and the author had an awful row, but the latter couldn't very well lay the matter before the chief and ask for the girl's dismissal, for of course she had no right to have the matter copied in the office, and didn't care about having the fact that she had exposed. She will, however, have her manuscript copied elsewhere in the future.

A MIDSUMMER ITEM.
Some Pointers That Will Save Money to Housekeepers.
Go and see that beautiful gold watch at the "Golden Rule Bazaar." Julius Gradwohl, the proprietor of the Golden Rule Bazaar, informs us that he has the Prize Baking Powder, and No. 1 Japan Tea, expressly set up for his business, and for the benefit of his customers, each box of baking powder will win a piece of fine glassware, and also each pound of the tea will win a piece of fine glassware, and customers who buy one pound of tea or a box of baking powder, which is warranted, will have a chance on that beautiful gold watch. He has also added a fine assortment of family groceries to his mammoth stock of glassware and crockery, which is the largest in the Willamette valley, to and from Mr. Gradwohl at the Golden Rule Bazaar, and you will see that nothing is misrepresented.
