The report of Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization makes a rather formidable-looking volume, but the magnitude of the interests involved fully justify the most exhaustive inquiry. The statistics which accompany the report show very plainly that our moral, social, and industrial progress is being seriously retarded by the thrusting upon us, through various agencies, of large numbers of foreigners who are wholly unfit for American citizenship. It is not enough that our laws should guard against the coming of the pauper and criminal classes. The committee recognize this fact and seek to apply a remedy. It is not the intent to restrict immigration, but to sift it—to separate the desirable from the undesirable immigrants and permit only the landing of those who have the requisite moral and physical qualities. The committee regard the time as far in the future when the country will suffer from an overcrowded population, hence they can not recommend so radical a regulation as consular inspection or educational examination. The report states: "It will be fifty years before statesmanship need apprehend a burden from the influx of desirable aliens, but the time now is, and always will be, when the undesirable should be prohibited a landing in our country." The amendments recommended by the committee to the general laws are: the exclusion of any person likely to become a public charge; any one suffering from a loathsome disease; a polygamist, and any person whose passage has been paid by another, or who is assisted to come, and who can not show clearly and satisfactorily that he does not belong to any of the prohibited classes.

The position taken by Mr. Cleveland upon the silver question, as shown in his letter to the Cooper meeting in New York, receives various comments. Representative Bynum, of Indiana, being asked by a reporter what effect the letter would have, replied: "It is a long time before the next democratic convention." Just so, and in the meantime the democratic managers will hope that Cleveland's utterances will fade from public recollection in the south and west, while the fact that he is a goldbug will be industriously used to assist him in New York and New England.

It looks very much as though Parnell had scored another point against the men in his party who desired to force him out of the leadership. Certainly O'Brien has lost ground by his ludicrous manifesto, that lays him open to attack by its strained language and its abuse of adjectives.
