OREGON'S GOVERNOR.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Recent Political History of the State.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PORTLAND, Dec. 10.—Almost any Saturday afternoon, half an hour before the departure of the California express, a tall thoughtful looking man may be seen walking down Stark street toward the ferry landing nodding pleasantly to acquaintances and grasping the hand of friends he may meet. He is inclined to stoop somewhat and in his hand he carries a small traveling satchel, while across his arm is thrown a brown overcoat that has evidently seen better days. He is not elegantly dressed. On the contrary, his raiment is rather plain, while a black necktie of the style of forty years ago, encircles a white choker.

"Who is that gentleman?" asks a bystander.

"Why, that's Pennoyer, the governor of Oregon," and the man turns and watches the form of the governor now just going through the gateway of the ferry.

A curious set of circumstances was the cause of Sylvester Pennoyer, a democrat, being chosen chief executive of a state that is certainly republican by from 5000 to 10,000 majority. In June, 1885, the democrats nominated Pennoyer as a candidate for mayor against John Gates, who died while in office. Mr. Pennoyer made no special fight for the office and was beaten by about 150 votes, running much better than his most sanguine friends expected. In the early spring of 1886, just after a hard cold winter, through which many laboring men had barely struggled, came the anti-Chinese agitation of Multnomah county. Several blatant agitators of the Nat Baker and Cronin types, held meetings in different part of what is known as "Couch," mostly frequented by the bone and sinew, the muscle and brawn of the town. After many incendiary speeches against the Chinese the working men were finally incited to acts of violence, and several Chinese dwelling on the outskirts of East Portland and Albina were blown up with giant powder, and some of the inoffending Celestials wounded. Then the business men and merchants of Portland formed a "law and order league." A meeting was called at the County Court house Wednesday, March 16, 1886, for the purpose of devising means to allay and end the agitation. This meeting was called by Mayor Gates and it was the intention that he should preside at it, but, long before the meeting hour arrived the court room was filled with the contingent from "Couch." They had rallied in force, and when the movers of the meeting arrived at the court house they could only get to the front door. Then there was a consultation, and Mayor Gates was advised to go up stairs, call the meeting to order and appoint a committee of safety to take measures. But Mayor Gates seemed reluctant to attempt the undertaking, and while they were vacillating and counseling, Colonel Hamilton and Editor Thayer of the Daily news, and several other prominet anti Chinese agitators captured the upstairs meeting and made Mr. Pennoyer chairman. He accepted and delivered a brief address to the now jubilant agitators. His speech, while he was in favor of order, was strongly against the Chinese, and was received with uproarious cheers by the mob. A set of resolutions were adopted which plainly showed the drift of the meeting.

In the meantime the other crowd had assembled in the county court room and with Mayor Gates presiding, had appointed committees and passed more resolutions. Thus ended a meeting that for a while threatened to bring two bodies of excited men together that might have ended with different results. From one meeting went up the cry, "Pennoyer, the working man's friend," that was taken up and carried over the state, and from the other went forth a quiet determined body of men who immediately proceeded to work, and by organization and drilling, evolved, in a few days, several parties of young men that were the neucleus of what is now known as the Oregon National Guard. Many young men who had not the least idea of joining a military company placed themselves under Sheriff Jordan's orders and every night for several weeks guarded the lives and property of a lot of heathens for whom personally they did not care a rap. The arrest of Nat. Baker, Al. White and others, by the United States authorities, broke up the "Chinese must go party."

But the Pennoyer boom did not die. About the time the agitators failed the political conventions began to assemble, and the crowd who a few weeks before were intent on driving the opium smokers from the state, now appeared as delegates from the various wards and precincts and were hurrahing "Pinnawyer's the man." "Wait till he's elected and then the bloody Chinese 'ill go." This enthusiasm and to the nomination of Hon. T. R. Cornelius, who, although an honest and good man, was certainly no match for Sylvester on the stump, elected him governor. Several other circumstances also combined in Pennoyer's favor, one of the most important being the Cornelius-Powers feud which culminated in a shooting affray in front of the Esmond hotel one Fourth of July night.

Notwithstanding all these circumstances, Governor Pennoyer has been a good officer, and that he has the confidence of the people of the state was shown in his re-election this year, defeating Hon. D. P. Thompson, one of the foremost and best known men in Oregon, against whom the only thing that could be said was that he was a banker. Governor Pennoyer is a clear and forcible writer, and at one time edited the Oregon Herald, published in the seventies, in Portland. Later he went into the saw-mill business where he has amassed a handsome fortune.

IMMIGRATION NOTES.

A Heavy Flow of Travel Expected into Oregon and Washington.

Notwitwstanding the comparatively little travel there is a constant demand for information at the Board of Immigration rooms say the Portland Telegram. Of course things are not as lively as during the summer months but Secretary Maston and Mr. Thompson are kept on the move all the time. A very heavy inflow of immigrants is expected in the spring. Nearly all of those coming West now are directing their steps to either Oregon or Washington. The South and Southwest are having a lull in the immigration business, and it is likely to continue so for some time time.

The Albany Board of Trade is also in receipt of many inquires from eastern people, both from those in search of business locations and land. There is every reason to expect a large immigration to Oregon next spring and summer, and the railroad, mining and other industrial enterprises on foot will attract many of them to this portion of Oregon.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

We expect to organize a special department for boys in the near future.

Make it a point to be with us from 4 to 5 P. M. next Sabbath. We need you.

We welcome to our service any stranger, who may be stopping in Albany over Sabbath,

The regular monthly meeting of the association will be held at their rooms to-night (Friday Dec. 12) at 8 P. M.

Rev. E. R. Prichard, of the Presbyterian church, at the Y. M. C. A. hall next Sunday at 4 P. M. Let every member come and bring a friend.

During the week past there has been 105 visitors at our rooms. Wednesday evening there were 27 boys in our rooms at one time, ranging in age from 8 to 16 years.

Don't despise the boys because they are full of life and energy or because they are full of mischief and like to run and jump and kick holes in the atmosphere. They will soon be behind your counters, they will soon handle your money, they will soon make your laws and do your voting. What the boys are so will the nation be, so do not forget to let your sweetest influence fall among the boys.

HOLIDAY SHOPPERS.

Should See the Wonderful Array at the Golden Rule Bazaar

Mr. Julius Gradwold, the energetic and enterprising proprietor of the Golden Rule Bazaar in this city, whose store contains the largest and best selected stock of crockery, glass and other wares for domestic use, in the valley, as well as fancy wares, toys and beautiful holiday goods, has returned from a several months trip to San Francisco, where he combined business with pleasure. He has replenished and enlarged his entire stock and now has a store that is a credit to himself and an ornament to the city. His shelves, counters and every available space are filled with the choicest and most varied stock of of goods ever seen in this valley, including a mammoth display of holiday goods. He has added a new line which consists of a beautiful assortment of rolled gold jewelry warranted to wear as good as gold and costing one-tenth as much money, diamond cut pins rings, fine umbrellas for holiday presents and novelties. His stock is now in and holiday shoppers should lose no time in seeing his wonderful array which is not surpassed by any on the coast either in elegance or prices.

Important to Housekeepers.

It gives Julius Gradwohl great satisfaction in selling his fine Golden Rule teas and baking powder, with elegant prizes or without them, that his customers who have purchased invalubly return and say they are well pleased, that the tea is No. 1, and the baking powder is as good as the best. All his teas and baking powder bears the name of Julius Gradwohl's Golden Rule Bazaar, and are expessly put up for his business, and he still continues to give with each pound of tea or baking powder an elegant piece of glassware.

Completed.

The Springfield bridge is completed and is now open for travel. The bridge was tested last week and was accepted by the county Judge and commissioners and a warrant ordered drawn in favor of the Pacific Bridge Co., for $27,386, the balance due them. The bridge cost about $36,000. It is solid, but light and is a single span 400 feet in length, and is built above the highest water mark known.

Yaquina Mail Facilities.

The Board of Trade of Yaquina bay have forwarded resolutions to Representative Hermann, complaining that the contractor of mail service between Yaquina City and Newport, having taken the contract too low, has failed to carry the same, and it is asked that steamer service be put on. The department has made an order directing the Yaquina postmaster to provide special service that will make schedule time.

FOR AN OPEN RIVER.

The HERALD is not the only newspaper in Oregon that is contending for the improvement of the Upper Wiiiamette, so as to make an open river for navigation the year round. The Oregonian says: "In regard to the improvement of the Upper Willamette Major Handbury states that the appropriations for this purpose is $11,000, of which $5000 may be expended in dredging at Ross island and Clackamas rapids. He does not know whether it will be worth while to expend this sum at these points, but is having a survey made to ascertain. At Clackamas rapids some sixty feet of the old dam was blown out a short time since, which has somewhat improved the channel there. The snag boat Corvallis has been in use on the Upper Willamette for years, and it is absolutely necessary that she shall have a new hull. When this is built, if it should be considered advisable to dredge at Ross island there will be but a small amount left for the improvement of the Upper Willamette."

The Salem Statesman adds: "It is to be regretted that the government, by the inactivity of its agents, is keeping the Upper Willamette closed. There are funds on hand with which to clear the channel, but for one reason or another nothing is being done. Should Major Handbury come up this way for a change he would discover that the $11,000 appropriated for the improvement of the upper river could be expended with much better results between Butteville and Albany than at Ross island or Clackamas rapids. The central valley towns want an open river all the way down. And why can't they get it?"

NEEDS OF THE SANTIAM MINES.

What the Santiam mining district most needs is, first, mail and transportation facilities. We need the mail line running up the north fork of the South Santiam extended beyond Whitcomb through to the mines, a distance of 18 miles. We need the trail just completed widened to a wagon road, so as to make it possible to get machinery in on wheels in the spring. We need a custom mill to work the ore from the young mines and prospects. There is now quite a number of prospects that could furnish from five to ten tons of their first grade ore to the custom mill to work, and put the second grade ore by for future use, and at the same time the first grade would help them in the development of their mines to that point where they could see their way clear to build mills of their own. We also need a saw-mill and a store. PROSPECTOR

The following recent cure is most conclusive in the evidence of Dr. Aborn's wonderful success in curing asthma, bronchitis, catarrh and consumption.
