THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8, 1890.

By the grace and favor of Almighty God the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of a passing year, which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comforts of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds in every department of human industry. Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving, and I do invite the people upon that day, to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed houses of worship and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our beneficent Creator for the rich blessings he has granted us as a nation and invoking the continuance of his protection and grace for the future.

I commend to my fellow citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, homeless and sorrwful. Let us endeavor to merit the recompense of charity and gracious acceptance of our praise. In testimony whereof I have thereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety, and the indedendence of the United States the one hundred and fifteenth.

[SEAL.] BENJAMIN HARRISON.
By the President: JAMES G. BLAINE.
Secretary of State.

FAMINE IN IRELAND.

The American committee for the relief of the famine in Ireland has issued a public statement announcing that it withdraws temporarily its appeal to the American people. The reason given for this action is that the British government has been spurred on to investigate the matter, and has undertaken a system of public works in the distressed districts which afford partial relief and will at least postpone the famine.

Does not England see that its action in this behalf is a formidable indictment of its traditional policy toward Ireland in the matter of discouraging and even suppressing the manufacturing industries of that country? The construction of a few short lines of railway in Ireland is sufficient, says the committee, to avert immediate danger of famine. But why? Simply because the Irish people are directed into a new avenue of industry, and are not required to draw their whole sustenance from the soil. Agriculture has been supplemented by one line of manufacturing—for building a railroad is manufacturing in the economic sense—and an overcrowded industry has been relieved.

If, then, the finding of one kind of employment for the people of the distressed districts of Ireland has sufficed to save them from starvation, what would be the effect if England should alter her policy and encourage varied manufacturing industries in Ireland? We know that a century ago, before the union, Irish manufactures were in the flourishing state and the condition of the people very much better than it is at present, except in a few localities. Who, then can doubt that if England would show as much favor to Ireland as she has shown to Manchester and Birmingham and Sheffield the danger of famine would be removed, now and for all time, and manufactures would flourish as they did in the last century?

There is in this a lesson for ourselves. Were this country to follow Mr. Gladstone's advice, it would adopt a free-trade policy, discourage manufactures and devote itself mainly to agriculture. It would bend its energies to raising wheat and corn to feed the people of England. But suppose that the grasshoppers ate up all the wheat, or blizzards and tornadoes uprooted the growing corn, what should we do? How could we be any better off than Ireland is? Mr. Gladstone may have been sincere in his advice, but we know by thirty years' continuous experience that the protective policy which fosters agriculture on the one hand and manufactures on the other is the policy for the United States, as it would be equally the best policy for Ireland.—Ex.

It is natural that miners at work underground under strong electric light should suffer from new maladies not mentioned in the books, but there is probably little danger of any physical or mental damage resulting from the use of the ordinary light. In fact the usual sixteen or twenty-four candle power burner gives a mild, even light that is absolutely colorless, does not flicker as the best gas will do, and is free from the heat which is the most disagreeable feature of gaslight. Of course in time the use of electricity for lighing may produce special complaints of the eye aervous system but thus far, if proper precautions are taken in avoiding the full glare of the light, no harm has been done.

The travelers across the Atlantic Ocean will not be disappointed to learn that the steamship lines have decided to make the comfort and safety of their passengers more of an object to attain, than the beating of the time of arrival of a rival steamer by a few minutes. Their nerves wi'l be more tranquil to say the least, for that racing to beat time has been an element of great danger during the past season.

Modern light and heat estimates the capital invested in electric lighting plants in the United States has reached the enormous aggregate of $118,758,509, there are at the present time in use 1,590,667 incandescent light. 127,441 arc lights, and 1,379 stations.
