An Unusual Year. In years past at this time of year the stage of water in the Willamette has been several feet above the present register. Usually there is good boating on the upper river at this time, but now steamers would be unable to come up this far. But they could come were it not for those two or three miserable bars. Boats would find much for them to do if they could get up here now. At every warehouse there is wheat in large quantities to be moved, to say nothing of large quantities of other products. What the central and upper valley wants is an open river the year around. The attention of Oregon's senators and representatives should be attracted from this until the end is accomplished.—St. Albans.

ALBANY'S PROSPERITY.

Her Manufacturing, Mining, Railroad and Other Industrial Interests.

The current issue of the West Shore devotes considerable space to the progress and growth of Albany. In addition to some very good illustrations of the city that journal says: Prominent among the interior cities of Oregon is Albany, seat of justice of Linn county, one of the largest and most prosperous counties in the great Willamette valley. The business streets of Albany are well built up with two and three-story brick blocks, some of them very handsome structures, and all of them occupied by stores carrying large stocks of goods. In fact First street presents a metropolitan appearance. Three large brick blocks have been erected the present year also a handsome church, several elegant residences and a large number of other houses and business structures. The city has voted to bond itself for $100,000 for the purpose of paying for a system of sewerage costing $60,000, the work upon which is nearly completed and for building a wagon and horse bridge across the Willamette at the mouth of the Calapooia on the west end of the city. The bridge will be a steel structure costing about $100,000. There is already a good bridge across the river built by the Oregon Pacific railroad.

A line of street cars runs through the city, the chief business streets and to the Southern Pacific depot and there is a project on foot for the construction of an electric motor line through the city and by a circular route reaching all the leading additions. The Oregon Pacific owns a great deal of property in the city, along the river and in the suburbs, and such a line would greatly increase its value. It has a round house there, and has selected this place for the location of machine shops. This railroad connects Albany with the coast at Yaquina bay and has been constructed eastward into the Cascade mountains, heading for Boise City, Idaho. Being where it first touches the Willamette river from either direction, Albany is its most important point and chief shipping station. Steamers on the river run in connection with the railroad. The main line of the Southern Pacific freight railroad to San Francisco runs through Albany, and a branch line, tapping eastward to Lebanon, runs a fertile agricultural section further to the east. The Union Pacific has a line of boats on the river, running to Portland, so that Albany has three transportation companies competing for business, rendering this the most extensive shipping point in the upper Willamette valley. Immense quantities of grain and considerable flour are shipped. Three large warehouses, belonging to the Union Pacific, Oregon Pacific and Farmers' organization, supply a room for a large amount of wheat. Four flouring mills consume a portion of the crop and ship much flour. The country for miles around Albany, on both sides of the river, is very level, and is one vast field of wheat, yielding an average of thirty bushels of the finest quality of white winter wheat to the acre.

Not only is this a great grain producing region, but it is becoming a fruit growing section of importance. It is only a short while since there was a market for Oregon fruit in the quantity of through many thousands of trees have been set out the past three or four years the new orchards have not yet reached a good bearing condition. Nevertheless, the older orchards supply a large quantity of superior fruit and in a few years the product will be enormous. It is desirable to become one of the leading fruit producing points of the country in the shipping point. Fruit canning and packing establishments already existing there, but the opening for a large industry of this nature is good.

Albany is also an important lumber depot, no less than ten lumber yards doing business there. There is a sawmill in the city, but the bulk of the lumber comes from mills further east toward the mountains. The amount of valuable timber in the tributary region is enormous, and this will always be the headquarters of large lumbering interests. In the city are a chair factory, furniture factory and a branch of the Oregon Pacific and Door factory of Grant's Pass. The Calapooia and Santiam rivers and the Oregon Pacific supply connection with the timber region to the eastward, and if the proposed Southern Pacific branch from Lebanon to the Santiam mines be built it will tap great bodies of the finest timber.

There are other important industries that contribute to the city's prosperity. An artificial ice factory supplies not only Albany but all the towns in the upper end of the valley. A large cooler mill was put in operation this year, employing about 200 hands and using the superior quality of wool produced in that region. A wire mattress factory, two foundries, a brewery and several other industries are also located there. A company supplies electric lights for the houses and for private use. Three good banks, two of them national, are a good index of the commercial stability of the city, as are twelve churches, a fine public school, a Catholic seminary and a Presbyterian college of its moral and intellectual status. Several of the churches edifices are large and handsome structures. The imposing court house, shown in the engraving, cost $75,000.

Near Albany is found the finest building stone yet discovered on the Pacific coast. This stone has been known and used for twenty years, but it has never been pushed upon the market and has not had an opportunity to make its merits known elsewhere. Portland builders are shipping stone from as far as Arizona, much inferior in quality to this and at greater expense. The quarry of fine sandstone belonging to G. L. Blackburn and James Abraham, lies one and one-half miles up the river, and near both the river and railroad. Stone from the quarry has stood the test of time for twenty years in buildings in Albany. It is now being used in the Centenary M. E. Church of East Portland, where it attracted so much attention that Mr. Abraham, a capitalist of that city, purchased a half interest in the quarry. A switch will be put in from the railroad and the quarry worked more extensively in the future. Frank Wood, an expert carver in stone and marble, who has made a personal examination of all the chief quarries in the United States, owns a quarry of grey sandstone a little more than a mile from town, that he deems to be superior to any yet known. Experts who have examined it speak very highly of its quality. It splits very evenly in all directions and stands the severest tests of freezing and heating. It will carve as sharply as marble and can be turned perfectly on a lathe. It was of this stone that Mr. Wood made the beautiful Oregon memorial stone for the Washington monument. The merits of this stone are becoming known, and it will no doubt soon be in great demand for the elegant structures of Portland and other coast cities. The importance of these large ledges of sandstone to the city of the north and west can not be over-estimated.

On the middle fork of the Santiam river, about sixty miles from Albany, and reached by road twenty miles from the Oregon Pacific, is a mining district that promises to equal the most famous in the country. Surface indications show it to be exceedingly rich leads, and development work is proving both the permanence of the ore bodies and their increased richness the greater depth is reached. Both free gold and galena ore are found. The Albany Mining & Milling Co. has a five man mill on its claim, which was operated for a time on a trial run of ore, showing an average of $50 to the ton, an exceedingly valuable free gold ore, since it is mined and milled at such a low figure as to leave a handsome profit. Five more stamps will be added to the mill in the spring, at which time three Portland companies, one Salem company, and possibly others, will also erect mills on their properties.

The ledges lie in a splendid position for economical working, being on the side of a hill, so that they can be tapped both by shaft and tunnel, the ore easily removed. All the indications point to the Santiam as the greatest free gold district known. There are also excellent galena ledges, upon which development work is showing good results. Preparations are also being made for extensive hydraulic mining by a company owning twenty-five claims of gravel or placer ground. The Southern Pacific will construct a branch from Lebanon to the Santiam mines just as soon as they have been sufficiently developed to warrant it, as preliminary arrangements have been made for the same. The great mining districts on Blue River and McKenzie river, where development work is revealing excellent ledges. Albany is situated so as to profit most by these mining developments than any other city in the valley.

SHOT IN THE RIBS.

Policeman McClain Puts a Bullet Through a Man.

Last evening just before the arrival of the evening train Policeman McClain noticed suspicious character around the depot, and questioned him. He said he was cook at the Waverly hotel and was expecting a boy on the train. The officer told him to go home, and later when seen he started to run around the freight depot. Policeman McClain gave chase, and ordered him to stop, and not doing so he fired at him, the bullet entering his left side going through and out, passing under three ribs. He was taken to the Waverly hotel and Dr. Maston dressed the wound, which, though serious, will not prove fatal.

HOLIDAY SHOPPERS. Should See the Wonderful Array at the Golden Rule Bazaar.

He has replenished and enlarged his entire stock and now has a store that is a credit to himself and an ornament to the city. His shelves, counters and every available space are filled with the choicest and most varied stock of goods ever seen in this valley, including a mammoth display of holiday goods. He has added a new line which consists of a beautiful assortment of rolled gold jewelry warranted to wear as good as gold and costing one-tenth as much money, diamond cut pins, rings, fine umbrellas for holiday presents and novelties. His stock is now in an ideal condition and holiday shoppers should lose no time in seeing his wonderful array which is not surpassed by any on the coast either in elegance or prices.
