

Morning Daily Herald

ON SALE.

The Daily Herald will be on sale each morning at H. J. Jones' book store, where it can be procured at 5 cents per copy.

JOTTINGS ABOUT TOWN.

A fine line of neckties at Searls. Dr. M. J. Patton was in Salem yesterday.

Dr. G. W. Mason went to Portland yesterday.

Sam May of Harrisburg, was in the city yesterday.

Thomas Holman of Salem, was in the city yesterday.

T. L. Dugger of the Scio Press, was in town yesterday.

Assessor H. S. Williams of Scio, was in the city yesterday.

A dancing party will be given at the armory Saturday evening.

The postoffice at Roseburg was robbed Thursday night of $120.

Mrs. Archie Penschaw has returned from a visit at Pendleton.

An invoice just received of our celebrated "Engineer" shoes at Searls.

The only place you can get the genuine Ludlow shoe is at Searls' shoe store.

The Linn county members in the legislature returned to this city last evening.

Mr. J. C. Crome, traveling salesman for the firm of Palmer & Rey, is in the city.

The ladies of the Episcopal church will give a social Tuesday evening, February 3d, in the opera house, to aid in securing electric lights for the church. Every one is cordially invited.

It is simply child's talk to say that the 700 voters in the Forks of the Santiam, who are asking for a division of the county, are not in earnest about the matter. They are in dead earnest. The rights of the majority should be recognized and the division should be made.

The steamer Salem will begin at once making regular trips on the Upper Willamette. The schedule of time will be found elsewhere in this issue. As healthy competition is the life of trade, the running of an independent boat will, no doubt, prove a benefit to shippers along the river.

A majority of the people of Albany and 700 voters of the Forks of the Santiam are in favor of dividing the county. As large a majority as this should rule. They are at least entitled to a hearing. The right of petition should not be denied by a refusal to introduce the bill, even if it has to be introduced by an outside member. The measure is now before the legislature, and it should pass.

Counterfeit Coins.

If you have occasion to receive a five-dollar gold coin, examine it carefully and see that you are not defrauded, for counterfeit gold pieces of this denomination are pretty generally circulating in the valley and already it is said quite a number have been detected in Salem. The bogus coin is not difficult to recognize, being lighter and duller than the genuine. It also has a dead ring when touched after other metals. The coin is smooth—in fact, seems greasy. But they look very much like gold pieces, and unless one is very much on his guard he may very easily find himself in possession of a base coin.

More Liable Cases.

The Grant's Pass Courier says P. B. Whitney, claim adviser of the Southern Pacific railway company, in company with other officials, were in the city last week endeavoring to make settlements with G. E. Miller and Mrs. Clark, who were injured in the Liable accident. They offered Miller $1,000 which he refused, and has commenced suit against the company for $25,175. Mrs. Clark will also bring action to recover quite a large sum for damages.

For Government Land.

"The Baker City Revue says for the past five years there have been on average 100 final proofs made on preemptions in that county. This means about $20,000 going out of the county each year to pay for government land, says the Revue. Nothing to cry over. Use the land rightly and it will bring back from out the county many times that amount."

Willamette University.

The welfare of this old educational institution of Oregon, is a matter of interest to every patriotic citizen. It is still unsettled as to its future but the citizens of the capital city are bestirring themselves and will undoubtedly make its future success a matter of certainty. It should most assuredly be retained at Salem, where it had its birth and growth to the present time.

She Was a Sound Steeper.

A young lady who returned from abroad to her home in Lebanon on last Saturday, stopped at the railroad hotel in Albany and took dinner; after dinner she lay down on a lounge, and having slept some the previous night she soon fell asleep. On awaking she found that some thief had removed from her finger a seven-dollar ring.—Lebanon Express.

Steamer Salem.

The Steamer Salem an independent boat, will make two trips weekly, leaving Portland on Tuesday and Friday mornings, arriving at Albany Wednesday and Saturday mornings landing at U. P. wharf, freight and passenger rates always the lowest. C. G. RAWLINS, Agent.

Notice to the Public.

Dr. McAlister will treat patients at his residence until further notice, Cor. Ferry and 9th streets.

THE PROPOSED NEW COUNTY.

A Synopsis of the Bill To Be Known As Santiam County.

Following is a synopsis of the bill prepared by the people of the Forks of the Santiam for the division of Linn county, and the formation of Santiam county, the territory which is now completely bounded by the North and South forks of the Santiam river and from the source of the south fork of the Santiam directly east to the eastern boundary line of Linn county, Santiam county to have the usual rights, privileges, offices, and franchises conferred by the new county, the county treasurer to serve until the next general election of county and state officers. Scio is named as the temporary county seat, the permanent county seat being determined at the first general election after the formation of said county. Linn and Santiam counties will elect a joint senator, while Santiam has one representative. The county clerk of Linn county shall within 30 days after this act becomes a law, furnish a certified copy of the duplicate papers embraced in the act, to the county treasurer of Santiam county paying over to Linn county from the first moneys collected the amount of state tax due on said delinquents. All circuit court business that would properly belong a matter of record in the new county shall be transferred to it by the circuit clerk of Linn county. Santiam county shall be attached to the third judicial district. County court shall meet every two months. The county judge shall receive a salary of $300 per annum and the treasurer $150. Santiam county will pay over to Linn county a just proportion of the value of the public property now owned in common. The county judges of Linn and Santiam constituting a board of arbitration on division of county property with power to call to their aid the circuit judge of the third judicial district, their decision being final. A just proportion of the taxes collected for the year 1890 shall also be paid to Santiam county. The making of a real transcript of the records affecting land in Santiam county shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder. The school fund to be divided as per apportionment of school superintendent.

YACQUINA NOTES.

The weather is very fine at present.

Oyster fishing has been quite an item since the rain, giving employment to many on the upper part of the bay.

One of the men working in the rock quarry at Toledo was severely injured one day last week by a rock falling on him.

Mr. Lewis Pante, mate of the O. P. tug Resolute, who skipped out from here leaving a number of unpaid bills, has been heard from in San Francisco.

One of the men, who wrongfully accused a fireman of stealing his watch, has found his tickler, found his mistake, and now carries both the watch and a black eye.

The coasting steamer Mischief, of Yaquina, is moored at Toledo, where she can lay in fresh water, and get rid of the barnacles that so badly collect on wooden vessels.

Oneonta presents quite a shipyard like appearance since the government has built stationary ways there for the purpose of building and repairing vessels. This, together with Parker's sawmill and cannery, gives steady employment to about twenty-five men.

Horse Thieves.

In the north end of Marion county there seems to be considerable trouble with horse thieves. During the past week four horses have been reported as stolen from different parties in the neighborhood of Woodburn. The last theft occurred Wednesday night. Some men went into the barn of Alex. Sherbach, near Townsend's station on the Oregonian railway line, and took a horse out. He rode him to the farm of George Raup, near Brooks, and there exchanged him for one that was in Mr. Raup's barn and then struck out. The thief was traced to Woodburn and there nothing more could be heard of his whereabouts. Mr. Raup has notified the officers in that vicinity and they are keeping their eyes open to accomplish his arrest if possible. It would be well enough for the people in all parts of the country to keep a sharp lookout for these horse appropriators, and lock the stable door before the horse is stolen.

The Agricultural College.

At an open meeting held in Salem on the 26th inst., and attended by representative farmers from Washington, Linn, Polk and Marion counties, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we are opposed to the appropriation of any public money for the State Agricultural college, until the title to land occupied by said college is secured to the state.

Resolved, That we demand a most thorough and impartial investigation of the manner in which the money heretofore appropriated by the legislature, as well as the money furnished by the general government for an experiment station, has been expended.

Good Results.

Our cash system of business is just what every one is now taking advantage of. Our goods are the purest and our prices the lowest. People who pay cash for their goods get the best of their advantage to buy of Mueller & Garrett's cash groceries.

LETTER FROM MRS. DUNWAY.

On a Transcontinental Trip—Tourist and Scribe Takes a Look at the Bad Lands.

Special Correspondence, Copyrighted.

The transcontinental tourist who is fortunate enough to secure the first-class accommodations afforded by one of the un-crowded and not over-heated Pullman coaches, which is sometimes used in connection with the Northern Pacific railway system, sees comparatively little to gratify either a romantic or a practical turn of mind, after leaving the environs of Minneapolis, until he reaches the limiting Missouri river, whose immensely augmented currents had, on some previous occasion, commanded his admiration at Omaha.

It is true that he would see much to interest him in crossing the Dakotas, but the scenery is generally of an even and monotonous character, marked by a tameness in topography which even carries its impress into the widely separated and often sparsely inhabited railway stations. And when, after many hours of patient journeying, the monotony is broken, but not relieved, by his near approach to the now famous Bad Lands, and romance is gratified, practicality is still unsated; for the ragged, rugged, many hued and appropriately christened "Bad Lands" of Dakota's newly enfranchised citizens gives little promise, up to date, of ever becoming the available home of civilization, security or thrift.

By and by, as the bloody red-brown, yellow and black of Big Blunder, the late Sitting Bull and all the rest of the red voters of Dakota have been safely distanced by the thundering train (behind which the Pullman cars switch along like the tip end of a Bad Land rattlesnake, consisting of "sever I rattles and a butt"), the scenes of desolation give way to a sense of admiration as the new state of Montana glides into view, flanked by grandly beautiful ridges of the Rocky Mountains, through whose many canyons, the before-mentioned head-waters of the Missouri have forced their way in by-gone ages, and still come, dashing pell-mell through the deep gorges at times and again, singing peacefully, though never faintly, as they push their winding way through the fertile valleys. Grand and more picturesque grows the scenery as our tourist continues his journey. If he has been disposed to make the most of his opportunities, he has not been content to remain in the Pullman "rattle," but has spent many hours on the rear platform of "button end" of his serpentine chariot, for the fatigue of which he finds full compensation as he emerges from one of the many narrow valleys he has so much admired, and finds himself on an open plain of broad dimensions, to the right of which, and almost under the lee of picturesque mountain ranges, sits Helena, the capital city of Montana, the home of Senator Sanders and Russell Harrison.

The legislature is in session now and the matter in which voters seldom find themselves is vastly amusing those not who, nor being of the elect for electoral in the struggle, though they look on with intense interest while the official combatants are in training for their "fight to a finish." The tarsi of statehood sits uncomfortably away upon the brow of fair Montana. There are not "follicles enough to go around" and the "ons" are so much disturbed over the apparent success of the "ins" and the "outs" themselves, are so much disturbed over the possibility of the "last becoming first," and vice versa, that the state herself, as a state, is asphyxiated by the stagnation of her paramount interests, pending the glacial settlement of the white man, had it ever occurred among factions of the women of Wyoming or Washington, would have been accepted as conclusive proof of a woman's incapacity for self-government on general principles.

But I was speaking a moment ago about Senator Sanders and Russell Harrison, two of the leading lights of busy and gay Helena, both of whom have risen into national prominence through the mutation of politics during the last two years.

Of the latter gentleman, it may be appropriately said in this connection, that he is the son of our worthy president, and the husband of one of the handsomest and most admired belles of the White House. He is also widely known, more or less favorably or unfavorably, according to the partisan bias of those most interested, as a newspaper man of fluctuating activities, with a penchant for controlling the federal patronage of Montana, which alike intensifies his friendships and angers his enemies. Like the mayor of Portland, Or., he is fond of fast horses, and is an exceedingly popular and well-known turpin.

To look at him you would never think of his being the son of our president, any more than to look at his worthy sire, you would think of his being the president himself.

Senator Sanders is one of the luckiest of men. He came to Montana in an early day, when, with keen financial foresight, he at once discovered the wonderful virgin resources of the country; and with logical business sense, he promptly set himself to the task of developing them. As a result of his intellect and enterprise Mr. Sanders became a rich man years before there was an opening for anybody in Montana in a senatorial direction. His handsome residence in Helena has long been the scene of unbounded hospitality, dispensed by his charming wife, who is quite equal to Mrs. Garfield as a hostess. The senator's property consists mainly of lands and mining interests. He likes good horses, but does not take much personal interest in their production or maintenance as he rightfully imagines that the Harrison, Standford and De Lashmuts of the Pacific coast are competent to manage that much admired source of revenue and enjoyment without his aid.

But our tourist had just reached the fair new city of Helena, and was about entering a "bus" or sleigh for a ride to one of the many modern hosteries the capital boasts, when I inadvertently switched him off on a political and personal tangent and carried him to the bottom of the scribbled page and limits of this article; so I reluctantly drop both subject and tourist, and will resume the journey at an early date if the "spirit moves."

ARRIVAL SCOTT DUNWAY.

He didn't shoo. The recent enviable fame acquired with Astorians by A. A. Schenck the famous New York civil engineer recalls a good story. About two years ago before the boom Mr. Schenck being out here professionally for the purpose of a splendid destiny of Astoria as a seaport and quietly invested in 160 acres of land a few miles out, but now in the proposed city limits. Shortly the boom came. Two enterprising young mossbacks pried into the property of the owner which he then at Corvallis. Assuming that he was a "greeny" they wrote him enquiring his price for "timber land" some miles east of Astoria. Schenck, realizing the little game answered that they would prosper by better by selling the timber land completely informed as to the value of city property near Astoria. The young men had to tell the joke on themselves yesterday, when they found who their correspondent was.

Fort Klamath. Representative Herman renewed his efforts of last summer before the war department for the re-establishment of Fort Klamath. In his showing to the secretary he refers to the Indian disturbances in Dakota, and to the significant indications of hostility developed among the Indians of Idaho, the first of the kind among the Pacific coast tribes for some years. He shows that in all the immense area of Oregon, there is not a recognized fort, not a uniformed soldier of the government. Fort Klamath was the last military post and that was abandoned last summer. He says that there are four Indian reservations in his state containing in the aggregate nearly three thousand Indians, and should they be influenced by the spirit now moving among the Indians, it would credit the results that may ensue.

Oregon Cities. Ayer's newspaper annual gives the following census of Oregon cities: Astoria, 8571; Albany, 6927; Athena, 520; Baker City, 2925; Burns, 359; Canyon City, 339; Drain, 500; East Portland, 12,813; Enterprise, 300; Eugene, 5,052; Fossil, 200; Freewater, 300; Harney, 250; Heppner, 720; Hillsboro, 1100; Hood River, 300; Independence, 1495; Jacksonville, 1300; Junction City, 300; Klamath Falls, 1200; La Grande, 2000; Lakeview, 700; Lebanon, 812; Lexington, 400; Linkville, 400; Long Creek, 300; McMinnville, 2384; Milton, 400; Newberg, 512; Pendleton, 3000; Portland, 62,143; Prineville, 500; Roseburg, 2300; Salem, 8,600; The Dalles, 2100; Tillamook, 500; Union, 1163; Vale, 200; Vernonia, 106; Wasco, 300; Weston, 500; Woodburn, 655.
