UNDESIRABLE IMMIGRATION

This country has kept an open door for the rich and poor alike of all nations—except China. This hospitality is beautiful in sentiment, but is not satisfactory in practice. A wise host will not open the door of his clean, warm home to those who are known to be vicious or associated with crime, nor should this country do this same thing, which it is now practicing. It would seem easy enough to separate the stream of immigration and receive the good, who are always welcome to our shores, and to leave the bad where they belong.

Of usual interest is the announcement that Surgeon-General Hamilton has recently returned from a tour of the chief European ports, whence come the majority of the immigrants who land upon our shores. His report to the secretary of the treasury emphasizes the need of precaution. London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Bremen, Naples, and Trieste were visited in turn. At none of these ports, according to this report, is conducted any systematic medical examination of emigrants. All comers are alike allowed to sail for this country, and society has a protection from an influx of criminals, lunatics, and paupers only such mild regulations as obtain at our ports. The fact that no systematic, and hence thorough, medical examination is required of emigrants at the ports of departure is by no means the greatest fault that lies in the immigrant system of the United States. The Surgeon-General tell us that, so far as he has been able to learn, no government in Europe now encourages emigration to the United States. That it is gratifying to learn, for the people of this country have been quite of the impression in the past that England, at least, has been in the habit of emptying its almshouses and penitentieries upon American shores. Indeed, at one time, undoubted evidence of the entire correctness of this impression was amply supplied. But even with the discontinuence of assisted emigration, the United States is not yet wholly free from the danger of transported pauperism, and has absolutely no protection against imported criminals. The suggestion of the Surgeon-General as to the best means of controlling and regulating immigration is not wholly new. It has been presented in various forms in argument upon this topic. But would appear to be at once the most feasible and the most efficacious of any plan yet proposed. Every intending emigrant, he suggests, shall produce to the consul of the United States nearest his home, evidence from the proper authorities, satisfactory to the consul, that he has not been convicted of any crime and that he has never been a public charge, and shall also produce a physician certificate of health. The consul's permit to the intending emigrant upon the receipt of this evidence would be his passport to enter an American port. The Surgeon-General still further suggests that this consul's certificate might state whether the bearer intends to become a naturalized citizen of the United States. This is an excellent suggestion, as a requirement that the consul's certificate shall be produced, when application for naturalization is made, would be an effectual bar against admission to citizenship before the legal residence shall have been obtained. The adoption of such a plan as this would be of material assistance to the immigration officers at the United States ports, would exclude more rigidly than now the insane, the pauper, the idiotic, and those afflicted with disease. But, far more important than all these, it would operate as an effectual bar to such characters as have made certain districts of the great cities of this country a terror. Anarchism and the Mafia thrive by accessions from the criminal classes in Europe. When our ports are guarded by such powerful means as this proposed against the entrance of habitual criminals, one of the most serious problems of the day will have been more than half solved.

When the legislature meets in January that body will be asked for an appropriation for the Orphan's home and hospital in this city, and it should be granted. Albany and Linn county has never asked or received much from the state, and is entitled to an appropriation for a public hospital.

The producers of the state seem to have correctly sized up the proposed new tax law, formulated by the hold over senatorial committee, and conclude it is not policy to jump out of the frying pan into the fire; therefore they are strong in their opposition to the proposed law. If any decided strength is developed for the measure in the legislature it will receive a terrible set back from the farming community of the state.

How Severe Colds Are Broken Up in Montana.

From the Virginia City, Mont. Madisonian.

When we find a medicine we know to possess genuine merit we consider it a duty, and we take pleasure in telling the public what it is. Such a medicine we found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, last winter, when la grippe was prevailing. We are satisfied that we warded off several attacks that were threatening by the use of this syrup, and we have since relieved, in a few hours, severe colds, and in the course of two or three days, entirely broken them up by its use as have several of our friends whom we have recommend it. It is all that it is represented to be by the manufacturers. If you have a cough and want to stop it, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will do the work. For sale by Foshay & Mason.
