THE DIFFERENCE.

The particular time at which remarks are made, and the particular object to be gained, are the ruling motives to speak irrespective of a moiety of truth or veracity in the words spoken, in some quarters.

For instance it was an object of utmost importance to make the people believe that the McKinley bill was responsible for all the ills of present humanity, so that they would vote the democrats in and the republicans out of office.

One of the most active works in this line was the New York World, which labored assiduously in making the McKinley bill guilty of all the sins in the decalogue.

After the election is over and the making of votes is relegated to the past for another year, the World comes out and says: "Business is reported very good among the clothiers in this city. The wholesalers are very well satisfied with what they are doing, and the retailers say the sales during the last two months have been about 25 per cent., greater than during the same months last year. They say, also, that they anticipate a cold winter, and in consequence expect a good trade.

There is no good reason why the purchaser of ready-made clothing should shudder on account of the new tariff bill. Although the duties are raised from 40 cents to 49½ cents per pound and from 35 per cent. to 50 per cent, ad valorem it will not, according to the clothier and furnisher, have any appreciable effect on the price of clothing, as no ready made clothing is imported. The increased rate on woollens and the various trimmings that enter into the manufacture will eventually have the effect of increasing the price from 10 to 15 per cent. on garments of imported materials; but this will hardly ensue before another year passes, as stocks are already purchased several months in advance. It is probable that by that time other causes will have operated to counteract this increase; so that in this particular branch no noticeable advance will take place, unless clothing is affected by the general rise in prices. Besides, domestic manufacturers are largely supplying the woollens now used in this country."

When votes are not in the market, the truth can be uttered, but as long as the election was pending, only the matter thought to be pregnant with the calling of voters to the free trade side of the question could be enunciated.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

The question of inaugurating commercial connections with our neighbor on the north is a leading, and pertinent one. But the more we consider it the more we are convinced that it is a connection that means a benefit principally upon one side and that not the side of this country either. Canada cannot offer a market for American products that will offset the market we offer for Canadian products, and if Canada wants reciprocity in trade she must first offer reciprocity in political matters. That is she must put herself in shape to help bear the burdens of this government as well as reap its rewards, in other words seek a political as well a commercial union.

As the Chronicle says Canada is like a man who has been in partnership in business with his stepfather for a number of years on such a basis that the young man does most of the work and the stepfather gets the lion's share of the profits. When a more advantageous partnership is offered to the young man, in a pushing, thriving, money-making concern, it does not take him long to make up his mind to dissolve the old partnership and form the new one. And although he may feel a sentimental regret at seeing the old firm name changed and the old sign come down from over the door, he soon conquers this feeling and goes into the work of the new concern with a vim proportionate to the profits which he hopes to realize from the new business.

The lottery business in the United States has received so black an eye from the enactment of the law upon the subject by congress, that it is hopeful it will never again flourish. One share of the law however, is working better than was anticipated. The Tribune says: When the Anti-Lottery bill was passed, it was no part of the government's intention to make a pecuniary profit out of it. That very thing, however, has come to pass. Since this law went into effect the revenues of the New Orleans postoffice have fallen off about one-third, and the clerical force has in consequence been reduced by nine men, whose salaries amounted $6,500. The significant fact, however, is the effect upon the lottery company of its exclusion from the mails. This must have been immense, in spite of its ability to make use of express companies to some extent in carrying on its demoralizing business.
