ORIGON PACIFIC TIME TABLE

Table with columns for Arrives and Departs, listing times for various routes.

ANCIENT STRUCTURES.

SOME of the most interesting and instructive objects in existence, are the ancient buildings that have been the result of the skilled labor of the human family.

One of the most interesting of these was the remains of the Moors in Spain. A recent writer truthfully says that all students of history and admirers of ancient splendor will hear with regret of the casualty which has happened to the Alhambra.

REPUBLICANS will have one consolation should the democrats prove successful in the congressional contest—they will see the people who had been howling about the "gag system" introduced by speaker Reed turn around and defend the only system which ought to prevail in a republican country, namely, that of the majority ruling.

One of the most virulent fighters against the tariff law has been and is the Chicago Herald, which leaves no chance vacant to talk against it. The gist of a recent article was that because the tariff on some articles had been slightly increased the McKinley bill increased taxes on imported articles from 47 to 60 per cent. In making this assertion the Herald for its to mention the fact that since the war an immense number of articles have been put on the free list—indeed, so many that our tables of imports show a far greater volume of goods entered free than of dutiable goods. The Herald, in dilating upon the increase of duties on certain lines of goods amounting to 13 per cent, entirely overlooks the important fact that the duty on sugar was reduced nearly one hundred per cent. The trouble with the Herald is that it is dissatisfied with our system of reducing taxation. It knows that a great reduction has been made, but it is displeased because the cut was not made on classes of articles which we are capable of producing in this country. In other words, it is dissatisfied because the foreigner is not permitted to compete on terms of equality in the American market with home producer.

The post-office authorities are complaining because much matter intended for the State of Washington goes to Washington, D. C., and vice versa, and because people addressing letters to places in the Dakotas simply write "Dakota," without prefixing "North" or "South." The complaints illustrate defects in our nomenclature that should have been perceived long ago and remedied. It might easily have been done in the case of the Dakotas and Washington, for instance, if common-sense had been allowed to have a controlling influence. But local feeling and local pride in names long attached were too strong to be overcome, and all the future must pay the penalty in inconvenience, mistakes, delay and awkwardness.
