A CASH THAT IS A CURIOSITY

THE extent to which speculators have encroached upon the lands of the United States, and taken to themselves the choicest and the best, depending upon the actual settlers to make their holdings valuable, are many and apparent. They form one of the most gigantic frauds in existence. The Chronicle somewhat facetiously reffers to this matter in relating that it has been reserved for a woman in California to show a more complete recognition of the relations of the people to land conveyed to them by the United States than any man has yet shown or is likely to show. The woman in question has a United States patent to a quarter section of land in Wichita county, Kansas, and she has a religious conviction that the land should go back to the government, for the reason that she does not expect to use the land as a homestead, and thinks that the public domain should go to persons who wish to occupy it as homesteads.

There seems to be no law to fit this case of conscience. The owner of the land wants to get back the money she paid for the land and reconvey the land to the United States, but the officials of the Land Office cannot accept the surrender of her patent, nor can they repay the money she has paid. A special act of congress would be the only way to reach this case.

It is a great pity, however that there have not been more cases of tender conscience during the existence of the land-grant systems of the United States. The intention of all the land laws has been to provide homes from the public domain for actual settlers, but these laws have been so evaded and distorted and bedeviled as to be the favorite weapon of the speculator and land grabber. Thousands upon thousands of acres have fallen into the possession of men who never had the most distant idea of setting on the land, and who have conspired to defeat the benevolent intentions of the government toward the people.

Such a case of conscience as the one referred to should be rewarded for its novelty if for nothing else. Congress should pass a relief bill voting the money out of the treasury to this woman and authorizing the secretary of the interior to accept a surrender of the patent; then a ring fence should be put around the quarter section, and it should be religiously preserved as a curiosity for all time to come.

THE Indian difficulty at the Pine Ridge reservation among the Sioux, appears to be exaggerated as to its importance, but still there is enough of disturbance to cause uneasiness. There has been no actual outbreak, but the government has been fully warranted in making the prompt and effectual movement of the troops that it has done. The result is to keep the malcontents and evil ones in check and probably to avert any extensive depredations. The facts of the business is that no permanent peaceful action among the Sioux and other neighboring tribes of Indians can be looked for as long as Sitting Bull is allowed to have his freedom to concoct and work out his diabolical plans. As he has already forfeited his neck by his atrocious deeds, for the good and peaceful condition of the country that neck should be stretched, or at least he should be placed in confinement where his influence will cease to ferment and stir up his people to bloody deeds.

THE Oregon Railroad Commissioners have summed up their conclusion upon the wreck at Lake Labish, and are in no wise slow in expressing the opinion that the cause of the accident was negligence on the part of the S. P. Company in keeping the bridge in proper repair. In this finding the committee have exhibited a sturdy regard for their duty without fear or favor that will meet with the commendation of the people.

THE Measiah craze of the Indians, probably instigated in the first place by some renegade white man, has raised quite an excitement and caused the horrors of an Indian war to loom up in the minds of the settlers in the vicinity of the reservations, but the prompt concentration of troops on the scene of action has saved all chance for much of a scrimmage and probably averted the effects the acts of some of the fanatical crazy red men.

THE example of the heirs of a rich Austrian is worthy of imitation in this country. The have given $15,000 out of the estate to found a school of housekeeping for girls. If free schools of cooking were established in all American cities, the people who gather statistics at the end of the first quarter of the next century would note a marked decrease in dyspepsia and nervousness and a considerable gain in physical stamina among the American people.

THE National Capital is to be ornamented with bronze statue of Gen. Lafayette, made in France, a very fitting tribute to the noble soldier who stretched forth his strong arm in defense of the weak when our nation first commenced its toddling steps towards independence.

PROHIBITION met with a disastrious defeat in Nebraska at the November election. Forty thousand majority against was rather a bad set back for the temperance movement. Such is the facts of the case however.
