SUICIDES OF CHILDREN.

In the city of Berlin sixty-two children forty-six boys and sixteen girls—have committed suicide since the 1st of January. Of this number twenty-four had attained the age of 15, fourteen the age of 14, seven were only 12 years old, and one had not reached the age of 7. In most cases the immediate cause of the tragic act is unknown, but the suicides are believed to have been due to exceptional severety on the part of those in charge of the children, whether parents, teachers or servants.

The discipline imposed upon German children is something of which Americans, with their more liberal ideas of the domestic relations, have very little conception. The schools are as rigid in the enforcement of their rules and regulations as a prison or reformatory institution could be; and at home a respect and deference is expected and exacted from children which would make irreverent young America think the world was coming to an end were it required of him. Servants, even, in some parts of Germany, are clothed with an authority over their young charges which is undreamed of in this country, and they sometimes exercise it with undue severity.

May not this sterness of control over children in Germany be traced to the spirit of militarism which prevades the country? The little New England boy who has to keep Sunday as though it were a day of mourning and who feels the stern parental control upon him until he grows up or runs away, is, though he does not know it, the innocent victim of the military discipline which Cromwell enforced among his Roundheads 200 years ago and more; and it is at least possible that the same thing is having its influence in German households. Certainly there must be some powerful moving cause to have converted the jolly, fun-loving, genial and affectionate German into a domestic tyrant; and unless such tyranny exists, how can we account for young children taking their lives into their own hands?

The story is a pitiful one, whatever may be its cause. If the worst use to which a man can be put is to kill him, how infinitely worse it is to think of little children in such a state of desperation and unhappiness as to drive them to suicide? The German Emperor is nearly all-powerful; let him look into this and take measures to remove the reproach which has come upon his capital.—Ex.

THE Alabama train-robber who, single handed, robbed the express car, proved that he was an expert in the dangerous business. His scheme of deceiving the express messenger is original, and will probably be imitated by other knights of the road. If this business increases as it has increased during the last few months we may expect to see a manual of train robbing with full directions for the guidance of amateurs and novices.

OHIO has a surplus of ambitious statesmen, so that the retirement of Senator Sherman would be a godsend to the younger men who aspire to high political honors. It is very doubtful, however, whether the reports of Sherman's intended withdrawal from public life are correct. The Shermans come of vigorous stock and the Senator is not the kind of man who willingly gives up service in which he has shown great ability.

THE trouble in Central America between Salvador and Guatemala, which has placed Gen. Mizner in a rather trying position, has started the question of returning to the old system of sending a minister to each government in that tempestuous portion of the globe and not accrediting one minister to the fine different republics, a situation very often like the present one when the minister must confer with too belligerent nationalities, and rest in the fire between them, if the present system is maintained. Uncle Sam may find it hard to find any one who will accept the situation.

ATHENS, GREECE, now boasts of possessing the largest electric-light plant in Eastern Europe. A central station has recently been established there containing two 150 horse-power engines, and four smaller ones of 35 horse-power each, and eight dynamos, four of which have a capacity of 550 ampers each, two of 360, and two of 240.

Gov. Ferry, of Washington, was not pleased with the treatment accorded him by the legislature in the matter of the census returns and there is likely to be a feeling not altogether harmonious. The house wanted them before they were prepared, and Governor took its demand as a mark of discourtesy.

WHITE women and white men are to be allowed to vote in Mississippi under the new Constitution of the State. But in the future, as in the past, the black people of Mississippi will doubtless do the best they can for their health by taking to the woods on election day.

The thrilling news is telegraphed from Boston that ex-President Cleveland got his hair cut in that city Friday. Whether or not the operation is understood to have had any political significance is not stated.

A Sure Cure for the Whisky Habit
