The East Oregonian says Spokane papers claim that the city has never had a boom and don't want any. How good and kind of them to say this at this time. A little boy once said he had never eaten a green apple in his life, but he suffered from a severe attack of the stomach ache just the same.

It is rumored that Mr. Paul Robisen, who has for twenty years been the faithful watcher at the Harrisburg railroad bridge, has been superceded by E. Gear. If the road has discharged this faithful employee without giving him some other post of duty, it has committed a grievious wrong.

THE FINALE.

That Cutting Affair After All Ends in Nothing.

Yesterday Doc Logan, the man who wielded the murderous weapon that cut the throat of Harry Ward, was taken before Justice Humphrey for preliminary examination. Various witnesses were examined, including the physicians who sewed up the wound, and the testimony of the wounded man, who is rapidly recovering from the cut in his windpipe, was taken at the Waverly house.

After taking all the evidence, under advisement, Justice Humphrey concluded that there was not enough in the case to put the county to any more expense and wisely found no cause for action. It was simply a drunken row.

RESUMED WORK

It Will Be Pushed All Winter—Begins to Look Like Old Times.

The Yaquina Republican say: After a suspension of operation for nearly ten months, on Tuesday the government resumed work on the Yaquina Bay jetties, with Mr. J. S. Polhemus as engineer in charge. On Tuesday morning a large force of men were set at work clearing the coverings to the cars and machinery, and putting derricks, machinery and other portions of the plant in working order. The scows will be put on ways and recaulked and as soon as they are ready they will begin to bring rock from the quarry up the river. Work clearing the dirt from the top of the ledge at the quarries has commenced under Joe Daughterty. About forty men will be employed at the quarries. The first work will be employed at the quarries. The first rock will be put in on the north jetty. Mr. Polhemus thinks it probable that the north jetty will be extended some this fall. All the men will be employed that can be worked to advantage. If the winter is open and favorable the work will be pushed without cessation all the season. This means more prosperous times on Yaquina Bay. Capt. Symonds cannot decide fully on what class or amount of work he will do this winter until full instructions are received from headquarters.

A New Salem Church.

Yesterday articles were filed with the secretary of state incorporating the First Unitarian society of Salem. The incorporators are Leo Willis, Wm. England, J. B. Stump, H. B. Holland, W. J. Poly, T. L. Golden, Mrs. M. A. Stump, Mrs. O. S. England, Mrs. N. A. Good. The value of church property is estimated at $1000. Salem already has quite a strong Unitarian congregation, and the intention is to increase it and soon erect a building in which to conduct services. Following the filing of the incorporation articles yesterday a Statesman reporter hunted up some of the incorporators and asked a few questions. He learned that it was their purpose not later than next spring to erect a chapel on their lot immediately across the street from and west of the Catholic church.—Statesman.

Those Annual Reports.

The Salem Statesman says: Three of the annual reports of the railroad companies in Oregon have been made out and received by the state commissioners here during the past two days, there being five more yet to come. Those who send in statements are the Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Oregon Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Oregon & Washington, Oregonian Railroad, and Portland & Willamette Valley. Although not coming under the law governing railroads, the companies and motor lines in Oregon were requested several months ago to complete reports and furnish the board with them, but how many will comply with the request is not known.

Claimed By a Woman.

The Dallas Times-Mountaineer says: "It now appears as if a woman has a pretty good claim to a large portion of a Fairhaven townsite. At any rate she has served notice on many property owners to vacate premises of which they formerly felt secure in their title. It seems as if a former proprietor of the townsite had been married, and the lady now steps in and claims a goodly share of the property. Probably the recent visit east of Attorney Harris, of Fairhaven, has had something to do with bringing about this state of affairs."

Butte Creek Fair.

We glean that those who attended the annual fair given by the Butte Creek Agricultural Association October 2, 3, and 4 are loud in their praises of the pleasures of the occasion. At the fair there were on exhibition many fine samples of the farmers' products, and also of the products of his wife. The attendance during the three days of the fair was better than that of any previous meeting of the association.

Some Hops Sold.

The Dallas Itemizer says: Mason & Yeakum and Ford & Kimes, of Bridgeport, and Joda Morrison, of Dallas, have sold their hops to Meeker & Co., at 35 cents. The first named had 38 bales, worth about $2,400, and the second 138 bales, which bring nearly $8,400. Mr. Morrison sold only thirty bales at that rate. After figuring up and taking out expenses of all kind there will remain a handsome profit on the investment. Next year's acreage in this county will be greatly increased, but the financial outcome will be purely a matter of guess work.

Bill Nye Feeds Bran.

Many theories have been advanced by editorial farmers for the hard times among agriculturists, but I incline to believe it is falling off in the use of bran, writes Bill Nye to "Northwestern Miller." I have a piquant little taffy-colored Jersey cow on my country seat who was, a year ago, a mental wreck. She suffered from insomnia, and life seemed to her altogether unlovely. Her only remaining offspring had been kidnaped, and was said to have been in the soup—mock turtle soup. She pined and fretted a good deal and this preyed upon her vitality, impairing digestion and threatened her with hollow hollow horn and early death. I got her a large quantity of bran and made a pleasant and soothing mash upon her by means of it. At first she would insert her nose in it up to her lower eyelid, and then looking far over the purple hills, she would blow this bran mash across the state, and what did not go up the sleeves of my overcoat would chink up the barn and freckle our family carriage. But after while she ate almost greedily and soon the birds sang again in her sorrowing heart. She forgot her grief, had no more acidity stomach, flashes of heat or sinking, ringing in the ears, dizziness or tired feeling, and now she is perfectly well. Last fall she ate not only her three meals a day, but also a scarlet geranium belonging to my wife, a Mackinac straw hat of mine, two yards of brocaded ribbon from the costume of a young lady from boston who was patting her on the head, $4 worth of gladiolus bulbs, a child's shirt and a dish of blanc mange which was cooling on the rain water barrel for the pastor.

Meeting of Directors.

The Oregonian says: A regular meeting of the directors of the O. R. & N. Co. was held Wednesday, Vice-president D. P. Thompson presiding, and A. L. Mills and William McIntosh present. The resignation of C. J. Smith as director was accepted and E. McNeil was elected to fill the vacancy. The proceedings of the executive committee, had in Boston, relative to bonds, construction contracts with the Washington & Idaho and Oregon Extension companies were ratified by the board. A resolution was adopted making the payment of the $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. quarterly dividends a regular things, without further action on the part of the board.

Ought to Get It.

In the early days Geo. Megginson took as a wife an Indian woman of the Sixes tribe. He lived with her until his death, which happened about three years ago and always called and acknowledged her as his wife. He had by her three children, two of them are now living. He left a large amount of property in this county and he was also heir to considerable to his father's estate in Illinois. His wife and children are justly entitle to this property and we hope they will get it without delay and trouble.—Yaquina Republican.

Fire at Monmouth.

At Monmouth Thursday the residence of L. Bentley was destroyed by fire. Through the efforts of the citizens and the students of the state normal school the fire was kept from spreading, although the warehouse, containing 6000 bushels of wheat, was ablaze several times. The postoffice, a distance of several blocks, was also on fire, and also the residence of James Tatom, both of which were saved. The total loss to Mr. Bentley was about $2500; no insurance.

Suit for Damages.

A suit brought by I. D. Miller, of Miller's Station, for the value of two steers, a cow and calf, killed by the Southern Pacific railroad, tried before Justice Humphrey in this city yesterday, resulted in a judgment for the plaintiff for the sum of $46. Very light damages, which will probably be paid at once.

Nothing to Lose. Everything Gain.

Obviously our interests all lie in the direction of securing a relaxing of the Brazilian duties, and here is the strength of the reciprocity proposition. We have nothing to lose and everything to gain by such an arrangement. We have removed the duty from one great Brazilian product after another, and have waited fifteen or twenty years for Brazil to reciprocate on her own volition. It is full time now that we abandoned our policy of standing idly by and waiting, and begin to see if something cant be done. Mr Blaine has the right idea. He is on the right track, and the Aldrich amendment to the tariff bill will pave the way for a beginning. And what is true of the condition of our trade with Brazil is true also of our trade with the Spanish and British West Indies.—Boston Journal.

A HEN IN A TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

The Pacific Postal Boys Have One for a Pet—A Bluestone Diet.

The Oregonian says the operators in the Pacific Postal telegraph office have a novel pet. A hen has taken up her abode with them. It was last Sunday afternoon, when she made her first appearance, having presumably escaped from some commission merchant or poulterer's crate, and made herself quite at home among the messenger boys, bewitching lady clerks and lighting slingers. Manager Hayes drove her out, but she forgave the affront, and returning ensconced herself in a snug corner where she preceeded in accordance with the fulfillment of her earthly mission, to pay for her lodging by leaving for the boys an egg of the first quality. As she proved herself a very lady-like and circumspect hen, she was taken up with by the operators, who adopted her as a mascot. She would walk and sit about the desks as though to the manor born. She soon developed a lively interest in the transaction of business, and when, after Vancouver had been "lost" for a long time it was again recovered. To the expression of satisfaction from the operators, she added her congratulations in the most excited staccato notes.

Her diet of bluestone did not appear to the boys as altogether the most wholesome, so a fund has now been raised from which she draws her rations regularly, and is becoming thoroughly domicilated in her queer quarters.

ROYAL WANDERING MINSTREL

The First Money Honestly Earned in a Thousand Years

Philadelphia Times

The Archduke Maximilian, shot in Mexico by the Juarez Government about the end of our civil war, in younger days, was famous as a singer and a player on the guitar. When traveling around on foot, a pastime which was a passion with him, he would occasionally stop along the lonely road and sing a song or two, or charming air.

Once, while thus engaged, he was heard by a number of peasants who, quite ignorant of his identity listened to him with rapture, and applauded him with vigor. "If you come to the inn," said one of them, "with that voice and that touch, I can promise you a good glass of wine, if not a little more."

Falling in with their humor, Maximillion accompanied them to the village tavern.

Here he rendered several choice melodies with such skill and taste that he had, so to speak, his audience at his feet, and, though the tavern vintage was not of the best he drain glass after glass with his new-found friends.

Finally he announced that he must go, and the jolly Bonniface found him determined to do so, he took his hat and went round among the auditors, collecting a fair sum, to which he added something himself, and offered it to the Archduke.

Seeing the honesty in the motive he took the coins and put them in his pocket, thanking them for their appreciation and kindness. At that moment the village 'Squire, who knew Maximilian, happened to enter. Seeing the crowd around him, and not knowing the cause, he called out:

"Stand back, you clowns! Don't you know it's the Archduke Maximilian, your Prince?"

The tavernkeeper fell on his knees in his fright, and thinking his money generosity was the crowninging infamy of which he had been guilty, he asked that it be given back.

"Not a bit of it," said Maximilian heartily. "It's the first money that has been honestly earned by any of our family for a thousand years and I'm going to keep it as an heirloom."

Escaping Sheol.

According to the Talmudic idea certain persons are mentioned who will escape hell or have their torment therein lightened. Whoever articulated every letter while reading the Shema (Deut. 6:49) will have hell cooled for him. Three kinds will never see the face of hell—those who are ground down by poverty, those who suffer from bowel sickness, and those who lie at the mercy of creditors. To those three some rabbis, whose experience of matrimony was perhaps unfortunate, add those who have a shrew to wife. Charity to the poor, by feeding them and otherwise, opens the door of escape from hell. Whoever shears a portion of his goods for the poor, and is charitable, is released from the judgment of hell. A passage in Gittin likens the charitable and the unchar table to two ewes passing through a river to water. The ewe which is shorn reaches the opposite bank in safety, but the ewe which remains unshorn is drowned. It is also said, Prov. 10:4, charity (A. V., "righteousness,") "delivered it from death." This is sometimes recited at the present day at a burial by the keeper of the ground or other person, when money is commonly given for the use of the poor.—Nineteenth Century.
