President Harrison Indulges In Some Kissing

ELISE LESLIE IS KISSED.

The President Kisses in the Engineer's Cab and is Given the Responsibility of Failing the White Cord.

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 8.—President Harrison across early this morning, but he was not early enough to escape the thousands of eager Peorians who had assembled around the hotel in that city struggling for a sight of the distinguished visitor. At 7 o'clock a band serenaded the president, and a few minutes later the mayor and city council accompanied by G. A. R., poets and a company of the Illinois National Guard, escorted the party to the train. The march was a triumphal one. All Peoria turned out to do homage to the chief executive.

At the depot over 5000 people were assembled and the president, being introduced by Mayor Starke, spoke as follows:

My Fellow-Citizens: It is not possible that I should introduce this morning any serious theme. I have greatly enjoyed this trip through my old state and yours; sisters in loyalty and sacrifice for the Union; sisters also in prosperity and honor. [Applause.] I feel myself simply saying "Thank you" with an increasing sense of kindness of the people. If anything could add to the solemn sense of responsibility which my official oath places upon me, it would be these solemn evidences of friendliness and confidence. The great mass of people of this country are loyal, dutiful citizens, ready to support every faithful officer in the discharge of his duty, and to applaud every honest effort for their good. It is a source of great strength to know this, and this morning, not less from this bright sunshine and this crisp, Illinois air than from these kindly faces, I draw inspiration to do what I can, the very best I can, to promote the good of the people of the United States. [Applause.] I go home to-day to meet with some comrades of your state who stood with me in the army of the great Union for the defense of the flag. [Applause.]

At the conclusion of the president's address Elsie Leslie, the child actress of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" fame, presented the president with a beautiful bouquet on behalf of the G. A. R., poets and citizens of Peoria. The president expressed his thanks by kissing the little lady and amid the cheers of the crowd the train pulled out for Galesburg.

At Peoria, the presidential party was met by a delegation from Galesburg, a special train. Near Galesburg the president, after according a reception to old veterans on board, went forward with Secretary Tracy and greeted Engineer Hilton, who was a member of the president's brigade. On invitation of the engineer, the president and Secretary Tracy mounted the engine and rode in the cab with the engineer for miles. To the president the engineer gracefully yielded the responsibility of pulling the whistle for stations and crossings, and the fireman considerably turned over the bell rope to Secretary Tracy.

The principal event of the day was the reunion at Galesburg of the first brigade, Thirty-sixth division, Twentieth army corps, the former command of General Harrison. The occasion was the gathering not only of old veterans, formerly associated with the president, but of Grand Army men from all sections of the West. Excursions from all the principal cities within a radius of 300 miles, added to the assembling, and it was estimated that the audience which greeted President Harrison at Galesburg was not less than 25,000. At the depot the presidential party was met by the mayor, council and army of veterans, and escorted to a hotel where, in an hour's reception, distinguished citizens from all parts of the state greeted the president. Decorations throughout the city were profuse and elaborate.

Galesburg, Oct. 8.—Upon the arch on the reviewing stand beneath which the president stood, were the words, "We Welcome Our President." Shortly after eleven o'clock there passed in review the veterans of the 20th army corps, 500 school children of Central Illinois and a thousand citizens. After the parade Mayor Stevens welcomed the president to Galesburg in a somewhat lengthy speech. The president responded briefly to the address of welcome, thanking the citizens of Galesburg and Illinois for their cordial greeting. To the old veterans here assembled he extended a greeting of comradeship. [Cheers.] The presence of so many of the former members of his old brigade and army corps was a pleasure to him, but the absence of those who had answered their last muster roll and gone to their last home, mingled sadness with that pleasure. He hoped that these annual reunions would continue for many years, and that his comrades here assembled would Utah Territorial Convention—News from East of the Rockies and the Old World.

PRESCOTT, Oct. 8.—Under Sheriff Murray McInerney yesterday lodged in jail here one of the most noted swindlers in the southwest. His name is James M. Wilson, alias Matthews, alias Holley, alias Gladdison, and his peculiar vocation has been to swindle life insurance companies. His first venture was in Arkansas some years ago, when he blew up a cottage in which he lived. The explosion occurred prematurely. His supposed body was found in the wreck, and buried by the sorrowing widow, who received the amount of his life insurance policy. In 1888 he located in Doña Ana county, New Mexico, with his wife, who is a beautiful young woman, and immediately took out a life insurance policy for $8,000 in the New York Mutual and an additional accident policy for ten thousand, a few months after receiving the policies, a fishing excursion was organized on the Rio Grande, and Wilson was reported drowned. Search for the body resulted in finding a corpse which was buried. The suspicions of the insurance companies were aroused and an investigation commenced when Wilson's wife and other confederates became alarmed and fled the country.

IRELAND'S CONDITION.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, in reply to an inquiry as to the real condition of affairs in Ireland, writes: "Regarding the potato crop in the west and south of Ireland no positive or final conclusions can be formed until the potatoes are dug, towards the end of October, but all the testimony which is of any value and which obviously is not 'doctored' for political purposes, appears to indicate that the potato crop in Ireland is wholly absurd. Although in particular localities a failure of the potato crop is undoubtedly serious. The measures that have been taken by the government will, without question, be sufficient to deal with any real distress which will be beyond the power of the ordinary poor law to meet."

CAUSES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE IN SAN FRANCISCO HARBOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—A gale here yesterday caused considerable damage, although no serious casualties are yet reported. A couple of houses and one saw-mill under course of construction succumbed, the roofs being blown clear off. The steamer Amelia at anchor in the harbor broke from her moorings and came right up to the dock where she was secured without injury. A little sloop capsized and filled, two men on board being forced to swim ashore. It is estimated that at one time the wind attained a velocity of 80 miles an hour. All steamers were delayed in arrival and departure, the Kingston not getting away until 4 A. M. The steamship Costa Rica and a couple of ships in Equatorial harbor dragged anchor but were not damaged.

He had been drinking heavily, and she had refused to live with him and was on her way to her stepfather's home.

YESTERDAY'S EXPLOSION.

What Eye Witnesses Say of the Explosion—Narrow Escapes.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 8.—The story of a wonderful escape from death by the explosion at the powder works was told last night by Wm. Haley, foreman of one of the coal houses of Dupont's mill. The coal house is about 20 yards to the east of the scene of disaster. Haley said:

"I was standing in the doorway of the coal house and was suddenly stricken with terror by a tremendous sound. I saw a succession of bright flashes from different buildings. The coal building shook and fell about me. I stood amid the debris, paralyzed and unable to move. How I escaped being killed, I don't know. My clothing was torn and my teeth and hands were scratched. Otherwise I was not hurt. When I regained my senses I rushed to my home on the hillside about 300 yards away. It was a mass of ruins. I found my daughter-in-law, Lizzie Anderson, with her arm broken."

Joseph A. Duck, of Rockland, an eye witness of the explosion, says: "While I was looking at some men handling kegs of powder, I felt the earth slipping from under me. I beheld sheets of flame and vast clouds of smoke. Reports sounding like the firing of a thousand cannon followed in quick succession. High masses of buildings and earth were thrown hundreds of feet in the air. Their fall was accompanied by fearful crashes. From where I stood it was impossible to tell in what order the mill buildings were blown up, but it was the big middle magazine building that exploded first. I rushed to the nearest tree and hid myself from destruction. The tree shook as if in a hurricane. I heard the sound of some heavy material falling to the ground. I looked 200 yards ahead of me and saw a stone go through a part of the foundation of one of the buildings. It was about two feet long and a foot wide."

GEN. MILES' REPORT.

He Urges the Necessity of Pacific Coast Defenses.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The report of General Nelson A. Miles has been received at the war department. The document has not been made public as yet, but it is understood that its contents are in effect a reiteration of that officer's testimony before the select committee of the senate on relations with Canada given in May, 1889. In that testimony General Miles laid particular stress on the defenseless condition of the Pacific coast north of San Francisco. In effect he stated that China, let alone Great Britain, has ships that could come into the harbor and destroy the city of San Francisco. He further said that it was perfectly practicable for the government to put the Pacific coast in such a condition of defense that, in his judgment, it would be impossible for any ship to enter its important harbors. Necessary defenses of the coast would be the occupation of the entrances to Puget sound and Columbia river. The defense of the harbor of San Francisco and cities southward it would take three or four years to accomplish.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Portland Will Be Affected Considerably By It.

WHAT JAY COULD SAY.

How A Californian Killed A Man Seventeen Years Ago—Pacific Coast News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Jay Gould was questioned yesterday to obtain his views on the probable effect on the business of the Pacific coast from competition from the Canadian Pacific railway.

"I have no interest on the Pacific coast," said Mr. Gould. "The Canadian Pacific, I believe, has established a line of steamships to China and Japan, and it will naturally obtain business that would otherwise go to the United States railways. Whether the effect will be to actually cut into the regular business of San Francisco and Portland is not easy to determine. These reports are certainly more legitimate points for traffic and it hardly seems possible that their material prosperity can be interfered with."

"Have you in contemplation the acquisition of any lines to the Pacific coast, or extension of your own roads in that district?" was asked.

"No," replied Gould, "I think I have all the railroads I care to manage."

C. F. Huntington was then asked what inroads the Canadian Pacific people were making on the transportation lines of the country.

"The Canadian Pacific," said he, "affects the railroads in the United States to a considerable extent. It is maintained by the Canadian government, and by offering large rebates to shippers, it takes business away from American roads. The roads in the United States are prevented from meeting in this style of competition by the interstate commerce law. While small shipments would go by American roads under any circumstances, owing to the small charges of rates, many large shipments are apt to be sent by the Canadian Pacific on account of the great saving to shippers through rebates."

"Is the competition of the Canadian Pacific likely to work serious injury to American ports on the Pacific coast?" was asked.

"Portland will be affected to a considerable extent by reason of its proximity to the terminus of the Canadian Pacific," replied Mr. Huntington. "The business of San Francisco, however, can never be affected. It is the great part of the Pacific coast and it is also the natural business center of the coast."
