Not Yet Found.

The latest news concerning the unfortunate young hunter, Tucker, who was lost in the mountains above Galesville, is that the only trace yet found, is where some one had apparently used a gun for a walking cane in the snow. Little hopes are now entertained of his being found. The recent snows in the mountains have obliterated all the tracks that were once found. He doubtless now lies in a snowy grave.

The entire party was tendered a seat made by four young male voices during the evening.

ANOTHER CHAPTER.

The Ascending J. M. Madison Was a Dealer in Counterfeit Money.

A correspondent from Lyons to the Salem Journal contains the following additional chapter to the sensation published a few days ago in the HERALD:

A little less than two months ago, Mr. J. M. Madison was sent to Lyons, to take charge of the telegraph and Wells Fargo offices. He occupied the position of telegraph operator for five weeks, during which time, he with his wife stayed at Smith's hotel, in Melama. He had not been here long when he took J. W. Van Order into his confidence and showed him a scheme where he could take in money hand over fist, it was nothing more nor less than to be an agent for "green goods." Mr. Van Order did not care to engage in the business and spoke of it to a friend who advised secrecy, as the telegraph operator was probably a detective and was working up some case, or on the track of the counterfeit money now being circulated. So they held their peace and awaited developments, which were soon forthcoming. Mr. Madison soon resigned and his place was occupied by Mr. Post. Madison was quite friendly to Mr. Post and told him that the company was rotten and he had better resign, and further, he could show him something with much better financial returns, at the same time asking him to look at some greenbacks which he had, some of them were new while others had a worn and greasy look. He told Mr. Post that these would pass anywhere all right, but were spurious. He told him how to take the new bills, place them in coffee, rub the coffee thoroughly on them, and then fold up so as to counterfeit long use.

Mr. Madison left Mr. Post to think it over while he went to Albany, where he purchased some articles, among them a grip, pair of shoes and a hat. On his return he showed them to Mr. Post, saying that the shoes only cost him 50 cents, though the clerk thought he was charging him $6 all right. He said he had passed $14 of his counterfeit money in one store alone, and again urged Mr. Post to play sickness, as he had done, or to hand in his resignation and go with him to New York, at which place they would embark in the business at little risk and great profit. Madison's correspondence from Albany is interesting. As an inducement to Mr. Post to resign, he tells him that the company are going to "fix him, they have heard that he is not a competent operator."

From four or five letters which your correspondent read, the tenor of them was "We will make things fly." "You're a made man, if you accept my proposal." "No danger whatever, as the plates are the true thing and were stolen from the U. S. treasury department."

Mr. Madison, as shown by the Wells Fargo books, of this time, sent $500 cash to the following address: "W. H. Treatwell, Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York City, N. Y." for which he was to receive $5,000 in green goods. In a private talk, Madison was lamenting the loss of his first consort, who had "got mad and left" so he had to "rustle a new girl" so that his "wife" is merely a decoy also. It is time such rascals came to the end of their rope, and in hopes that no innocent persons may suffer from his roguery this is written. Mr. Post is an excellent young man, recently from Nebraska, and wants to see his predecessor meet his just reward, which should be a long term in the state's prison.

The Umatilla Reservation. The Umatilla Indians do not seem to be just satisfied in the matter of giving up their reservation. The East-Oregonian says that the Indians are holding a big council at the agency to lay to "waw-waw" over the reservation land question. The council was set for Monday, but the Indians did not assemble on account of the unfavorable weather, and postponed their talk until to-day. They are dissatisfied over something the nature of their grievance is not yet being definitely known. It is said that one source of dissatisfaction, however, is that the surplus land will be sold before the allotment is made, although what difference this makes is hard to discover. Doubtless the true facts are that poor Lo, finding that the day is near at hand when he must relinquish his pasture land and hunting grounds, sever his tribal relations and follow the plow, is sad at heart, and is disposed to grumble at the action of the white father. The result of the council will be known to-morrow.

Coming Oregonward. Under this heading an Oregonian reporter writes in glowing terms of immigration to Oregon. He says: "While in the past part of a score of large families have registered at the downtown hotels from points throughout the middle West, all of whom intend to become Oregonians. They are the advance guard of the immigration that is going to pour into Oregon in the next few years before Oregon will be overcovered with humanity, for, while these people have not made a flattering success in the East in the matter of raising crops, they have certainly done remarkably well in the way of producing large families."

La Mascotte at Victoria. The Boston Gaiety Comic Opera company had an immense house at The Victoria, last night, to whose great delight they presented, with numerous alterations and amendments, the well-known favorite opera of "La Mascotte." The audience roared with laughter at many of the local and Pacific Coast "improvements" upon the original "libretto" as prepared by Audran. Miss Harvey who impersonated the Mascotte of the company. She sang with effect as also Messrs. Louis Monico, (Pippo); George Whiteman, (Rocco) and Mr. Waldo, (Frederic). Some of the characters were very satisfactorily rendered, and all present seemed to thoroughly enjoy the programme. The stage appearance was worthy of praise and the spectacular parts were well set.—Victoria News.

A Doctor's Insane. Dr. W. H. O'Dell of Seaside, was brought to this city yesterday, and at his own request was examined as to his sanity before the county court and a board of physicians. He was committed to the asylum for treatment. He is a well educated and successful practitioner, but is a victim of strong drink, which caused his downfall. He seemed almost rational, and he will doubtless recover under the treatment at the asylum, having been treated there before when crazed in the same way.

Damages Suit Settled. The case of B. Beckley, A. Huff, E. L. Hodson and J. Sloan against the Southern Pacific have been settled by compromise. The settlements effected by Beckley, $5,000; Huff, $1,800; Sloan, $1,600 and Hodson, $2,000. Beckley's claim was for $38,250; Huff's $8,000; Hodson's $7,000 and Sloan $6,500.

H. M. S. PINAFORE.

The Boston Gaiety Opera Company Will Present It As a Matinee.

This popular old-time opera will be presented as a matinee at the opera house Saturday afternoon instead of Olivette, the change being made by a popular demand by theater goers. The Oregonian says of its rendition "by this excellent company":

The Boston Gaiety Opera Company produced Gilbert & Sullivan's timely operatic satire "Pinafore," last night at the Park theatre to a much pleased audience, and the familiar strains of the amusing and melodious work were warmly greeted. There is a charm about this hackneyed opera that custom cannot stale. It is a "cheeriest" decidedly, but the musical genius of the composer of the score and the keen, satirical wit of the author of the libretto have never received better illustration in any of their later works. There is a breeziness about the theme and an attractiveness about the treatment of it, both from a musical and literary point of view, that will always make the opera attractive to the public.

As presented by the company at the Park last evening, "Pinafore" was received with every manifestation of pleasure. There were occasional evidences of the lack of rehearsal, and many of the choruses and concerted numbers lacked the smoothness that should have characterized them. This, however, will doubtless be remedied ere the close of the week. The individual work of several of the cast was highly commendable.

Mr. Jerry Slatery made a most pompous and highly amusing sir Joseph Porter. The Captain Corcoran of William H. Newborough was cleverly acted and sung; and Ralph Rackstraw was admirably sung and acted by Mr. Herman Waldo. Although he was evidently suffering from hoarseness, George H. Whiteman made an acceptable Dick Deadey, and Louis Monico, as the boatswain, was excellent. He sang "He is an Englishman" with fine effect, and received an encore in it.

Pauline Harvey as the captain's daughter, Josephine, was an attractive personality, and sang the score in a manner to evoke a good share of applause. Bessie German acted the part of Buttercup splendidly, and her voice is entirely suitable for its requirements. Jessie Terry made a pretty Hester. Miss Barton, in her Quaker costume, was a quaint and taking aunt, and the sisters and cousins were well presented by the pretty lady members of the chorus.

Money Going to Mining. Some very pertinent remarks on the mining situation are found in a recent issue of the Mining and Scientific Review. "The mining outlook for 1891 seems especially favorable, and we may look for a great increase in the production of our mines. If we consider the prospects for remunerative investments, there is none which pays better than a judiciously managed mine. In almost every other line of business competition is very fierce. Old established enterprises, the houses that did a business of a million dollars a year ten years ago, now find that they have to do double that to make the same profit. The same is true of every four or five per cent. most now satisfy investors who a decade ago thought nothing short of 7 per cent worth having. In view of these facts, a great amount of money must seek employment in our mining interests, where the risks are no greater than in other pursuits, and the chances for large returns infinitely better."

Accident on the Oregon Pacific. As the Oregon Pacific train was passing around a curve beyond Lyons, Tuesday, two hand cars, laden with Chinamen, tools, etc., was observed on the track after it was too late to stop the train. The engine struck the cars, knocking them down and embankment. Two Chinamen were slightly hurt, but none were killed.
