INCENTIVE TO CRIMINAL ACTION.

The cause of the universality of lapses from the path of rectitude, is a subject of deep concern to the human family, and if consideration can evolve a solution, application of a correction might possibly lead to a mitigation of the evil. Ex-President Hayes gave utterance to the several great truths in his address before the prison congress. Particularly it is true that the crimes of the age root in the desire to grow suddenly rich. But there must arrive a time when such motives consume themselves in their own fire. Every year the evil attracts more attention, and the complacency with which the general public used to regard the operations of men suddenly invested with millions is passing into cumulative distrust. The use of great wealth to corrupt society is not condoned any more, but rigidly censured. It is not that the use of money to influence legislatures is peculiar to these times that so much is said about it. Oh, no. The corruption of legislative bodies was more generally practiced forty years ago than it is now, but men winked at the evil then, whereas men are now found bold enough to denounce it openly. So we may reasonably hope that that love of money, which is the root of much evil, has about reached its climacteric. The love of money will probably survive to the last, but this distemper it will creates will not be anything like so great twenty years from now. The stigma that public opinion affixes to the corrupt use of wealth will gradually make such uses and abuses of fortune infamous. Men do not deliberately choose infamy. They expect to escape it by some exercise of craft. But the light falls everywhere now, and few escape.

One of the fruitful sources of crime is the degree of poverty which approaches starvation. There are moralists who try to excuse offenses committed as a last resort by those who have been reduced by hunger and cold to desperate remedies. Without entering into that difficult and delicate question, it is sufficient for the present purpose to note the fact that necessity is recognized as a common cause of crimes against property, and sometimes against persons. A man who is starving in a city filled with riches, who sees his family suffering for the want of food, his children dying, perhaps, while charity turns a deaf ear to his entreaties because it has been so often imposed upon, forcibly seizes the food or the money that will give them temporary relief. Sometimes he meets with resistance, and in a moment of passion or to save himself from arrest he commits an assault or perhaps murder. Such are the crimes that arise from dire necessity, having in them little, if any, element of positive evil intent, but originating in the instinct of self preservation.

One of the most interesting pieces of engineering completed this year is the cog road to the summit of Pike's Peak. The total ascent from Manitou, the initial station, is 7,600 feet in a distance of 9 miles. The maximum grade is 25 per cent. and 18,477 feet or 39 per cent of the entire line is on a curvature, the sharpest curves being 16 degrees, so the aphorism as crooked as the road to Pike's Peak will be truthful as well as applicable.

Quebec is excited over the revelations of a young Frenchman who claims to have heard a strolling acrobat threaten that he would repeat this winter his previous performance of blowing up the Parliament buildings. The most natural inference is that the informant is seeking public favor and that his story is a fine effort of the imagination.

The action of the supreme court of the state, in throwing out Governor Pennoyer's railroad commissioner's case on a technicality, is a very thoughtful and graceful way of letting the Governor out of the muddle, for before another hearing can be had upon the matter the legislature will have convened, and probably by its action will have relieved the situation.

The effervescent Frenchman must have some vent for his mercurial temperment, but the spectacle, recently presented, to the world, of two members of its chief legislative body standing up and dueling with pistols, is one that is not calculated to increase the respect of the world at large. The nineteenth century views of matters does not conform to that idea.

The crumbling of the thrones of Europe goes on steadily all the time. They are losing their hold upon the minds and support of the people and ere long the divine right of kings, or hereditary succession into the place of a ruler will be unknown and unacknowledged. One of the examples pointing in that direction now is the house of Hapsburg which has so long held sway over the principality of Austria. An attempt is being made to float a large loan in that country with very poor prospects of success, and the effort will not conduce to the better stability of the ruling house.

Take Simmons Liver Regulator One Dose

WORTH

100 Dollars

DEAR S. L. R: I consider one dose of Simmons Liver Regulator worth $100. I was constipated, had Headache, could eat nothing with satisfaction or appetite had the blues, and felt altogether out of sorts. I resorted to Blue Mass, Calomel, Quinine, and every remedy suggested, but only obtained temporary relief. One dose of S. L. R did me more good than $100 worth of doctoring an I tering. Respy, J. C MARKIS.

I have been a teacher for twenty years, and during that time have had repeated attacks of headache, produced by torpid Liver, and have been entirely cured by Simmons Liver Regulator. I deem it to be of so mild a character in its action, not to interfere, in the least with my duties in the school room, to those similarly situated and subject to the same, I cannot do right recommend Simmons Liver Regulator.
