APPLY A SURE TEST.

THE unhappy outcome of many marriage ventures, makes it an essential for young people to thoroughly consider the question and the individuals with whom they intend to make the venture, before starting out upon the life long journey.

The best methods of reaching the desired knowledge is a matter of individual study and application and cannot be acquired either by precept or example. Others experience may be suggestive and lead to results, but individual inventive genius must be applied if success is attained.

The Tribune relates how a Minnesota girl accomplishes this desired knowledge. The lady in question is Miss Matilda Carter, twenty years of age, and living in Pomme de Terre in that state.

The Minnesota law requires a license to marry, and, where either the man or the woman is under age the consent of his or her parents. The laws of Wisconsin do not require any such foolishness, therefore it is the most natural thing in the world that Minnesota young people with obstinate parents should go over into Wisconsin and have matters arranged before some obliging minister or magistrate and return to their home triumphant. It early occurred to Miss Carter that the seven-hour railway journey between Pomme de Terre and Sun Rise City, the nearest Wisconsin point, would be an excellent opportunity to get acquainted with a man; therefore, when George Brown "proposed" three years ago she told him that they must elope to Sun Rise City as her stern father would never give his consent. She half suspected George's temper would not hold out for a railroad trip of that length, and, sure enough, when they were still an hour from their destination, he got cross because she wanted him to explain what kept the cars on the track. Accordingly, when they reached Sunrise City she told him she had concluded that she had made a mistake, and took the first train back to Pomme de Terre, leaving George Brown stranded in Sunrise with only $4 50 in his pocket. Later, she repeated this experience with Charles Fessenden and Frank Harris, her objection to the former being that he spent his time in the smoking-car in the company of poor cigars, while the latter pulled his hat down over his eyes and went to sleep and snored, something she abhorred. Highly as she esteemed this plan of testing her lovers with a railroad journey before marriage, she could still recognize that it had one serious defect—namely, the lonely and expensive journey back from Sunrise City.

Six months ago when William Carr sought the lovely Matilda for his wife she told him her usual terms—a trip to Sunrise City. On the way William tried to strike up an acquaintance with a freckle-nosed girl from Sauk Rapids, and when they reached Sunrise Miss Carter turned him adrift. But she determined not to waste the return trip. She decided that it was a poor elopement which would not work both ways. To make a long story short, the hotel clerk in Sunrise proposed marriage two hours after her arrival. She coyly told him that she could not think of being married away from home and accordingly eloped back to Pomme de Terre with him. He played cards half of the way with a stranger and was promptly dismissed at the end of the journey But the plan worked so smoothly that she has kept it up Three times now she has eloped to Sunrise City and the same number of times has she eloped back to Pomme de Terre. Each of the men has been wanting in some respect. Miss Carter is of a cheerful disposition, hope being her most strongly developed faculty, so she is not yet discouraged. She has, it is said, just agreed to elope from Pomme de Terre with young Jesse Bartlett October 1, and it is thought that she is arranging by letter to elope back with a Sunrise City young man named Parrott if Jesse develops any bad traits on the out trip, as she suspects he may. Whether or not Miss Matilda Carter, of Pomme de Terre, Minn., and Sunrise City, Wis., will ever marry seems questionable, but that she will be satisfied if she ever does is tolerably certain. Marriage is a serious thing, and should not be entered into lightly. The reversible elopement come to fill a want long felt.

THE attempt by the Brownsville Times to throw obstacles in the way of a wagon road bridge across the Willamette river at this place, would not be worth a moments thought if the sentiment expressed therein eminated solely from that paper, which it probably does. If however any number of people harbor the same feelings it is time that they disabused their minds of the feelings, and viewed the matter in its correct light. The growl coming from Brownsville is especially out of place and inconsiderate, in as much as that place and its contiguous territory up the Calapooia have always received the bridges they asked for, Brownsville just getting a new one to replace the old one that last winter's storms destroyed. The facts are that bridges are really a source of wealth to the country, and help to make it prosperous by attracting the well to do immigration. The plea that the north part of the county has received more than its share is an extreme narrow, selfish, and silly argument, that a glance at the topography of the country will convince the most casual oberver. Perhaps these cautious complainers would like to have a bridge built upon dry land somewhere in the south part of the county for every bridge built over the rapid and impassable rivers that are all situated in the north part of the county. The facts of the case are that a bridge across the Willamette at Albany is a matter that directly interests every dweller in Linn county, and especially those who live in the south part of the county, who will ere long be asking for a bridge across the river at Harrisburg. The Brownsville paper certainly voices the sentiments of very few of the citizens of Linn county. For they would not be so narrow minded as to take that view of the situation.

THE defense set up by the freshmen of an eastern college, when in opening the hazing season the sophmores made a midnight call upon them, was perfectly justifiable, even if it was energetic and likely to prove of a serious nature to one of the sophomores. American youth will probably ere long learn that hazing as a pastime is obsolete, or they will meet as did this particular sophomore a quietus that will end hazing in one individual case at least.
