Prof. E. G. Lorillard, of this city, assisted by Miss Leona Willis, of Salem, Prof. Fallenius, of Portland, and some of Albany's best musical talent, will give a musical concert on Friday evening, February 27, 1891.

E. H. Dunham, until recently superintendent of the Oregon Pacific railroad company, was in the city yesterday. He has purchased a tract of land at Brown's mill, on the eastward extension of the road, and will remove there with his family.

The following officers were elected Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of Uniformed rank No. 4, Columbia division, K. of P.: Jas. F. Hail, Sir Knight captain; Q. E. Propst, first lieutenant; F. N. Wood, second lieutenant; W. M. Parker, Sir Knight guard; C. H. Hayne, Sir Knight warden; P. B. Marshall, guard; C. H. Younger, sentinel; G. W. Hochstetler was the installing officer.

On Friday evening, Feb. 27th, Prof. Lorillard assisted by Miss Leona Willis of Salem, Prof. Fallenius of Portland, and some of Albany's best talent, will give an enjoyable concert. It will be remembered that Miss Willis took part in the "Peak Sisters" entertainment, and through her sweet and cultured voice, won the hearts of her audience. Prof. Fallenius always delights his hearers with his mastery skill, on the French horn. Prof. Lorillard is well and favorably known as a pianist, and as one of his choice selections will be rendered on the occasion, the music loving people of Albany may expect a rare treat.

The Albany college.

The attendance at the Albany college was never larger than it is at present. The number of students enrolled is nearly 200. The president of the institution, Prof. E. N. Condit, states that it is not improbable that a new college building will be erected in the near future. The business department, including short-hand, type writing and a thorough commercial course, is well attended, and the college is in a flourishing condition.

A Crowd.

There was quite a crowd at the Ladies Bazaar yesterday evening. The clearance sale will last but a short time longer.

H. M. S. PINAFORE.

The Boston Gaiety Opera Company Will Present It As a Matinee.

This popular old-time opera will be presented at a matinee at the opera house Saturday afternoon being made by a popular demand by theater goers. The Oregonian says of its rendition by this excellent company:

As presented by the company at the Park last evening, "Pinafore," last night at the Park theater to a much pleased audience, and the familiar strains of the amusing and melodious work were warmly greeted. There is a charm about this hackneyed opera that custom cannot stale. It is a "chestnut" decidedly, but the musical genius of the composer of the score and the keen, satirical wit of the author of the libretto have never received better illustration in any of their later works. There is a breeziness about the theme and an attractiveness about the treatment of it, both from a musical and literary point of view, that will always make the opera attractive to the public.

As presented by the company at the Park last evening, "Pinafore" was received with every manifestation of pleasure. There were occasional evidences of the lack of rehearsal, and many of the choruses and concerted numbers lacked the smoothness that should have characterized them. This, however, will doubtless be remedied ere the close of the week. The individual work of several of the cast was highly commendable.

Mr. Jerry Slattery made a most popular and highly amusing song, Joseph Porter. The Captain Corcoran of William H. Newborough was cleverly acted as a singer; and Ralph Backstraw was admirably smug and acted by Mr. Herman Waldo, although he was evidently suffering from hoarseness. George H. Whitman made an acceptable score in the part of the boatman, as the boatman, was excellent. He sang "He is an Englishman" with fine effect, and received an encore on it.

Pauline Harvey as the captain's daughter, Josephine, was an attractive personality, and sang the score in a manner to evoke a good share of applause. Bessie German acted the part of Buttercup splendidly, and her voice is entirely suited to its requirements. Jessie Terry made a pretty Helene. Susie Barton, in her Quaker costume, was a quaint and interesting character, and the sisters and cousins were well presented by the pretty lady members of the chorus.

Up in the Mines.

There is a deal of excitement up in the Santiam country over the mining prospects. In no less than thirty mining claims prospecting is now going on, and every indication is that early spring will find active work in quite a number of the mines. The Red Bull, the ownership of which is vested in Salem partly, is among the number. It will very likely be operated during the season. It is said two or three mills—probably three—will be put in up in that country in the spring, and should this be the case and a paying ledge is found there will be a genuine boom in Santiam stocks next year. The outlook for this is good. Old miners and prospectors say the mountains of the Santiam are rich in prospect and that development will open the eyes of many. This may be true, and the hope is general that it is.—Statesman.

Sensation at Corvallis.

One evening last week at Corvallis, Mrs. B. Gardiner sent word to George Maddux that she would like to see him in Paddock's grocery store. George had never met the lady and of course was pleased at the opportunity of forming an acquaintance, so he hastened to the spot. His reception was warmer than he had expected, however, for his newly-made acquaintance accused him of making remarks about her and to emphasize her wrath she drew a rattlesnake whip and dealt George a blow on the head. George denied the accusation, and retaliated with a Sullivan Fck under the chin which sent Mrs. Gardiner among Paddock's crockery wares. A pistol was drawn, but the scene closed without any further injury and the lady left the grocery in tears. A woman's virtue is a delicate thing, but in some cases it would take a gatling gun to defend it properly.—Corvallis Times.

Chatanquan Circle.

Tuesday evening the Chatanquan literary and scientific circle held a meeting at the residence of C. E. Wolverton. A short programme was rendered and the Author, Longfellow was discussed. Miss Flora Mason read a sketch of Longfellow's home life and Miss Alice Moses and Miss Hettie Miller each read selections from Longfellow's works. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Wolverton, Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Mason, Prof. and Mrs. E. N. Condit, Mrs. Judge Flinn, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Young, Misses Alice Moses, Flora Mason, Adla George, Annie and Catherine Alticure, Elizabeth Irvine, Hettie Miller, and F. P. Nutting.

CHATAQUAN.

A High Flat Boat.

The O. P. R. Co., have been building a scow, on the flat at Corvallis, to be used as a floating wharf at Salem. Its hull is completed and the huge structure was launched Tuesday says the Times. It is 90 feet long, 32 1/2 wide, 6 deep and draws about ten inches of water. It weighs about 80 tons and contains about 42,000 feet of lumber; it will be floated down to Job's wharf and a warehouse built upon it 70 feet long and 19 feet wide, after which it will be taken to the capital city for service.

COAST NOTES.

Newly Items Obtained from Exchange Throughout the Northwest.

Measles have nearly disappeared from the Umatilla Indian school. There were fifteen cases and one death, which was caused from needless exposure.

Mrs. Johnson, about 35 or 40 years of age, disappeared from The Dalles about a week ago, and her friends have since been unable to find any trace of her.

On a hill above the town of Harney there is a well that flows 50 gallons of water a minute. The people are figuring the advisability of securing the supply for use in the city water works.

M. H. Kriebel, of Corvallis, is an expert taxidermist. His latest is an Angora goat's head that has been beautifully mounted for Col. Hogg, of New York.

Corvallis has a number of would-be pugilists who get in good fighting trim with an extra bowl of big juice. In consequence drunken brawls are not uncommon lately, and in several cases pistols have been carelessly flourished to emphasize their reckless revelry.

A meeting of stockholders of the National bank of Pendleton was held Friday, at which the old board of directors, Jacob Frazer, G. W. Griffith, J. S. McLeod, T. E. Roarke, Frank Fraser, W. M. Beagle and G. A. Hartman were re-elected. The new officers have not yet been chosen.

The people of Astoria are getting somewhat exercised over the disappearance of the city assessment roll. It was at first thought to have been mislaid by accident, but a thorough search has failed to discover the roll, and things are looking very blue for some of the city politicians.

Plenty of snow at last, says the La Grande Chronicle. This means plenty of water, hundreds of men employed in mining, big crops and correspondingly better times, where actual money comes out of the ground than where people have to wait for it to crawl into circulation from the United States treasury.

A consignment of freight has been received for the Indians on the Colville reservation, included thirty carriages, seventy-four spring beds and an organ. We commend this to the consideration of these Eastern philanthropists who may be denying their families the necessities of life in order to make existence more pleasant for the aborigines.

The government snagboat, Corvallis, is working on the upper Willamette. This is good so far as it goes, but it is not what we need on the upper Willamette. We need navigation as far up as this place the year round.

An Open River.

The subject of making the Columbia river a full thoroughfare for the transportation of products, is an all absorbing topic, to which the people are wide awake. It is to be hoped the legislature will not fail to take definite action in the matter. An Idaho paper says: "It would be needless to spend time in enumerating the advantages of an open river. Almost every citizen of Eastern Oregon and Washington can see and appreciate the great changes that would be produced by opening up the Columbia and Snake rivers, so important to increase our water transportation that there are private companies engaged in the work of clearing out rapids and blasting out reefs of rocks in both the Upper Columbia and Snake rivers, in order to use these waterways as their private enterprises. Of course the great obstacles to successful navigation of these rivers is on the Columbia at The Dalles and Cascades, and when these obstacles are overcome the smaller ones will soon be removed. Senator Dolph is working on the plan that will probably be finally adopted, but our people are not willing to wait for twenty or thirty years for a steamboat railway. Let the portage railway be built, and it can be used while the other is being built. At the Cascades the portage railway will do service while the canal and locks are being completed. But let the work on the locks be pushed with all possible speed.

Corvallis Is Satisfied.

Benton county's pet measure, the Agricultural college appropriation bill, came up in the legislature Tuesday. The bill appropriates $25,000 for the purpose of building more buildings to accommodate the growing needs of the college. The bill passed the senate without a dissenting vote. Judge Moore, of Benton, explained the bill to the house in a plain but strong speech, and the bill passed. Besides the $25,000 appropriated for new buildings the bill also contains a $300 appropriation to settle a deficiency now existing.

May Affect The Demand.

A telegram from New York, announces that the hop commission firms of Val Loewi and Pier Bros. had burned out. The losses were great, many bales of hops having been consumed. The loss was 1700 bales of Pacific coast hops 600 of New York, and 1000 of old hops. This loss at this time will be apt to make some demands on the products yet unsold.

An Escaped Lunatic.

A lunatic was found wandering aimlessly at one of the streets of this city yesterday by Chief of Police Hoffman. The man seemed to be harmless. He wore a regulation suit of the state insane asylum, and was placed under arrest. He said his name was Ward, and that he escaped the day before while out after wood. He will be taken to Salem to-day by Mr. Hoffman.

TANGENT NOTES.

TANGENT, Or., Feb. 18, 1891.

Mrs. R. E. Moore and children went on a visit to Waterloo last Saturday, to be some several days.

Mr. Paul Valerius of Bellingham Bay, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

A. W. Moses and family have moved to Tangent.

Mr. Hielt and family, late of the East, are stopping in Tangent at present.

G. W. Compton of Dotyville, made Tangent a flying business trip the first of the week.

Geo. Cochrane says it pays to canvass for the Challenge churn.

There are one or two cases of measles and a case of mumps in Tangent.

Rev. Howard and daughter, Kate, also Miss Minnie McGhee, are attending the revival meeting in Albany.

The M. E. church has organized a Sabbath school here, with Mr. L. B. Luper, superintendent and M. L. Forster, assistant. This makes two Sabbath schools; both meet at 10 o'clock, a. m.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Boston Gaiety Comic Opera Company opened last evening at the Park Theatre to a jammed house in La Mascotte and is one of the best comic opera companies ever seen here.—Portland Oregonian.

Manager Ford, of the Park Theatre, had done well by himself and to the public by bringing the Boston Gaiety Opera Company here.—Portland Evening Telegram.

The Daily News, Vancouver, British Columbia, says: "It is the best attraction ever seen in the Imperial Opera House."

This excellent company will play at the Albany opera house Friday and Saturday evenings, with a Saturday afternoon matinee. Secure your seats early at Will & Link's music store.

LETTER LIST.

The following letters remain in the postoffice at Albany, Or. February 18, 1891, unclaimed for: Gus Dalbridge, Mrs. Robert Evans, Edith Ewing, Ralph Harrington, Harms Harrington, Mrs. Nellie Knapp, Mrs. Olina Langdon, Mrs. Emma Warden, T. K. Marshall, Miss Ella Penington, W. E. P. Stane, Miss Lizzie Slaw, George W. Newton, John Sykes, J. Taylor, Abe Woodcock, John Wait.

The Railway Commission.

It seems the state senate refuses to pass any law giving the railroad commission power to act, and the next best thing perhaps is to adopt Veatch's bill to abolish the commission. That would be taking a step backward in the fight and is exactly what the railroads are working for. It is evident to every observing person, however, that something must be done in the premises. The Salem Journal says: "As strong as the demand for ballot reform comes from all parts of the state and from all parties, the demand that the Oregon railway commission be given that power and efficiency which legislatures in other states unhesitatingly bestow upon it, or be abolished. The demand that it be able to render the people some actual benefits is not a wild one. It is a rational demand and should be heeded by the legislature. The vast interests of producers and shippers all over the state cannot be left to the tender mercies of high-handed, cynical managers serving distant masters. As has been shown in Iowa, Illinois and other states, reductions of local rates, though always resisted by managers, have always been followed by increased volume of business and savings to the vast majority of the people of Oregon practically at the mercy of a Wall street pool headed by Jay Gould. It is absurd to continue a weak and inefficient commission. It is a crime against government to leave the interests of the people of Oregon practically at the mercy of a Wall street pool headed by Jay Gould. It is absurd to continue a weak and inefficient commission. It is a crime against government to leave the power to tax on millions of tons of Oregon goods in the hands of the Jay Gould combine. This power must be vested, so far as Oregon is concerned, in the hands of the commission. A strong, able, intelligent commission, wielding this power intelligently, can alone save Oregon from becoming, as it has in part been in the past, a more trying ground to tempt the voracity of unscrupulous corporationists."

Yaquna Bay.

At Yaquna bay the government works now in progress will greatly improve that port, so as to make it far more valuable to commerce and shipping. The south jetty is already completed. Work has been commenced on the north jetty. It is to be 3600 feet in length, and constructed in a similar manner to the jetty at the mouth of the Columbia. Piles are driven, across these timbers are placed and on them are laid the timbers upon which the rails are spiked. This forms a railroad over which are transported the brush mattresses and rock to be dumped into the water, these practically forming the jetty. After the jetty is built the rails are taken up, as there is no further use for the railroad, and the piles are left to remain as they can.

Taking Advantage.

It appears that the legislators, of our neighbor on the north, are taking advantage of the fact that jute has been placed on the free list, as it has in the latter's bill for the establishment of a jute-bag factory at the Walla Walla penitentiary has been decided on, and $150,000 has been appropriated for that purpose. This is looked upon as a matter of great importance to the people of that state. It will save thousands of hard-earned dollars to the farmers, by furnishing the bags at reduced rates. It will save to that state a million dollars that would go out for the enrichment of another state to that extent.

Penoyer's Fine Hand.

There is food for reflection in the following from the Salem correspondent of the Oregonian: The republicans in the house are greatly excited and incensed over the recent affairs have taken. The policy of the democratic governor of Oregon has been followed exactly by the senate, and Penoyer and all the democrats are as happy as pigs in clover. It is a big democratic victory, not so much at the present time as for the effect it will have on the next election. The governor has almost forgotten his plans to induce the republican party in the eyes of the people succeed. He can already see, in his mind's eye, four years hence, seventy-five democratic members of the legislative assembly voting for Sylvester Penoyer for United States senator. Some enthusiastic friends of the governor hired a brass band to-night and serenaded him for nearly an hour before his office at the capitol. The governor looked out of the window two or three times, but as there is a comic opera troupe in town to-night the brass band could not secure up some small boys so there were no speeches. The republicans are so worked up over the thought that the governor has been playing it low down on them that these are considerable talk of calling a republican caucus to consider the matter to-morrow morning.

The Nation's Indignation.

Oregon is not much of an Indian state after all, though some Eastern people have the notion in their heads that we are always in danger. Mr. Robert Porter has sent us some Indian statistics, computed for 1887, which show that there are 249,273 Indians in the U. S. The following states and territories have more Indians than Oregon: Indian Territory, 74,997; New Mexico, 28,999; South Dakota, 19,845; Arizona, 10,740; California, 15,282; Washington, 10,837; Montana, 10,573; Wisconsin, 8,886; Minnesota, 7,065; N. Dakota, 7,952; Michigan, 6,991; New York, 5,332; Oklahoma, 5,680; Nevada, 4,556. Then comes Oregon with only 4,282. Illinois only has 1; Georgia, 2; Tennessee, 10; and Missouri, 11.
