tanrant.

All around the state the rain is welcomed. In Portland, the Oregonian says everybody is glad to see the rain again. The frosty weather filled all with apprehensions of a spell of winter. Florists and gardeners especially dreaded a cold snap, which, as so many plants and shrubs are putting forth leaves and buds, would have done a great deal of damage. Mr. Wallace the veteran rose-grower, who has several thousand cuttings rooted in the open air, says that as long as the snow keeps off the hills there is no danger of damage from the cold here. He has the tree ferns, palms, banana trees, 1890 the acreage was increased to etc., which adorsed the east yard 1,538 and the product to 42,415 of the Portland, under glass, bales. "Old Erysipelas," the pioneer Wells Fargo back horse is no more. He was probably the oldest horse in Oregon, being 42 years old, as registered by his teeth and the memory of old citizens. He was was to get into the wagon and the owner home as carefully as if "Erysipelas" himself had been there and knew how it was. He was a powerful specimen of horse flesh, and as a reward for faithful services was allowed by his last owner. Mr. F. E. Allen, to spend his last days in peace in a luxurient pasture near town. The driver of Wells Fargo's back, Geo. Stimpson became very much attached to him, and has draped his hat with a neat crape badge for the regulation period as a token of respect for his memory.
