M. Wilkins, Oregon's World's Fair commissioner, was in this city yesterday.

A gentleman's tan colored glove found in this city, awaits an owner at this office.

Mr. H. M. Hopkins, of the firm of Hopkins Bros., who recently went east after his family, is expected home in a few days.

A committee of leading and solid citizens of Salem have organized to devise a plan for relocation of the Willamette university.

An enjoyable dinner party was given yesterday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Sox, in honor of the 17th anniversary of their marriage.

A telegram was received yesterday from Denver, Colorado, announcing the serious illness of Mr. Chris Finlayson, a brother of Mrs. Judge Powell, of this city.

The barbers of this city, C. A. Brown, W. A. Mack, Al. Reed, Louis Viereck and Thos. Jones, have entered into an agreement not to open their shops on Sunday.

It would be better to divide Linn county according to the wishes of the people of the "Forks of the Santiam" than to have it divided a year or two hence by cutting off Brownsville and the southern portion of the county.

The steamer Salem is now plying on the upper Willamette. The steamer Northwest will soon be in condition to resume her regular run, having had the cylinder heads in her engines replaced. The Salem will also run regularly on the upper river hereafter, taking the Albany, Salem and Portland route, making two round trips weekly.

Elder Shea, of Sweet Home, is in the city, having come down with a load of onions. He says that Justice Humphrey has seen fit to refer to him as the "Mormon preacher." He says that Judge Humphrey is a good talker, as well as a good judge of law, and he ought to be a presiding elder as he would be a valuable acquisition at camp-meetings.

Last night at the United Presbyterian church Rev. W. W. Logan preached a powerful sermon on "The privilege of choosing life." A good audience was in attendance and several were induced to make the wise choice. Afternoon service at 3 P. M. to-day and preaching at 7:30. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these meetings.

Limit of Land Rights.

There has been some misconstruction placed upon the law passed by congress last fall, limiting the amount of land a settler may enter, to 320 acres. It has been construed to mean that a settler is allowed to take only 320 acres including lands to which he had perfected tittle prior to the passage of the law. The general land office has rendered an unofficial opinion that a settler is entitled to take 320 acres under any of the rights he may not have used prior to the passage of the law, regardless of any lands to which he may have perfected title before. That is, any settler who yet has rights under which he could enter 320 acres of public lands after the law went into effect is not barred by reason of the passage of the law from using such rights.

A Historic Painting.

Mr. Wm. Faber has had his famous oil painting, "The Sultana at the Bath," which was on exhibition at the Industrial Exposition in Portland, shipped to this city. It is a historic painting, and is from the brush of F. W. Hardt in 1838. It was originally the property of King William of Wurtemburg and held a place of distinction in the royal gallery. It has been criticized by artists of world-wide reputation and pronounced faultless. At the death of King William the painting came into the possession of Chief General Habermass, and by him was bequeathed to his nephew, Wm. Faber of this city. It is a rare specimen of artistic work, and bears the impress of its 53 years. The painting is valued at $1000.

What Mr. Lanning Says.

Capt. E. J. Lanning, of this city, was in Portland Tuesday and was interviewed by an Oregonian reporter about Pennoyer's presidential boom. Mr. Lanning had more to say about the mines in Linn county, than about Pennoyer's presidential boom His interview was as follows: "I'm anything for Oregon," was the remark of Mr. E. J. Lanning, at the Hotel Perkins last evening. "Being an Albany business man, can't you tell me something Oregonian readers are anxious to know?" "I can show you these bars of gold," the gentleman said, producing two pieces of the metal worth $200 each. "They came from the Quartzville camp, in Linn county. I am interested in those mines. We have a free-milling ore, and it is paying us satisfactory dividends."

Concerning River Improvements.

The other day a Salem Statesman reporter was in conversation with an old river captain on the subject of the contemplated improvement of the channel of the upper Willamette. The captain was asked if he thought the expenditure of six or eight thousand dollars now is his hands for that purpose, by Engineer Handbury would result in any considerable improvement of the channel. The captain said it would if properly used do much good. "A new hull," he said, "has been put under the old snag boat, and now they have a very good boat. If it is operated on the upper river by a practical river man the good done will be felt all along the river. If not, I am afraid it will not do much good. The water is too high now to do much in pulling snags. That boat should have been at work when the water was low. I understand that Major Handbury will have his boat ready to send up in about a week. I hope he will send a practical river man with it—then we can expect to receive some benefit from the expenditure of the government appropriation.

Cheerful News.

That one must go away from home for news seems a true saying. The Ochoco Review has this to say of the Oregon Pacific railroad: B. F. Nichols returned on Wednesday from a tour to Walla Walla and the Willamette valley. While below he interviewed some of the O. P. officials, but says, while he thinks there will be some active work on the O. P. the coming season, he is not prepared to say what the company will do.

Money Is King.

This is a true saying and is the reason that Mueller & Garrett are doing such a rustling business. Their cash figures are taking the lead and their stock is the best. You do not have to pay for any long credit by trading with them as they do business on a strict cash principle.

Severely Burned.

Mr. Bud Cole, who resides resides near Miller's Station, came to Albany yesterday after medical attendance for his little six-months old child, which fell over against the hot andirons, while playing about the fire. The infant was seriously burned about the face and neck.

THE WORK AT YAQUINA.

The Channel is Being Steadily Deepened by the Jetty Construction.

The following extracts are made from the annual report of the chief of engineers to the secretary of war in relation to the improvement of Yaquina bay. This report was made October 4, 1890, and has just been issued:

The usual prevailing depths over the bar at low water, before improvement, were from 7 to 8 feet. Three distinct chanels existed, known as the north, middle and south channels. The south channel was the one mostly used, but was rendered dangerous by the presence of rocks. The middle channel, though free from rocks, was the shoalest of the three. The north channel, besides being long and torturous was so studded with rock as to be considered unnavigable. Owing to the shifting nature of the bar, these channels were constantly changing. The mean rise of the tide was 7.1 feet. The project adopted in 1881 was to run out a dike or jetty on the south side of the entrance, so as to cause the south channel to shoal up and the flow to be deflected northward with a view to opening and maintaining the middle channel with a least depth of 17 feet at high water.

As originally projected, the dike was to start from near low water line and run out into the sea, a distance of 2500 feet, and was to rise to two feet above mean low water. The beach, on the line of the jetty from high-water level, was to be protected by sinking gabbons in the beach with sand heaped over them and by covering the surface with a layer of mattresses and stone.

The stone for the jetty was to be deposited in place from barges, and cribs were to be used if practicable. It was found, however, that cribs could not be used on account of the strong currents and high seas, and that the ocean swell, even in quiet weather, was too great to permit of the use of stone barges. Accordingly the jetty had to be built from the shore end, by carrying the stone out over a tramway, and was begun at high-tide line instead of at low-tide line, thus making the total projected length of the jetty, in 1881, 3700 feet.

In 1884 the jetty was extended shoreward a distance of 316 feet to close up a gap that had been washed out by the sea, making the total projected length of the jetty at that time about 4000 feet.

The present project, adopted in 1888, is to raise the south jetty to full high water without extending it seaward, thus making its total length 3748 feet, and to construct a middle jetty on the north side of the entrance, about 2300 feet in length, extending from the north head along and behind the reef, putting out from the head to a point opposite the end of the south jetty and distant from it about 1000 feet.

Amount expended to June 30, 1889, was $332,631 15.

At that date the south jetty had been completed to the entire length as projected by the board of engineers, and the north jetty to a length of 300 feet, and work was being actively carried on.

The result on the harbor entrance was to keep the bar channel more in one place, and to increase the depth over the bar.

The south channel had been permanently cut off, and the tendency of the waters to go to the north restricted.

Amount expended during the year ending June 30, 1890 was $50,867 12.

The south jetty was built up to full high water without being extended, about 18,640 tons of stone being used.

The north jetty was extended 820 feet in length, 12,980 tons of stone being used on this extension.

The result of all this work has been to cause the channel to run in a direct line out to sea, and to maintain an ordinary depth of eleven to twelve feet at low water.

Appropriations have been made for this improvement amounting to $550,000.

Some Popular Members.

The Salem correspondent of the Oregonian says: Senators Weatherford, of Linn, and Veatch, of Lane counties, and Representative Holmes, of Marion, and Coleman and Jennings, of Lane counties, are looked upon by the farmers of the Willamette valley as especially zealous in their interests. They are in receipt of many expressions of confidence from their constituents, and on Saturday last the Santiam grange, one of the largest and most influential branches of that order in Linn county, passed a series of resolutions indorsing these five members. Senator Weatherford is commended for his bill to exempt homesteads from attachment and execution sales, and for that to regulate the manner of and terms upon which foreign corporations may do business in this state. Senator Veach is warmly praised for his bills to repeal the railroad commission; to regulate freights and fare on railroads and to reduce toll to 25 cents per ton on all freight passing through the locks at Oregon City. Representative Jennings, who opposes all appropriations from the state treasury, is indorsed for "closely guarding the interests of the taxpayers of Oregon." Representative Coleman's bill to reduce the legal rate of interest, and Holmes' anti-railroad commission bill are commended, and the Linn county delegation is urged to support these measures and to oppose any appropriation for the world's fair, or for wagon roads.

GRANGE INSTALLATION.

On Saturday January 24th. Deputy R. A. Irvine, assisted by J. Clem and Miss Crabtree, of the Santiam Grange installed the officers. At 10 o'clock the grange was called to order, after some regular business being done and the installation was completed. Recess being declared the ladies prepared a bountiful repast which was disposed of in true granger style. Being again called to order the audience was entertained by addresses and consideration of some of the proposed legislation. Resolutions were passed opposing the proposed change in assessment laws, also opposing reckless appropriation for wagon roads and opposing any large appropriation for the World's Fair exhibit. The afternoon being short the meeting closed, all feeling that the day was well spent and satisfied that Santiam grange is in charge of a good set of officers with good prospects of their old time enthusiasm.

FRA DIAVOLO KROUKOWSKI.

His Conviction in Russian—Career as a Spendthrift Croesus.

Kroukowski, the Russian Fra Diavolo, who has just been convicted at Loutek, was, in some degree, says a Paris correspondent of the Paris News, a boulevardier, and ten years ago ran the rig here of a spendthrift Croesus. In his youth he was often taken to Paris, and received part of his education in a school in the Rue de Courcelles. His parents belonged to the circle of the late Prince Demidoff, and when Kroukowski ran through his fortune in Paris and at the gay winter resorts of the south of France, he determined to organize a gang of bandits, and to terrorize and plunder the province of Volhynsa.

His first recruits were his men servants, who, perhaps, were slavishly obedient to him, and from habits of docility allowed him to enroll them in a gang having robbery for its object. Peasants were then constrained to accept his leadership. He conceived the scheme as a boy in reading Schiller's "Dio Ranber." "Social Justice" was on their banner, and they pillaged the country houses of the nobles, letting the villages alone. Kroukowski had a genius for disguising himself.

It often enabled him when hemmed in by troops to escape through them. When Russia was made too hot for him he got away to Gallicia to begin afresh. He was there closely pursued. One day he was on the point of being taken. He was in a Russian officer's uniform, and the idea struck him of going to call on the Austrian officer who was pursuing him. As the orderly was taking up his card he jumped on a saddle-horse and galloped off. He was once offered by the father of a fair prisoner a large fortune if he would marry her and reform, but having a passion for a village girl, he refused. It was at a reudezvous with this girl, that he was taken, after fighting like a tiger. As he had never killed any one a capital sentence was not passed, but the prisoner was condemned to penal servitude for life in Siberia.

A Housebuilding Fish.

In Lake Vassa, in the interior of "Darkest Africa," there is a kind of blackfish which every year builds what the natives term a house. In the mud at the bottom of the lake it makes a hole some two or three feet broad, heaping up the mud removed from the hole so as to form a little wall around it. The depth of the hole and the height of the wall measured together make a basin from fifteen twenty inches deep. In this lake within a lake this fish erects a mudhouse, the average-sized specimen measuring fourteen inches across the bottom, rapidly coming to a point in the shape of a broad cone. A hole four inches in diameter, always on the south side, serves as an opening for egress and ingress. A dried speciman of this queer domicile preserved in the Royal Museum at Berlin has two doors, and a partition separating it into two rooms.

To Investigate the Chinese Outrages

A. C. Snow, attorney for the Union Pacific, and two prominent officials of the company visited Milton the the other day to obtain evidence with a view to the arrest of some ringleaders in the crusade against the Chinese in that locality. It is reported that the Chinese will be re-employed as section hands at Milton, and that the people there have been warned that if they countenance another attempt to drive out the Mongolians the trains will whistle and go by their city. The report that several members of the Chinese "firing" party were arrested and brought to Pendleton is incorrect.
