THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8, 1890.

By the grace and favor of Almighty God the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of a passing year, which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comfort of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds in every department of human industry. Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving, and I do invite the people upon that day, to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed houses of worship and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our beneficent Creator for the rich blessings he has grant d us as a nation and invoking the continuance of his protection and grace for the future.

I commend to my fellow citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, homeless and sorrwful. Let us endeavor to merit the recompense of charity and gracious acceptance of our praise. In testimony whereof I have thereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety, and the indedendence of the United States the one hundred and fifteenth.

[SEAL.] BENJAMIN HARRISON.
By the President: JAMES G. BLAINE.
Secretary of State.

CULTIVATE A CHARACTER.

THE close observer of men and events will find that the most important lever to rule in this world is individual character. When backed up with the fulcrum of average ability, and reinforced with the force of industry and perseverance, it becomes invincible.

The Picayune very truthfully remarks that it is natural that men should admire genius. It is so mysterious in its essence, so inexplicable in its methods, and occasionally so magical in its results, that it captivates the imagination and so bewilders judgment that we are inclined to overestimate its value. Young men especially are apt to fall into the error of supposing that the world is governed by intellect, In reality the masters and leaders of men have usually been superior to their fellows in the sturdier traits of manhood rather than pure intellect. If two men live and work together, it is almost certain that one of them will sooner or later come to exercise a dominant influence overthe other; but in such a case it very often happens that the subjugated mind is brighter and better stored with learning than tee conquering mind. The explanation is that the world leans on character. Steadfastness, calm, self-control, courage, are qualities which, though they may not dazzle the eyes of men, will always attract confidence and secure a following. They are qualities that enable their possessor to make a fortune or achieve a great career. Business men, for instance, understand very well that it is what one saves rather than what one makes that assures wealth. But who is it that saves money? It is he who is strong enough to sacrafice the present to the future, who has the fortitude to endure a self-imposed privation and the manhood to rosist temptation. Character does not work. It is so in every field. Everywhere victory begins at home, and self-denial and self-conquest precede and prepare the way triumph over the world. If one loves to read, if his quick and sympathetic mink is interested in many things, the danger is that he will fall into a habit of miscellaneous and indiscriminate reading, fatol to thoroughness in any one department. He who would master a profession or a science must begin by giving up a great deal that he would like to know. He must say: "This thing I will know; and, therefore, that thing I can not know." Self-denial and persistence are here again the secrets of success; but those traits are of the very fiber of education. The sober faculty of judgment is certainly of the utmost value in the practical affair of life; but it is a faculty which is made up as much of character as of intellect. Men, as as a rule, are to much inclined to overlook the reaction of character upon intellect. The safe man is he who walks in the path of duty, the strong man is he who clothes himself with the strength of principle. The grandest characters have an affinity for right and truth. They succeed because they depend upon something stronger than any mere device of the intellect or any expedient suggested by the exigencies of a moment. They may suffer temporary defeat; but they follow the guiding light principle with a faith which is wisdom. There is always more or less sophistry in temptation to self-indulgence; and the brighter the intellect the more ingeniously will it plead the cause of error. What we call the faculty of judgment is at its best simply a clear vision of the eternal veracities which persist through the history and finally crush all opposition because they are fundamental and fixed necessities.

WHERE THE BLAME RESTS.

CONCERNING the recent disaster on the Southern Pacific railroad at Lake Labish the San Francisco Chronicle says editorially:

Although there seems to be no reason for challenging the verdict of the coroner's jury in the Salem railroad accident, it having been found after careful inspection of the scene very shortly after the casualty occurred, the Southern Pacific Company is making a desperate effort to shift the responsibility. It has devised a theory that a rail had been removed from the track by tramps or by persons who desired to wreck the train for the purpose of plundering the passengers. A draglar and a track wrench which had been reported stolen from the Salem section-house are said to have been found near the trestle, and the railroad officials are said to be firm in the belief that the train was purposely thrown from the track.

Railroad officials are paid to be firm in their belief on just such points as this; but their belief will not weigh very heavily in the public mind against the verdict of the jury which charged the company with criminal negligence. The jury found that the bridge was unsound, and it will take a great deal of testimony to overturn that finding.

Persons who were injured in the accident and may have a claim against the Southern Pacific Company for damages should see to it that evidence is gathered now and on the spot, before witnesses disappear, and before the broken bridge is repaired or replaced by a new one. Now is the time to begin making ready for the trials which is evident that the proposed defense of the railroad company will make necessary.

If precedent were admissible in evidence a case of negligence could be made against the railroad company very easily. It took a great deal of persistent hammering by the Chronicle to get the Central Pacific to replace its old wooden pier on the other side of the bay by the present mole, although the pier was a constant source of danger, the piles in many places being mere shells, eaten through and through by the teredo, and the policy of the company is just as penny wise and pound foolish to-day as it was then.
