THE SUMMER VACATION.

A large amount of rubbish is written in this country about the summer vacation. People are urged to go to the mountains if they live by the seashore, or to the coast if their homes are inland; but the matter cannot be regulated by any rule. It is wholly a question of individual taste, and no one should be guided by what his fellows do. Most busy people have now returned from the summer outing, but if you interviewed a score of them you would find that the great majority obtained little real recreation from their respite from the usual daily routine of labor. They went to hotels where it is the prerogative to form parties for dining, tennis, croquet and other diversions; at night they danced in overhated parlors, or played cards or talked shop with other business men, or if women, they exchanged gossip with their acquaintances. Of recreation in its true sense there was none, because places and people were all filled with noisy unrest. What a man and woman need is to go away from under gas and the electric light and have an opportunity to rest and invite the soul. In other words, they ought to do absolutely nothing which requires exertion and they ought to think of something which has no bearing on their daily life. In this way they can have a share of that calmness and restorative force which nature always displays.

PECULIAR LAWS OF OREGON.

Some of the laws of Oregon are peculiar, to say the least. For instance, the county court calls in a physician to examine a man, and to his suit. If the physician finds that the man is insane and the commitment papers are made out, he gets a fee of $5; if the man is found to be all right, the doctor doesn't get a cent and a red cent. Again, if the sheriff has four prisoners to jail he is paid $18 a week for boarding each one, making $72 per week for the four. If he is unfortunate enough to get another prisoner, the board of each is reduced to $3 per week for the five. These and other similar laws that could be mentioned, indicates what acute penetration our Solons are possessed of, and shows what an immense pressure of brain power is carried around inside the cranium of the average legislator.

Wonderful Cherry Tree.

Asbury Pearce, who resides upon his farm a few miles down the river, in Benton county, has a cherry tree of the Royal Ann variety, which he ought to go to the position, since all the wonderful and curious things are going there. The tree, we are assured, on the first day of September, or thereabouts, bore upon its branches at least ten bushels of ripe cherries.—Corvallis Gazette.

Railroad Changes.

The Ashland Record says that a side track is being built at Woodville, which will be the meeting point of the two trains after the new time card goes into effect Sunday. The Portland express will leave San Francisco in the morning in place of evening. It is rumored that the machine shops at Grant's Pass are to be removed to Ashland.

THE EXPOSITION.

How I Is Viewed By Our Special Correspondent.

PORTLAND, Or., Sept. 25.

At the sound of the gong 7 p. m., the doors of the Exposition buildings were thrown open, and the crowd poured in by thousands. Many having been waiting outside for sometime arriving in carriages, crowding the street cars and thronging the sidewalks for blocks leading to the building.

The spacious central hall and galleries were soon filled, all being anxious to secure seats and positions of advantage to see the great Sig. Libretta, and hear the opening pieces by his fine band, and also to hear as much as possible of the addresses. Almost every one as they entered would remark as they gazed at the main show lovely "aint that nice?" "beautiful ain't it?" As indeed there is much to admire in this room with its fine music stage, central pillar with its thousand electric lights, rich flowers, palms, shrub and statuary. With plenty of music room for promenading, and a fine view of the city.

Mr. Dekum, the president of the Northern Pacific Industrial Exposition promptly at 8 o'clock introduced Signor Libretta whose band played the opening piece, and Hon. M. C. George delivered the opening address, being frequently cheered, there being a crowd of present and more coming in all the time, but few could hear it. One remark however, the writer heard, "That this fair was not so much to make money as to bring the people together and see each other's work."

I should judge those present to-night are mostly Portland people, and all exhibit some of a glance longer or shorter according to the fancy of the passer by, and it is almost a marvel how well the whole building has been cleared up and things arranged in the next few hours before opening. Some few exhibits are not yet complete but most are in good shape the whole being immense.

A Romantic Marriage.

On Monday our justice of the peace, Mr. Abe Astel was asked by a hurrying messenger to cross over the river on urgent business. The squire hastened across the river expecting to find some old grizzled comrade in trouble about his pension, but to his surprise he found not an old scared veteran, but a fine looking young man and a beautiful young lady in camp, surrounded by a good traveling outfit, Jersey cows and other surroundings indicative of thrift and culture. The young gentleman introduced himself as George Applegate, and it proved to be Mr. George Applegate, son of Gen. E. L. Applegate, on his way to his farm on Slate creek. He produced a license and said he wished to be married to the young lady there present, whom he introduced as Miss Annie Barnhardt. And there with a gentleman and a lady who seemed to be traveling companions as witnesses, in the grove on the bank of Rogue river, a short distance from the south end of the bridge, Mr. George Applegate was married to Miss Annie Barnhardt. And there with a gentleman and a lady who seemed to be traveling companions as witnesses, in the grove on the bank of Rogue river, a short distance from the south end of the bridge, Mr. George Applegate was married to Miss Annie Barnhardt.

Is It a Miracle?

The Ashland Tidings says that about two weeks ago somebody who was in the new Catholic church in Ashland noticed a discoloration on the wall back of the gallery which presents in indistinct outline a resemblance to a female figure of the angel class, with wings and all. Since it was noticed there have been many visitors to the church to inspect it and some people who are most easily impressed by the wonderful and unusual in the world about them are inclined to figure out a miracle of the old-fashioned sort—a tracing of the figure of the Holy by spirit hands. Whether there is supposed to be any special significance attached to the occurrence, whether it is a good omen or an omen of any other sort, is not settled upon yet. The figure, however, is not clearly enough defined to be pretty enough as a picture to be very impressive, and most people will take the earthly view of the matter—which is the fact that the apparition is the result of a discoloration of the wall by moisture or some other cause affecting the tint used in the painting of the mixture applied some time ago, and that there is nothing spiritual about it.

Native Sons of Oregon.

Since the grand convocation of the Sons of the Golden West in an Francisco, the native born citizens of Oregon are taking a great interest in an organization, and a few days since a society was organized at Jacksonville, with Colonel Robert A. Miller, as secretary. It would be a grand idea to organize the natives all over the state into societies, as it would do honor and hold in reverence the memories of the pioneers, who have made Oregon what it is.

The Delicate Young Lady.
