Seagulls, which the Astoria nimrods dignify with the name of sea-pigeons, are shot in great numbers on the river in front of that city, and this "game" is picked up and peddled by small boys to Chinamen. These "pigeons" are said to be very palatable after being parboiled a week or two.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE RIVER.

Shall There Be Any Action In That Direction.

To any one who is conversant with the wants and needs of the Willamette Valley in the shipping line, the central route of transportation presents the best and most available method of getting our surplus products to market. By the central route we refer to the Willamette river, nature's great thoroughfare.

Water ways are the cheapest and best "roads to market" that can be found, but the trouble with our Willamette road is that it can be used only when the Oregon mist has moistened the dust of ages that has accumulated upon the general bars and snags that sully its otherwise fair surface for transporting our wares.

Uncle Sam puts his fist in his pocket and jingles the coin, which he says we can use for the purpose of getting rid of those unsightly snags and gravel bars. Then our Willamette highway would be available at all times of the year, and the truly great thoroughfare for carrying our wheat to the big ships down by the sea. The question for us to consider is to see that some of that coin is applied for the purpose of clearing the river, so that boats can run the entire season.

Of course it takes some exertion to bring about that desired end, but the resulting effect will well repay all the trouble and time spent in that direction, for it means a great deal for Albany and vicinity, and will tenfold repay all that is expended in that direction.

Salem is already taking active measures looking to that end, and shall Albany stand idly by and use no efforts, in a matter that so vitally effects it? Let our citizens add the weight of their active efforts until the desired end is accomplished. It is an ancient but well established axiom that "God helps those who help themselves." Then help yourselves by immediately moving in the matter, and giving no rest until the improvement to the river is an established fact and matters are so arranged that when the route is once placed in running order it can be kept so by the exercise of eternal vigilance, which is the price of liberty in all human affairs.

The matter is an important one and should be looked after.

The following appeared as editorial in Sunday's Oregonian and is [illegible] "The greater necessity in the matter of river improvement in Oregon has largely absorbed the [illegible]. The removal of obstructions to navigation on the Columbia river is without question the greater necessity of our inland as well as foreign commerce, and in keeping this fact before the people the needs of local commerce on the Upper and Middle Willamette have been neglected. The value of this portion of the river as a natural channel of commerce for the vast and fertile section immediately tributary to cannot be overestimated. It is a highway that no monopoly can claim, and that private interests cannot divert from the use of the public. Its gravel beds should be dredged and its channel kept free from snags by the judicious expenditure of an adequate appropriation each year. The cost would be comparatively small, if the work were regularly and systematically done. The Salem Statesman calls attention to the fact that the people would have an open river from Salem down to the sea if two bars, aggregating a distance of about 600 feet, were dredged properly; and that journal is justified in asking that it is a disgrace that this has not been done and the river kept open. Farmers are naturally greatly attached to the river. Those whose farms lie along its course find it a matter both of convenience and economy to ship their stable products by boat instead of by rail, and the neglect of the river channel has been, and is a source of real hardship to many of them. The appropriation for the upper Willamette by the last congress was reasonably generous, and it may be hoped that it will be intelligently and promptly expended to the end that navigation may be uninterrupted between Salem and Portland during the lowest stage of water next season."

Up-River Improvement.

The Oregonian says: In regard to the improvement of the upper Willamette Major Handbury states that the appropriation for this purpose is $11,000, of which $5000 may be expended in dredging at Ross island and Clackamas rapids. He does not know whether it will be worth while to expend this sum at these points, but is having a survey made to ascertain. At Clackamas rapids some sixty feet of the old dam was blown out a short time since, which has somewhat improved the channel there. The snag boat Corvallis has been in use on the upper Willamette for years, and it is now absolutely necessary that she shall have a new hull. When this is built, if it should be considered advisable to dredge at Ross island there will be but a small amount left for the improvement of the upper Willamette.

One Who Wasn't Hurt.

The Salem Statesman says that the following incident of the late wreck is from the Rutland, Vt., Herald, of Nov. 29th. The man spoken of was probably on the train, but the facts had become badly twisted by the time they got as far east as Vermont. Here is the article: "Phillip R. Steward, a son of ex-Governor Stewart, of Mindlebury, a graduate of Yale and captain of the Yale baseball nine in 1886, passed through Chicago Monday on his way east. While on a Union Pacific train near Salem, Or., he felt a desire to smoke, left his berth, and went into the smoking compartment of the parlor car. He had not been there five minutes before the train jumped the track on a trestle, fell down a ravine and carried 600 feet of trestle with it. A man who was sitting in Stewart's berth was instantly killed. Out of sixteen people in the car, only Stewart and one other were able to get out of the wreck without help. They only injury he received was that he bit his tongue." Rutland is the home of some of the brothers and relatives of James McGarry, of Utah, who was also on the train.

Pretty and Good.

The Oregonian says: The pretty little apples with a bright red cheek, known as "Lady apples," are now in great demand, as they are largely used in decorating Christmas trees, etc., and one dealer here has just shipped a carload of them to New York. It used to be that a few boxes of these apples brought in for Christmas market, was about the whole crop, but there are many of them raised now. Within the past few weeks over 2000 boxes of these apples have been handled by commission men here, and they are shipped in every direction. Beside being a pretty apple, and from their small size adapted for ornamenting Christmas trees, they are excellent keepers and fine-flavored eating apples.

Are Coming to Salem.

The Salem Journal says: Yesterday afternoon the Board of Trade received a telegram from T. H. Hudson & Sons that they would send a representative to Salem at once to look into the matter of building a furniture factory here. The gentlemen evidently mean business and it now remains for the people of Salem to act, which no one doubts they will do liberally and promptly. The proposition as set forth in a letter received a short time ago provides that they shall have a factory in operation by the first of next June which will give employment to fifty men. The representative is expected to be here in about a week, when the arrangements will be completed and work at once be begun in selecting a location and putting the buildings thereon.

Cold, But no Snow.

The weather still remains favorable for outdoor work of all kinds, but is perceptibly cooler the last few day, though there has not been frost enough to nip even the most tender plants. The signal station was flying the blue flag yesterday, which indicates rain or snow. The temperature is hardly low enough for snow yet, but if the temperature falls a little there may be a dash of the "fleecy." The public would much prefer rain, and that is probably what we shall get first. —Oregonian.

Lane County's Heavy Taxation.

The commissioner of Lane county have made a levy for the present year of 22½ mills for state, county, and school purposes. This is an unusually large levy and was made to defray the expenses of the past summer in rebuilding bridges, etc., which were washed out by the flood of last winter. It was thought best to pay up at once instead of carrying outstanding warrants until they gradually wore away.

At the Opera House To-night.

Everybody should see Gorton's famous minstrels to-night. The troup is composed of white talent and we believe they are one of the best minstrel shows on the road. They have been in organization for sixteen years and have some of the best "burnt cork performers" in the profession. The afternoon parade by the gold band is said to be particularly fine. Seats are on sale at Will & Link's.

A Canard Refuted.

Corvallis Gazette: We are authorized to say that there is nothing in the recent dispatch stating that the Oregon Pacific grade being sold to the Great Northern. Every little while reports similar to this get started, but neither the directors, stockholders or officers ever find it out. There is an old saying that "one must go away from home to get the news," and its truth is verified in this matter.

What Astoria Has.

Sealand Journal: Under the heading of "What Astoria Has," the Columbian says: "Real children in her public shools, covered with the finest timber on the Pacific slope." Oregon must certainly be making rapid strides, as but a few years ago, it was generally understood that the natives were covered with moss and had webs between their toes. We'll take a quarter section of children. Truly if you don't take the Columbian, you don't get the news.

Ready for Work.

The Green Basin lumbering company, on the Oregon Pacific railroad, 44 miles east of Albany in Marion county, has completed the flume from the mill, a mile up the mountain from the railroad to the siding, and will be shipping lumber in a few days. The flume is a substantial structure and transports the lumber in good shape—in fact is a decided success.

The Reason Why.

Why is it that Klein Bros. can afford to sell boots and shoes so reasonable? Because they are both practical shoe makers and make of their expenses by working on the shoe bench, and any boot or shoe you buy of them, no matter what kind it is man, womans or childs, that rip, run overs or the sole rips loose they repair them for you free of charge, and as they do all the work themselves, they don't charge you 25 to 50 cents a pair extra for a warrant to pay some shoemaker to repair them for you. They also make a specialty of repairing rubber boots.

How Severe Colds Are Broken Up in Montana.

From the Virginia City, Mont. Madisonian.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit we consider it a duty, and we take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing. We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup, and we have since relieved, in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use as have several of our friends whom we have recommend it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have a cough and want to stop it, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will do the work. For sale by Foshay & Mason.
