END OF THE INDIAN WAR.

The Indian war is ended, and the administration is to be congratulated upon the termination of a serious Indian outbreak with very little loss of life. Prompt action did it. In the early care which President Harrison took to be informed of the condition of things in the Sioux country, as well as in the directions he gave for the massing of an efficient army wherever it was needed before an outbreak had actually occurred, the president displayed his usual good judgment and foresight. The correspondence given out, wherein the president is shown, three months ago, to be actively engaged in the direction of military operations for the protection of settlers and the safety of the Indians, is, of itself, an explanation of the surprising good fortune that has attended the effort to prevent a general war. Too often, in the past, Indian difficulties have been allowed to run along without the personal attention of the executive until war had become inevitable. Mr. Harrison's experience in public affairs, his profound knowledge of the west, his extensive travels all over the country, and his naturally careful and conscientious method did not allow such a misfortune to befall the country in this instance. The president entitled to warm praise and hearty thanks for prudent and faithful behavior. A weak or an uninformed person in his place would have got the country into a most lamentable situation.

The annual destruction of property by fires in the United States, forms one of the immense expenses of the country. The Louisville Courier-Journal has been collating facts upon the subject and finds the total fire loss for 1890 is estimated at $108,000,000, as compared with $144,000,000 in 1889, $100,000,000 in 1888, $130,000,000 in 1887, and $115,000,000 in 1886. This matter is one of more importance than is generally believed. To the country at large, there is no compensation for the loss by fire; insurance distributes this tax, but does not in the least make it good. On the contrary, to the actual loss by fire must be added the cost of distribution; or, in other words, the expense of all the insurance companies doing business in the country; a large sum in itself. To this, again, must be added the cost of all the fire departments and the cost of all the devices for avoiding fires and for making houses fire-proof. The cost of the fire department of Louisville is now more than $150,000, from which statement one may get some idea of the total expense, remembering that there are twenty cities in America larger than Louisville, The actual loss by fire was for last year about as large as the money appropriated for the payment of pensions. A decrease in this item of $30,000,000 is especially at this time, a cause for congratulation. It is not merely "money," but so much capital; it is just $30,000,000 added to the resources of the country at a time when these resources have been subjected to severe drains. It is well always to remember that, while times may be hard and business disturbed by vicious legislation and certain temporary causes, the energies of the American people are almost inexhaustible; hence we are able to do and endure what would permanently cripple any other people. The loss, as we have said, is total; and it is a good report, a healthy and hopeful sign, when the insurance companies say that this tax of 1889 was less by $30,000,000 than it was the year before.

The holders of mortgages who are now residents of the county, expect the country to protect their law, that a support be given the national bankrupt law, favoring an appropriation by congress for the completion of the locks at the Cascades of the Columbia; that there be no change in the sailor boarding house law.

The state board of commerce in its session at Salem, after formulating the legislative work for the World's Fair Oregon exhibit, branched out and made a number of recommendations, among which were the following. Favoring any enterprises looking to irrigation of the arid lands of Eastern Oregon; that the board of the World's Fair commissioners consist of five persons; that the upper Willamette be improved; that the mortgage tax law be repealed, the legal rate of interest be six per cent. and there be no exemption for indebtedness; that there be homestead exemption interests, and collect their money for them if it comes to a foreclosure, and are unwilling to bear any of the expense themselves. That is the situation in asking the repeal of the mortgage tax law, for it only locates the tax; of itself the mortgage tax law taxes nothing. It only says that the lawful tax upon the mortgage under the old statutes shall be paid in the county where all the expense in defending the mortgage is located, and where the real estate on which it is placed is lying.

Democratic newpipers appear to take great comfort in remarking that postponement of action on the election bill in the federal senate killed the republican party. O, of course. Cleveland's election in 1884 also killed it; killed it as dead as several door nails. But in 1888 there it was again; but where was Cleveland? In fact, "killed," as applied to the republican party, is quite killing.

The Brooklyn Bridge.

One of the loveliest scenes to be seen in New York city is at the Brooklyn bridge every morning and evening, thousands of people riding across on cable cars, which run at intervals of five minutes. The same can be seen at Mueller & Garrett's cash grocery. People can be seen going in and out of their place all day long with pleased contenances because there is the place to get just what you want at the lowest cash figures.

Immense bargains in childrens and misses shoes are to be found on Searls' bargin table.

Ex-County Commissioner Lane Co, Oregon.

Springfield, Lane county, Oregon.

Prof J. W. Johnson, president of the State university, says it cured him of a cough after two other prescriptions had failed. Likewise two of his little girls used it to cure their coughs. Mrs Mark Bailey, wife of Prof. Bailey, sent it to Prof. Johnson, and recommends it to all who suffer from colds and coughs. For coughs it acts like a charm, and can be inhaled into the lipes or passages, where no other cough cures can reach.
