Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens of California now looking a tour of Oregon in the interest of temperance. She is highly spoken of wherever she has been. Since entering our state at Ashland, seven hundred have signed the pledge at her meetings, and a number of new unions have been organized. She has put new life and vigor into all the unions she has visited, and many members to their roll. At Lebanon on Monday she added 38 active and 28 honorary members to the union, on Tuesday she organized at Seaside with 25 active and 25 honorary members. She is one of California's most talented women, a bright, enthusiastic speaker. She will lecture to the ladies of the W. C. T. U. of Albany this afternoon at their hall, and in the evening will address a public meeting. The public generally are cordially invited to attend these lectures. Come out and hear her; she should have a good audience. Zoological Pansy Social. On next Friday evening, April 20th, the members of the Y. W. C. T. U. will give a "Zoological Pansy Social" at the W. C. T. U. hall, which promises to be the best social of the season. Everybody is invited to know what it is, and to those we would say, go and see. A small admission fee of 10 cents will be charged at the door, to help the young ladies in their work. The public is cordially invited to attend. It Might Have Been Serious. In attempting to board the south-bound train yesterday noon an elderly gentleman came very nearly being crushed beneath the cars. He was trying to get on the train as it pulled out, and after being half dragged and half running a short distance he fell, and but for the assistance of a passenger, who was on the platform and caught and held him until the train was brought to a halt, he would surely have been mangled beneath the car wheels. Horses Ordered Killed. The Jefferson Review says that W. L. Sisson, stock inspector for this county, has received an order from the state animal commission for the slaughter of four horses found to be infected with nasal gland. Two of them belong to a man named John Williams, a resident of Linn county, but who comes to Jefferson to trade. One horse was 11 years old and the other, 8, and he was allowed $20 each for them. Scarcely Drowned. A few days ago near Lebanon, Mr. A. Cowan, father of Mayor J. L. Cowan of this city, in attempting to cross a tributary of the Santiam on horseback, found himself and horse in swimming water. The horse became frightened and Mr. Cowan narrowly escaped being drowned. The Pendleton board of trade is discussing the feasibility of establishing a meat packing house in that city.

OREGON'S OPPORTUNITIES.

Oregon's opportunities are in the infancy of their development. The people of this state hardly appreciate what can be done, especially in agricultural lines. The Portland Telegram of Wednesday says that a prominent Oregon fruit grower who is an authority on fruit, but who wishes his name withheld because of his modesty, expressed himself as follows: "For the next twenty years fruit-raising must be highly profitable in this state. The certainty of very large profits for twenty years is based upon the fact that Oregon does not begin to raise enough fruit for home consumption. Oregon should be supplying the mining camps of Washington, Idaho and Montana, as well as the cities along Puget Sound, with cheap fruit, but as a matter of fact nine-tenths of the fruit supply of the sections named comes from California, making several days' difference in the age of green fruit, as well as in the cost of freight charges upon all kinds. "There is no danger of overproduction of fruit in Oregon. Do what we may, we can hardly bring the supply up to the home demand for twenty years, while it will take much longer to raise enough to supply the markets which are served by right of location and quick transportation service. "We must not overlook one point of paramount importance, and that is the quality of our fruit. There are thousands of acres of orchards in this state which have been neglected for years, and are now fit for nothing except firewood. The bulk of these are covered with trees of inferior varieties, and it would be a blessing to the state if they were cut down and burned. Their fruit reaches the market and serves to condemn Oregon as a fruit country in the eyes of many who are ignorant of the fact that it came from moss-grown orchards. "Oregon will be seen and heard at the World's fair. The failure of the legislative appropriation will not affect in any way the grand showing which this state will make in Chicago. At the proper time a popular subscription will be taken up. The rich will give him dollars, the well-to-do will give dollars and the poorer will give nickels and pennies, so that every man, woman and child in the state will be a contributor. The fund will be ample, and Oregon will be so well advertised that every acre of land in the state will double in value in a year in which the great fair is held. "The matter is in the hands of the proper authorities, and when the signs come right, they will move. It is not out of place, however, to offer the suggestion that one feature of the exhibit should be an immense display of round-shouldered, grizzly of beard, sleepy-eyed, with great webbed and back overgrown with moss. "Appropriately placed and well advertised, it would attract wide attention. Other states have moss-covered trees and grizzly men in this way, and if we were to have such a statue at the fair, with a label which would show it as a representative of an almost extinct race, the advertisement would do the state good. Something like this should be devised to show the late legislature how its memory is revered in Oregon." IN LANE COUNTY. A Trotting Association—Attempt to Burgle Stabbing Affair. Eugene Register. The Lane County Driving Association met last Wednesday evening in the address of Dr. Harris, and elected a board of directors, consisting of Dr. Harris, Dr. Watters, S. H. Friendly, G. R. Christian and A. E. Gallagher. Dr. Harris President, Dr. Watters vice president, M. Levinger secretary, and H. C. Humphreys treasurer. The rules of the National Trotting Association were adopted to govern all trotting contests, and those of the Pacific Blood Horse Association for running contests. When the floor of the two story building on the Christian corner was being laid up the workmen were surprised to find a tunnel beneath it just large enough to admit a man's body. The tunnel extended about half way under the building. The supposition is that some one had tunneled under the building with the intention of breaking into the same but for some reason had been frightened away and ceased work. The tunnel started from under the sidewalk in front. Ed Branton and James Allen, of Waltherville, got into an altercation last week over Allen crossing Branton's farm but contrary to his wishes, Allen attempted to cross the farm but Branton stopped him. Allen drew a pocket knife and inflicted painful, though not dangerous wounds on Branton. He was arrested and brought before Justice Kinsey and bound over to a jail Wednesday the 15th, with bonds fixed at $50, which he furnished. Mrs. Stevens, national organizer of the W. C. T. U., organized a society at Springfield last week, with the following officers: Mrs. H. F. Miller, President; Mrs. P. J. Bowerman, Vice President; Clara Fonger, Sec; Miss E. Dodd, Cor. Sec; Mrs. W. Grant, Treasurer; Mrs. M. J. Jagers, Supt. of Local Legion; Miss Rosa Bowerman, Supt. of young women work; Mrs. J. J. Poill, Supt. of Sabbath observance. The Ashland millinery company is on the verge of liquidation, owing to a lack of interest among its members.

FROM THE METROPOLIS.

How Hard Times is Talked—Waterway Conventions, Etc. PORTLAND, April 13. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD. The waterway convention has had an interesting meeting and passed resolutions which if carried out and in practice would be a blessing to the sturdy yeomanry of the eastern empire (tributary to the great river of the west, but talk is cheap, and nothing but concentrated action and determined perseverance will accomplish the desired result. To wait for Uncle Sam to open the river is sheer nonsense. The Cascade locks is a monument of U. S. enterprise, if it were not built of everlasting stone it would perish and crumble into a worthless pile long before it could ever be finished at the rate it has so far been progressing. Talk of hard times on this coast. Is there any grounds for it? Does not every artery of trade pulsate with activity? Wheat bears a good price, cattle, sheep and wool are profitable productions. Money is plentiful but slow to seek investment owing to the cramped condition of a few speculative money lenders of the East. Here in Portland it is being talked of, but I notice there are more fine and costly buildings being erected, more commodious and even more luxuriant residences being built, more projects for general improvement than has ever before been inaugurated in one season since Portland was a city. Is it hard times that brings this all about? Or is it the natural outgrowth of a thriving and prosperous people? Do not know how many miles of street car or motor lines now traverse the streets of this city, or branch in every direction to the remotest suburbs, but I do know you can travel in every direction for miles for the paltry price of a few cents. Do not know how many various lines, and still they are being extended mile by mile as the service of the community demands it. If this is not an evidence of prosperity, then what does it mean? A great many people come by Portland and are surprised to find in their verbiage that lots that were obtainable a few years ago for one, two or three hundred dollars, ought not to be very much higher now, yet they are horrified to find them away up in the thousands. And they return to their good old homes in the valley by their hard earned twenties jingling in their capacious pockets, wasting away as their beautifully milled edges grind one against the other in unproductive idleness and the gray haired old farmer looks at them again and again because he failed to invest in corner lots when they were low. Oh no, property does not advance in value when times are hard. Men do not build costly edifices and employ thousands of artisans and outlays of many thousands of golden dollars each week when there is no prospective business for the future, no reproductive hope for business in times to come, not much. The hoarded thousands of the past years will find free circulation and reach the architect and contractor down to the day laborer. None need be idle nor in want of cash. The consolidation question is the topic of interest to the property owners of this city, and when the cities of the east side have been swallowed up by Portland and become the subjects of one municipality, then it is said this city will be recognized as a place of some importance in the eyes of San Francisco and the Sound cities. With the numerous discoveries of rich silver and gold producing lodes, the boundless timber lands, the hidden wealth of coal an iron enough to attract the capitalists of the world, and give remunerative employment to many thousands of laborers, it requires no superiority of intellect, nor a man whose prophetic ken scans the dim future to assure us that Oregon will be peerless in the galaxy of states. M. W. C. T. U. ANNIVERSARY. The following is the programme of exercises to be rendered at the W. C. T. U. hall on Friday evening, April 17th: Music—Orchestra. Scripture reading. Prayer.
